REED HEADS NEW ORGANIZATION TO FIGHT ROOSEVELT

Sterling E. Edmunds of St. Louis Made Secretary of 'National Jeffersonian Democrats.'

NO INDORSEMENT OF ANY CANDIDATE

Plan to Send Speakers Into Every State and 'Get Money From People Who Have It.'

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—A new political organization, to be known as "The National Jeffersonian Democrats," was formed here today in an effort to rally anti-New Deal Democrats into active opposition to the re-election of President Roosevelt. The conference, however, did not indorse any other candidate.

At the head of the organization is James A. Reed, former Senator from Missouri, who announced plans for sending speakers "into every state in the Union" and for machinery roughly paralleling that of the two major parties. He emphasized that the organization was not a "new party."

The organization was effected at a meeting attended by more than 40 Democrats opposed to President Roosevelt. Some of those who participated have publicly declared their support of Alf M. Landon, Republican nominee, but Southern opposition developed and there was no outright group indorsement of the Kansas Governor.

Declaration Drawn Up.

A declaration of principles drawn up by a committee charged the Roosevelt administration had disclosed "a perversion of heart and spirit which can neither be remedied nor condoned." It added: "We will, therefore, not support for reelection the candidates of the Philadelphia convention for President and Vice-President, and we call upon all loyal and sincere Democrats to consider the question of their duty to the country in the approaching election with the same earnestness that has guided our deliberations—joining with us if they feel that our conclusions are sound and our anxiety for the future of our party is justified."

The declaration of principles accused President Roosevelt of "turning his back upon the party platform upon which he was elected," and his administration of "exerting itself in every conceivable way to strike down the beneficient structure of democratic government and to substitute for it a collectivist state, replacing the doctrine of democracy with the tenets and teachings of a blended communism and socialism."

Speakers and Money.

Leadership for the meeting here was furnished by Reed, Joseph B. Ely, former Governor of Massachusetts; Bainbridge Colby, Secretary of State under President Wilson, and Henry Breckinridge, who opposed Mr. Roosevelt in several primary elections.

Asked what the organization's campaign tactics would be, Sterling E. Edmunds of St. Louis, who was named secretary, said he and his colleagues would wage an intensive campaign against Roosevelt, leaving it to the individual judgment of their followers whether to vote for Landon or stay at home on election day.

In addition to Reed as national chairman and Edmunds as secretary, a treasurer is to be appointed, Edmunds said, and two national committeemen from each State. Those who attended the meeting have pledged themselves, he added, to begin the formation of autonomous state organizations at once. Edmunds said he expected there would be a long list of speakers for the organization, headed by Reed, Ely, Colby and Breckinridge. Political rallies and mass meetings will be held in many places, he added.

Asked how the organization would be financed, Reed said: "We'll have to get money from people who have it."

DIRIGIBLE HINDENBURG MAKES DELAYED LAKEHURST LANDING

Cruises Along East Coast From 10 a. m. Till Night, Waiting for Wind to Abate.

By the Associated Press.

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8.—The German airship Hindenburg landed at the Navy air station late today after cruising over Washington, Baltimore and Philadelphia much of the day while waiting for a gusty wind to die. The dirigible has traveled 5060 miles in 67 hours, 31 minutes from Frankfort, Germany, by way of the Azores.

The Zeppelin was moored at 6:05 p. m. Commander C. E. Rosendahl, in charge of the station, said the airship left the field after first arriving at 10 a. m. because the wind was swinging erratically from southeast to northeast, making the handling of the Hindenburg perilous on the ground.

The dirigible arrived over the air station at 10 a. m. today but informed station officers by radio it would remain in the air until night.

The dirigible carried a capacity passenger load, including Max Schmeling, who is returning to prepare for his championship fight with Jimmy Braddock, and Douglas Fairbanks and his wife, the former Lady Sylvia Ashley.

The Hindenburg cruised over Washington and Baltimore this afternoon. It passed over the Capitol dome at a low altitude, circled the Washington monument, dipped over the White House, then swung back to the north. In circling the 555-foot monument the ship was below the tip.

U. S.-MOSCOW FLYERS FORCED TO LAND AT BELLA BELLA, B. C.

Poor Visibility Halts Trip to Juneau, Alaska, Amtorg Trading Agency Reports.

SEATTLE, Aug. 8.—The Russian flyers, Sigismund Levanevsky and Victor Levchenko, on their way from California to Moscow via Alaska, were forced down by poor visibility at Bella Bella, B. C., at 3 p. m. today, they reported to Amtorg, Soviet trading agency here, tonight.

They planned to resume their hop to Juneau, Alaska, tomorrow morning, weather permitting, an Amtorg representative said. The Russians, in a new low-winged Vultee monoplane, took off from the sand point naval air base on Lake Washington here today at 10:26 a. m. They had hoped to reach Juneau, 900 miles away, by 5 p. m.

Bella Bella is more than 300 miles north of Vancouver, B. C., in an isolated costal region and has no telephone, telegraph or wireless connection with the outside world.

British Pray for End of Rain.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—British farmers prayed today for sunshine while those of the United States drouth area prayed for rain. Kentish churches called prayer services tomorrow for a cessation of continued rains that threaten ruin of the hops crop from mildew.

A permanent registration bill for St. Louis, being completed by the Legislative Committee of the Young Men's Division of the Chamber of Commerce after three years' research and study of such legislation in other states, has been offered to Mayor Dickmann for submission to a bi-partisan committee which he announced he would appoint to draft a bill for introduction in the Legislature next January. The bill is designed to prevent fraud and reduce registration costs.

Since St. Louis officials, although avowing their approval of permanent registration, succeeded in preventing passage of the Legislative Committee's bill at the 1935 legislative session, the committee has attempted unsuccessfully to interest its political critics in drafting a bill which would meet valid objections. Quite willing two years ago to tell the House Elections Committee that the pending bill was "impracticable" and "unnecessary," and to object that the measure had been drafted without consulting them, the politicians have ignored repeated invitations of the Legislative Committee to confer with it.

Hannegan's Opposition.

Leading opposition to the bill was Robert E. Hannegan, $3000-a-year lobbyist of the City of St. Louis, representative of the Dickmann administration and then chairman of the Democratic City Committee. With Mayor Dickmann again in control of a majority of the City Committee as the result of last Tuesday's election, it has been taken for granted that Hannegan, unseated as chairman by a previous anti-Dickmann majority, will be reinstated.

Under the permanent registration law now being drafted, which includes provision for a census each two years as a check on registration, the Board of Election Commissioners would have been spared its recent confusion when deputy commissioners, after an official recanvass following exposure by the Post-Dispatch of wholesale registration padding, reported as "not found" nine of 12 persons registered from the two-family flat at 4143 San Francisco avenue, where Hannegan lives upstairs. Hannegan had two reinstated. Three others residing at other places had used the Hannegan address or that of the downstairs flat as a voting address, and two others found to be residing in St. Louis County also were shown to be registered in the county.

Complaint in 1935.

One of Hannegan's complaints when he appeared before the House Elections Committee to oppose the bill in 1935 was that it appeared to him to have been drafted by persons not "thoroughly familiar with electorial processes."

He objected that he, then Democratic City Committee chairman, Chairman Fred W. Pape of the Republican City Committee and Chairman James A. Waechter of the Board of Election Commissioners, as experts, had not been consulted before the bill was introduced.

Another section which received Hannegan's disapproval was that requiring hotels and flophouses to make sworn statements of all persons residing there before elections and state the period of their residence. The bill permitted the removal of names of persons not so reported after they received notice of challenge. A section in the present law requiring reports of residents has been shown by the Post-Dispatch to have been ignored by numerous hotels without the taking of any action by the Board of Election Commissioners.

Waechter and Charles L. Moore, secretary and a Republican member of the Election Board, also appeared before the Legislature in opposition to the bill.

"City Free From Frauds."

Waechter, voicing objections to the bill before the committee, at one point said: "The argument has been made that permanent registration would lessen the chances for fraudulent registration. St Louis is as free from election frauds as any large city in the country. We had a grand jury spend three months investigating registrations and elections in St. Louis last year and after the November election there wasn't a single complaint of fraud."

Waechter said he would draft a suitable and workable bill to be introduced as a substitute for the pending bill. Mayor Dickmann declined to comment on the suggestion of the League of Women Voters, which was working with the Young Men's Chamber of Commerce, that the bill might be amended to meet objections of his representative. He said he did not wish to discuss the question publicly until he had talked to Hannegan. Hannegan said he would not take it up with the Mayor unless the Mayor broached the subject.

Later Mayor Dickmann answered the suggestion of the League of Women Voters. Yes, he was "in

DRIVER CAUGHT IN CHASE AFTER AUTO KILLS MAN

Forced to Curb by Motorist Who Says He Saw Him Run Down Unidentified Pedestrian.

RADIATOR OF HIS AUTO DENTED IN

Prisoner Who Says He Is Allen Rust, 26, Quoted as Denying Knowledge of Accident.

An unidentified man, apparently about 28 years old, was killed by an automobile, which sped away, as he was crossing Washington boulevard, just east of Garrison avenue, about 9:45 o'clock last night. He was pronounced dead of a fractured skull at City Hospital.

A passing motorist, Peter DeFiore, 2910 Olive street, who had witnessed the accident, chased the automobile west on Washington and north on Cardinal avenue to Lucas avenue, where he forced the other car to the curb.

The driver was arrested there by police, who had been called to the scene, and was identified as the driver of the automobile which struck the man by DeFiore and Hughie Epperson, Negro, 2723 Stoddard street. Epperson said he saw the accident and had run after the automobile.

The driver was taken to the Laclede Avenue Station, where he told police he was Allen Rust, 26, and resided at 910 North Kingshighway boulevard. Police quoted him as saying he knew nothing of the accident, and that he was unable to explain a dent in the radiator and a smashed radiator cap on the car he had been driving.

Police said he admitted that he had been drinking beer before the accident occurred. He said he was employed as a laborer and that the automobile belonged to his employer. He was identified by five witnesses, all of whom said he was driving between 30 and 35 miles an hour.

The dead man was described as being 6 feet tall and weighing about 180 pounds. He had brown wavy hair, blue eyes and was wearing blue seersucker trousers, low black shoes and a white undershirt.

PLANE MISSING FOR YEAR FOUND BURNED IN ALASKA

Prospectors Discover Bones in Wreckage, Indicating Pilot and Three Passengers Perished.

By the Associated Press,

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 8.—John Hadjukovich, a prospector, flew here today with word that he and two companions had found the Arthur F. Hines plane, missing with Pilot Hines and three passengers for nearly a year, on a barren mountain range 175 miles east of here. He had the motor plate from the plane to confirm his story.

Hadjukovich said the plane had burned and only a few bones remained in the wreckage.

Hines, Mr. and Mrs. John Lonz and Alton Nordale, all of Fairbanks, took off from Dawson Aug. 19, 1935, for Fairbanks. When they failed to arrive an extensive airplane search was made but no trace of them was found.

Hadjukovich said he, Bill McConn and Carl Tweiten found the plane at about 5000 feet elevation on the range rising from the Healy River, a tributary of the Tanana.

1,152,000 PERSONS GET AID UNDER SOCIAL SECURITY ACT

Chairman Winant of Board Says $47,000,000 Has Been Paid Out in Year.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—On the first anniversary of the Federal Social Security Act, its administrative board said today 1,152,000 aged and unfortunate persons, in every state, are on its assistance rolls.

John G. Winant, chairman of the Social Security board, and former Republican Governor of New Hampshire, said more than $47,000,000 had been paid to the aged and blind and to dependent children, and predicted 26,000,000 workers would be covered by the old-age retirement program next year.

To date, Winant reported, $41,420,000 has been paid to 36 states to help finance old-age benefits to 896,260 persons. Payments to 21 states for aid to the blind totaled $2,066,000, with 25,970 estimated to be on the assistance rolls. Federal benefits paid to 21 states for dependent children totaled $4,323,576, to aid 230,543.

EXPERTS TESTIFY AIRLINER CRASHED AT FULL SPEED

Two Tell Federal Investigators This Indicates Motor Trouble Did Not Cause Accident.

STORY OF DISTRESS MESSAGE ON RADIO

H. S. Ewing, Amateur Operator, Says He Heard: 'Turn on Field Lights—Emergency.'

Two expert witnesses, who examined the propellers of the wrecked airliner City of Memphis; the pilot who flew the twin-engined monoplane from New Orleans to St. Louis; and the field dispatcher who cleared it on its takeoff for Chicago, testified yesterday afternoon and last night in the Bureau of Air Commerce inquiry into the crash, which killed its eight occupants, three miles northwest of Lambert-St. Louis Field, just after the start for Chicago Wednesday night. The hearing, held at the airport administration building, adjourned at 10 p. m. until 9:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Other witnesses were the president of the Chicago & Southern Air Lines, and the maintenance foreman who inspected the $50,000 plane before its start from New Orleans. The statements of the witnesses thus far have not appeared to answer the chief question raised by the official investigators, namely: Why did Chief Pilot Carl Zeier and Co-Pilot Russell Mossman turn back toward the airport less than five minutes after they had taken off for Chicago at 9:55 p. m. with their six passengers?

Amateur Radio Operator's Story.

An amateur radio operator, H. S. Ewing, 7332 Grand drive, St. Louis County, testified to hearing an apparent distress call, the source of which was not known to him, at about the time of the accident.

Ewing, whose home is about four miles southeast of the field, testified that he spent much of his leisure in listening over a short wave radio set to communications between planes and the airport.

About 10 p. m. Wednesday, Ewing said, he was changing the setting of his dial to conform to the change from day to night broadcasting frequencies at the airport, when he picked up a message at a frequency on which he had not previously heard a broadcast, about 5300 kilocycles.

"An excited voice," Ewing testified, "said distinctly, 'Turn on the field lights—emergency.'

"Then the message was repeated in slightly different form. 'Please turn on the field lights for a landing.' I believe he said 'a forced landing' or 'an emergency landing.'"

Call at Unusual Point on Dial.

Ewing's testimony made it plain that he received the message while his dial was at a point other than that at which he usually listened to communications between planes and the field. The City of Memphis transmitter was set on 5682.5 kilocycles.

The officials of the line said yesterday that inspection of the plane's radio equipment established that it was operating at the time of the crash. Switches beside the seats of both the pilot and co-pilot showed the regular radio equipment for receiving the directional beam, was being used, since the switches for an auxiliary receiving set were off.

The regular radio receiving equipment was demolished but the auxiliary set, located further back in the fuselage, operated when tested after its removal from the wreckage, it was said, indicating that it was in order before the crash if it had been needed. The antenna was found in the wreckage, officials said, and thus it appeared that there was no obstacle to communication.

Mechanical Experts Testify.

The testimony of the two mechanical experts was to the effect that the engines were running in full power at the time of the crash. This was taken as indicating that motor trouble was not the cause of the accident.

C. F. Schory of Manchester, Conn., service manager of the Hamilton Standard Propeller Co., told of examining the broken propellers. "The left propeller was twisted and the shaft of the engine bent considerably," he said. "The threaded section was broken at the end. The appearance of the hub indicated great force at the time of the impact. The rear cone of the right

FRENCH DEPUTIES VOTE FOR DEBT MORATORIUM

Would Relieve Small Business Men—Similar Bill as to Farmers Pending.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—Debt relief for small business men for the remainder of the year was voted tonight by the French Chamber of Deputies. A two-year debt suspension plan for farmers is pending in Parliament.

Large corporations and banks are not included in the Socialist reform measure. The bill, intended to aid a large section of French business and industry, extends to small enterprises and individuals a virtual moratorium on rent payments and promissory notes given in payment of business obligations until Dec. 31. At that time Premier Leon Blum intendes to have a lending plan in operation to assist them in carrying on their business.

The measure was introduced by Blum after clamor by small merchants and manufacturers, already hard hit by depression, that they would suffer heavily from new social laws enlarging payrolls and imposing other restrictions which they said would increase the cost of doing business.

ESKIMOS IN FAMINE AREA STARTING TO EAT SLED DOGS

Authority to Drive Reindeer Toward Alaskan District Again Denied; Food Sent by Boat.

By the Associated Press.

POINT BARROW, Alaska, Aug. 8.—Hungry Eskimos east of here are beginning to eat their sled dogs, Dr. Henry W. Greist, Presbyterian medical missionary, reported today. He said Frank Daugherty, Barrow reindeer supervisor, again had requested and been refused authority to drive 3000 reindeer to the Barter Island district where the Eskimos are reported near starvation. Greist told of one family killing, one by one, their dog team, for food.

Reports from elsewhere in Alaska said there was a shortage of forage for the deer which have survived raids by wolf bands.

The coast guard dispatched the cutter Northland from Nome today on an emergency food carrying cruise to Barrow. In Seattle, Jacob R. Ummel, purchasing agent for the Department of the Interior said he was dispatching 100 tons of food from the surplus commodities division of Federal relief, on the steamship Derblay which sails for Nome Aug. 15.

ITALY PROTESTS TO SPAIN ON KILLING OF TWO NATIONALS

Rome Declares It Holds Leftist Government Responsible for Deaths of Italians.

ROME, Aug. 8. — Two Italians have been killed in Spain, it was officially announced tonight, and formal protests have been made holding the Leftist Spanish Government responsible.

Edoardo Marcelli, it was charged, was killed "barbarously in his own home" Aug. 5. The name of the other Italian was given as Dogliotti. A third named Gicaomelli was seriously wounded.

First representations were made by the Italian consul in Barcelona, followed by a protest from the Italian embassy in Madrid.

TRAGEDY AND HEROISM IN SPAIN'S CIVIL WAR

Correspondent Tells What He Saw on Visit to Leftist Lines in Mountains.

By H. E. KNOBLAUGH,
Associated Press Correspondent.

GUADARRAMA BATTLEFIELD, GOVERNMENT MILITARY HEADQUARTERS, Aug. 8.—Spain's bitterest civil war, with brother against brother, is producing an endless list of incidents of heroism, sorrow and sacrifice.

I saw tragic scenes on the shell-scarred battlefields in this mountain war zone where thousands of young Spaniards are giving their lives for a political cause.

During a day at the front lines I went through hospitals where Red Cross surgeons tried to save lives which guns on both sides seek to extinguish.

I went today within range of Rebel fire to watch the Government forces defending the capital.

Rebel guns, aimed by instructors of the Segovia Military School, poured a withering fire into the ranks of the Madrid Liberal troops from just beyond the crest of the Sierras. Shrapnel burst on every side, killing and maiming.

Cannon Shot for Cannon Shot.

Men with the guns of the Government artillery showed reckless courage. Often their officers called them foolhardy. They stood by their guns answering the hostile fire, shot for shot. As men fell, reserves from the regular army and newly enlisted young militiamen stepped forward to fi their places.

Ambulances, often racing through a barrage of fire, took wounded back to El Escorial Hospital base. There were long rows of closely packed cots. One dying young soldier, with a bullet in his lung, took a towel between his teeth to gag himself against an involuntary cry of pain.

"I want to die bravely," he whispered. "Save your morphine injections for others who need it more."

Another, a young Communist with part of his abdomen shot away, asked to sit up.

"Why can't I move my left arm?" he whimpered. "It feels dead. See, I can move the fingers of my right hand. Send me a Communist nurse. I want a comrade to visit me. Then I'll get well."

Calls for Sweetheart.

One, whom the surgeon said has little hope of recovery, pleaded, "please send for my sweetheart. I want her at my side when I go. I die willingly. My only hope is that the Fascists never reach Madrid."

Many of these young men and women—for there are Communist girls at the front with rifles—become dazed from shell shock.

Some of them refuse food and drink when they are brought back to the hospital. Some, with their ear drums burst by the concussion of exploding shells, wander about aimlessly.

In the little Escorial Cemetery, where four usually are buried in the same small grave, there is a steady procession of mothers, daughters, wives and sweethearts waiting to identify their dead.

Bodies must be buried quickly.

MARCH ON MADRID BY REBEL CHIEF REPORTED

LEFTISTS IN NORTH SHIFT TO OFFENSIVE

Report Gains Against Mola's Troops in Mountain Fighting and Deny Fascist Commander Has Left Africa.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Aug. 8.—Moroccan rebel troops were said to be marching northward toward Madrid tonight. The Fascist commander-in-chief, Francisco Franco, was reported to be at their head.

Word of the advance, reaching the capital from rebel headquarters in Burgos, to the north, hastened Government attacks on three fronts.

Leftist authorities said Fascists were losing all hopes of winning the right. They insisted Gen. Franco was still in Spanish Morocco, attempting to land more troops on the Spanish peninsula. Already he has brought, by ship and plane, 8000 soldiers from Africa to Spain, it was estimated.

In some rebel quarters it was feared Loyalist success at Algeciras, southern seaport burned during a Government bombardment yesterday, might destroy defenses created to protect the transportation of troops, especially since the rebel gunboat Dato was burned defending the city.

Government Bulletins.

While no reports were received of major Leftist activities in the Bay of Biscay section held by rebels, attacks in the Province of Huesca, between Zaragoza and the French border, were mentioned in Government dispatches.

All towns around the capital of Huesca were said to have been occupied.

In the southwestern Province of Badajoz, the Government said it had suppressed a Fascist revolt led by an assault guard named Fernando Acosta, who lined up 30 Civil Guards and took them to a barracks where they were armed and joined by about 100 other men.

Leftists learned of their plans and surrounded the stronghold while airplanes dropped bombs. After the building was destroyed, the Government reported, the rebels surrendered.

At Burgos, Rightists said their forces repulsed a Loyalist attack on the community of Badajoz and took many prisoners.

Steady advances in the mountains between Madrid and the rebel-held territory toward the Bay of Biscay were described by the Government, which said it had abandoned the idea of a passive defense for the positive tactics of attack.

Parliament Suspended.

The Government suspended the Cortes (Parliament) indefinitely, and Leftists renewed the drive against political enemies in Madrid. Among 400 jailed on suspicion of Fascist activities was Melquiades Algarez, former Minister of Justice.

Diplomats were dismissed, and in towns held by Loyalists hundreds suspected of Fascist leanings were arrested.

Nevertheless, Jesus Hernandez, Communist deputy, denied the object of the people was the establishment of a dictatorship by the proletariat.

"It is absolutely false to say there is a proletarian movement afoot aiming at organization of the revolution in such a fashion as to establish a proletarian dictatorship," he insisted.

The confiscation of religious property and hoarded money continued, and workers took over additional businesses in Madrid.

The Government reported an expeditionary force had landed on Formentera, one of the Balearic islands, and that capture of the neighboring island of Ibiza was imminent.

The report said Formentera was easily taken, Fascist authorities were in prison and the military commandant of Ibiza was ordered to surrender.

Dispatches from Alemira, Mediterranean port, said railroad employes were constructing armored

FRANCE FORBIDS EXPORT OF WAR GOODS TO SPAIN

SENATE FOR ARMS NATIONALIZATION

Portugal Agrees to Non-Interference Resolution, Ninth Nation to Join in Understanding.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—The French Government prohibited today all exports of war materials to Spain. The decision was announced in a communique after a late meeting of Premier Blum's Cabinet with President Lebrun attending. Unarmed airplanes as well as those armed were included in the order.

The Cabinet's decision followed the agreement "in principle" by Portugal to remain neutral in its neighbor's revolution. Portugal was the ninth nation to join in the understanding.

The Cabinet also planned to begin an immediate inquiry with a view to suppressing false reports of the Spanish situation.

A third step toward enforcing French neutrality was taken by the Senate, which adopted a modified bill for nationalizing French war industries. If the measure, which must be ratified in the Chamber of Deputies, where it was previously approved in its original form, becomes law, it will enable the Government to keep close watch on the manufacture and sale of all war materials.

Many Reservations by Portugal.

With Portugal's reply in hand, officials indicated that all nations to whom the French appealed to join a neutrality agreement had answered favorably, despite the reservations of some. Portugal accepted with many reservations, but Great Britain was expected to try to persuade Portugal to adopt strict neutrality.

Besides France, Portugal and Great Britain, nations in the hands off agreement are Germany, Russia, Italy, Czechslovakia, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Britain's formal acceptance of the French proposal for an international agreement to withhold arms from both sides of the Spanish conflict, was received. Sources close to the Government said Britain's support was expected to draw Germany, Italy and Portugal into final agreement despite the reservations of Premier Mussolini to the French query and the delay of an official German response.

Plea to Hitler and Mussolini.

The French Government, meanwhile, urged Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany and Premier Mussolini to discard their "reservations" and wholeheartedly support the non-interference agreement.

The German Government announced adherence to the understanding, but with the reservation that Soviet Russia must assure its neutrality before a general European agreement can be effective. At the same time there was a warning to Spain that Germany would defend its nationals if necessary.

The Communist newspaper L'Humanite published statements concerning the reported execution of four young Germans by Barcelona Leftists. The newspaper said:

1. The Germans were not members of the Nazi party but refugees from Germany killed fighting in the ranks of the Barcelona Workers' Militia.

The Central Committee at Barcelona "formally denies the information of the German Government and declares it is false news destined to provoke a casus belli to justify armed intervention against the Spanish Government."

trains for an attack against rebels holding Granada.

Fugitives reaching there from the province said some workers, still holding out against the Fascists, had erected barricades and had organized defenses. They reported many Leftist leaders had been shot.

Rebels Moving Up Reinforcements for Advance in North.

By the Associated Press.

REBEL HEADQUARTERS, BURGOS, Spain, Aug. 8.—Mola from the north and Franco from the south is the rebel strategy for the capture of Madrid.

Gen. Emilio Mola, northern commander of Fascist forces, began moving reinforcements to the Guadarrama front in the mountains and preparing for a decisive advance against the capital.

At the same time Gen. Francisco Franco, commander-in-chief of the Fascists, steadily advanced in Southern Spain toward Madrid with Moroccan troops which have been brought in the past few days by airplane and ship from Spanish Morocco.

New contingents, rebel dispatches said, succeeded in crossing the straits from Morocco to Spain and joined the rebel advance.

Reports declared another rebel column under Gen. Denito was moving toward Madrid after capturing Siguenza and Alcolea, northeast of the capital.

An additional body of troops under Col. Castejon took Almendralejo near the border of Portugal, close to Badajoz, and in the same vicinity insurgent troops under Col. Ascencion were reported to have captured Merida, cutting the railroad line from Badajoz to Madrid.

Leftist Warships Leave Tangier on Orders from Madrid.

TANGIER, International Zone, Aug. 8.—Loyal Spanish warships which had been lying at this port departed tonight on orders from Madrid, causing relaxation of tension in international circles here.

ALBERTA PREMIER ASSAILS THOSE ATTACKING CREDIT PLAN

Says It Ill Becomes Commerce Chamber to Object to Movement for Relief of Suffering.

By the Associated Press.

EDMONTON, Alberta, Aug. 8.—The fate of Premier William Aberhart's social credit plan rested tonight with Canadian law officers. Aberhart reproved the Edmonton Chamber of Commerce for intervening. "Under present conditions it ill becomes any body of citizens," he declared, "to object to a government for the relief of suffering."

A telegram from the Chamber charging issuance of the provincial Government's certificates was a "clear conntravention of Dominion control over currency and legal tender," was referred by Prime Minister Mackenzie King to the Department of Justice.

The Chamber objection yesterday followed upon issuance of the first of the scrip certificates which are in dollar denominations and to which must be affixed a one-cent stamp each week for two years.

Aberhart said the Chamber had made no issue over relief tickets in the city although they are another form of scrip.

The first scrip payments were to highway construction workers as July wages. Some of the workers here reported they found no difficulty spending the certificates in stores.

NEW OHIO STEEL PLANT PLANS TO AVOID LABOR DISPUTES

Third of Stock Issue Will Be Purchased by Non-Union Workers for Concern.

By the Associated Press.

MARIETTA, O., Aug. 8.—Founders of a steel concern on a design to insure it and its employes against labor disputes prepared today to put the property into shape to begin operations in September.

Organized as the Marietta Sheet and Tin Plate Co., it purchased the plant of the Hudson Sheet and Tin Plate Co., idle for 10 years, for $220,000. Frank D. Sinclair, Stubenville banker, said $600,000 shares of stock would be issued.

"War in the steel industry seems inevitable," Sinclair said. "The men signing up to operate this plant are older men and substantial workers who don't care to become embroiled in labor disputes."

One-third of a 6000-share issue of stock, Sinclair said, will be purchased by non-union workers employed in the plant. The remainder will be offered for public sale. He expressed belief operations would start in September with 250 employes and an annual payroll of $400,000.

Incorporators with Sinclair are A. H. Frank Haas, Marietta produce dealer, and C. L. Williams, Stubenville attorney.

KING EDWARD FLIES ON VACATION TRIP

Crosses English Channel in Plane — Goes on Train to Board Yacht.

By the Associated Press.

CALAIS, France, Aug. 8. — Edward VIII of Great Britain today took his first vacation as King in an air, land and sea trip across Europe to the troubled Mediterranean.

He flew across the English Channel behind a pilot newly designated as Captain of the King's Flight, and rode by train in a special car from Calais toward Yugoslavia. Once he enters that country his route will take him to some point on the Adriatic coast, where he will board his yacht.

The King traveled incognito as the Duke of Lancaster. So strict was the insistence on cloaking his identity as King that a British flag flown at the St. Inglevert Airport, near here, to herald his arrival, was ordered down just before his airplane landed.

Edward is the first British King to fly abroad. He may have established another precedent when he ordered a simple divan-bed substituted in his cabin on the yacht Nahlin for a big, imposing walnut bedstead which somebody had installed there for his comfort. The big bed was too formal, he explained.

The yacht's crew of 50 was spotless in new uniforms.

The King's vacation was not without its worries for his Ministers, his subjects and the heads of nations whose territories he will touch or approach.

A little anxiety arose because the Mediterranean easily could become the center of naval activity in the event that European unrest grew worse. But the Adriatic was considered reasonably safe for his vacation inasmuch as Anglo-Italian tension incident to the Ethiopian war had eased a great deal.

Accompanying the royal party at sea will be two British destroyers.

King Edward canceled a projected visit to the picturesque villa of Maxine Elliott at Golfe Juan on the French Riviera because of the Spanish situation.

Six persons comprised the King's entourage on the flight across the channel. Personal friends such as Lord and Lady Louis Mountbatten, Earl Dudley, Lady Cunard, Alfred Duff-Cooper and Lady Diana Cooper will join him on the yacht.

To insure his safety on French soil, the Blum Government posted gendarmes along the tracks of the railroad which he used.

NORWEGIAN GOVERNMENT FINDS NO REASON TO OUST TROTZKY

Replies to Reports That Russian Has Been Ordered Out of Country.

OSLO, Norway, Aug. 8.—Norway's Department of Justice gave a clean bill of health today to Leon Trotzky, one-time revolutionary leader of Russia, in reply to reports that he had abused his residence privilege by fomenting agitation in other countries.

The Department said Trotzky's activities had been under surveillance since his arrival June 18, 1935, and that the Government had found no reason for terminating his stay.

A group of young Norwegian Nazis, who were reported by police to have invaded Trotzky's home in a search for incriminating documents, refused to explain their actions at a police hearing, preferring to await a grand jury trial.

The Nazi press continued its attacks on Trotzky. In a bulletin allegedly stolen—it was not said from what source—the press purported to quote material announcing a French revolution was under way and that Premier Blum was the obstacle to it. The press asked how the Norwegian Government could defend its harboring of Trotzky after such an attack on the French Government official.

REPORTER'S STORY OF TRAGEDY AND HEROISM IN SPAIN

In a small morgue are laid the dead for a few hours before burial to give time either for identification or for friends and relatives to gather.

The town grave digger has worked with little sleep since the war began nearly four weeks ago. Most of the dead are sent to Madrid but those who are unidentfied are buried in the little village near a monastery where are entombed the Kings and Queens of Spain and where there is a crypt ready for exiled Alphonso XIII.

Waiting Behind Lines.

Those behind the lines waiting to take their place at the front give no sign that the ghastly spectacles have weakened their courage or their desire for action.

"How long have you been here?" I asked one young denim-clad militia woman firing toward the hills from behind a small tent.

"Eighteen days," she answered. "And I'll stay here until we get over that crest," pointing to the mountains behind which were the rebel lines.

She and thousands of others of the Government forces stand their ground and fight back, usually against an enemy they can't see, with little food, unbathed, unkempt but confident.

The Government is making every effort to identify its dead properly and mark the burial pits so that the victims may be reinterred later. During the first few days of the revolution it was necessary to bury scores in long trenches because there was neither time nor facilities for private burials.

Now, only, two or three are placed in pits together and boards bearing their names are erected over each.

Communist Killed in Brazil Raid.

RIO DI JANEIRO, Aug. 8.—Police announced today one Communist had been killed and three others, including a woman, had been captured in a fight in nearby Inhauma. The authorities seized arms, munitions and propaganda which they said was intended for circulation among the enlisted men in the Navy and in the military police. The Minister of Marine announced 15 sailors had been thrown out of the service.

Drouth Causes Lay-off of Workers.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The International Harvester Co. laid off thousands of workers here today because of decreased demand for farm machines, following the drouth. In Pittsburgh, some steel orders were canceled.

5,681,000 RELIEF CASES ON MARCH ROLLS, WPA SAYS

This Was Increase of 200,000 Individuals and Families From Same Month in 1935.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—A report indicating that more unemployed were receiving help from Federal, State and local governments in March this year than in March, 1935, was made public today by the Works Progress Administration.

The WPA estimated that 1,930,000 families and single persons were on direct relief in March, and 3,751,000 had Federal work relief jobs. The total is 5,681,000 cases. FERA reports have showed 5,463,690 received relief of some kind in March, 1935.

The families and single persons on direct relief were largely being cared for by States and communities this year, whereas a year ago they were under the FERA program.

The WPA said work relief employment had been reduced to 3,303,559 June 27. This figure included 2,255,898 WPA jobs, the rest being employed by other work relief agencies.

No Official Comments.

WPA officials declined to amplify the report, except to say that those on work relief projects last March included many who had not actually been on relief. The report said 15 per cent of WPA employes June 27 were not from relief sources.

Officials said they had only estimates of the direct relief rolls in many States because care of needy persons unable to work had been turned back to States and communities last December. Left-over Federal funds, however, have supplied $48,000,000 of the cost of direct relief since then.

The report estimated direct relief cases had been cut from 2,150,000 in January this year to 1,930,000 in March, adding:

"Families and single persons receiving general relief represented more than 15 per cent of the population of the United States in the first three months of 1935. On the basis of recent estimates, this ratio decreased to 5.6 per cent for January, 1936, and to 5 per cent for March.

"The large decrease during the year was caused chiefly by transfers to the works program, the majority of which took place in November and December, 1935. The slight decline from January to March, 1936, may be attributed in part to works program and private employment, and also to the decline in funds available for general relief and to the increase in the number of persons receiving benefits under the Social Security Act."

Relief Labor Percentages.

A table showing the percentage of relief labor employed by different agencies drew attention in view of President Roosevelt's recent insistence that PWA projects use more workers from relief rolls.

On June 27, the table showed 70.4 per cent of the workers on PWA projects, and 55 per cent of those on PWA low-cost housing developments, were not from relief lists. About 95 per cent of the 2,255,898 WPA workers, however, were listed as formerly on relief.

The report disclosed that 12 per cent of the 259,405 high school students receiving $6 a month from the National Youth Administration did no work but were paid as "aid for excellence in scholastic performance."

Ex-King Alfonso in Germany; Report He Will See Hitler Denied

Olympic Games Given as Reason for Visit—Reich Wants Soviet Attitude Toward Spanish Revolt Explained.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—In a luxurious car of French manufacture, former King Alfonso of Spain entered Germany tonight as German officials wrestled with the question of its policy toward Spain's civil war.

Germany answered French queries as to Reich adherence to a general hands off with acceptance in principle and with another question: "Will Russia be neutral?"

Official voice was given to German press allegations that Spain was being "bolshevized" when the Foreign Office made it clear that any action committing Germany to a non-intervention agreement awaited a clarification of Soviet policy.

As Alfonso was whirled along German highways, ostensibly for a visit to the Olympic games in Berlin, the Foreign Office denied any knowledge of his arrival.

Earlier in the day the Foreign Office had described as "foolish" reports that Alfonso was coming to Berlin to confer with Fuehrer Hitler or possibly with Count Ciano, the Italian Minister of Foreign Affairs.

Signs Along Route.

Leaving Metternich Castle at Koenigswart, in Czechoslovakia, his temporary residence, the former monarch's machine was followed by another bearing a Spanish license plate.

Among the occupants of the second car were two Praha detectives. They accompanied him as far as the border. The identity of any other occupants of the second car was not determined.

Along Alfonso's route to Germany Czechoslovakian Communists had traced whitewashed slogans on the pavement reading: "Down with Alfonso," and "Long live the Spanish republic."

Other occupants of the Praha Castle refused to talk about the King's departure. Townspeople said he recently had received many visitors, including an "Italian Marquis."

Agreement in principle was the limit in satisfaction the Nazi state would permit French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet when he asked whether the Reich would enter an agreement to let Spain settle its internal quarrels with no outside interference.

Eight German Warships.

Official Nazi dubiousness over the effectiveness of such an action was reflected in the presence in Spanish waters of eight German warships, ready if the occasion arose to enforce the demand for reparations for the loss of German life and property in Spain.

The agreement "in principle" with the French view was modified with reservations as to the character and scope which the Reich non-intervention policy might assume.

The foreign office, however, assured the French Ambassador Germany was fully aware of the danger of war in connection with Spain's civil conflict and was co-operating with other European Powers to produce a neutrality agreement which would prove effective.

(A reliable source in London quoted the German Charge d'Affaires as assuring the British Foreign Office neither the German Government nor German individuals had supplied war materials to Spanish rebels and did not intend to do so.)

It was disclosed that the French Ambassador had on two occasions this week talked with Konstantin von Neurath, the German Foreign Minister, on the proposed international neutrality accord.

DROUTH CUTS WHEAT CROP TO 45 PER CENT IN CANADA

Worst in History of Several Agrarian Provinces; Other Produce Also Hit.

OTTAWA, Aug. 8.—The most disastrous drouth in the history of several Agrarian Provinces, the Government reported today, has caused the outlook for spring wheat in the prairie provinces to decline 45 per cent.

Only the maritime provinces, British Columbia and a few countries in Ontario escaped the withering July heat. The fall wheat estimate was for 11,637,000 bushels, off almost 1,000,000 from 1935. Rye and alfalfa also were blighted. The figure for Saskatchewan fell nearly 44 per cent in July. Rust makes the prospect worse.

After a fall of 31 per cent in the condition figure, Manitoba's prospects were lower than at the corresponding time in either 1934 or 1935. In Alberta, the report said, July was perhaps "the most disastrous for crop growth in the history of the province." The southern and eastern parts have variations from complete failure to about half a crop. In Ontario, spring grains, corn, potatoes, roots and pastures suffered severely.

CUBAN WIFE WANTS INQUIRY INTO SPANISH PRINCE'S SUIT

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Edelmira de Borbon, of Havana, Cuba, wife of Alfonso de Borbon, former heir to the Spanish throne and now a New York automobile salesman, asked the Supreme Court through her counsel today for $250 a week alimony and $25,000 counsel fees and expenses to make her own investigation of the merits of his suit for a marriage annulment.

Supreme Court Justice Samuel I. Rosenbaum signed an order, directing the former prince to appear Wednesday to show cause why the application should not be granted. In his annulment suit the former prince charged his wife broke a pre-nuptial agreement to care for him because of his delicate health.

ROOSEVELT TO START FOR CAPITAL TONIGHT

Winding Up Vacation at Hyde Park, President Attends Morgenthau's Clam Bake.

By the Associated Press.

HYDE PARK, Aug. 8.—President Roosevelt attended a clam bake at Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's Fiskhill estate this evening.

He expects to attend services tomorrow morning at St. James Episcopal Church, the family church, and spend the remainder of the day quietly. He will begin the return trip to Washington tomorrow night.

Eight members of the advisory board of the Roosevelt First Voters League told Roosevelt today of their campaign to line up persons voting for the first time in November to support the President. They assured him that 75 per cent of the 9,000,000 individuals eligible for the first time to cast ballots in a presidential election would vote for him.

In the delegation were Miss Betsy Dern, vice-president, daughter of Secretary of War Dern; Herbert Bayard Swope Jr., treasurer; Miss Elizabeth R. G. Duval, representing New York State; Robert Lassiter of North Carolina, former Yale football star, and Gaylord Thayer, president of the Iowa Young Farmers.

This morning Roosevelt discussed local politics with James Townsend, chairman of the county Democratic committee.

ONE KILLED, TWO MISSING IN MINNESOTA FOREST FIRE

Crew of 1000 Fighting Flames Over Three-Mile Front in Superior National Park.

DULUTH, Minn., Aug. 8.—A three-mile wide brush and forest fire in which at least one person was killed and two were missing swept uncontrolled tonight toward 125 evacuated farms in the Makinen-Palo district of the Superior National Forest. A crew of 1000 CCC youths and laborers fought the flames which have destroyed at least 36 farm homes and seared 15,000 acres 50 miles north of Duluth.

An unidentified man was burned to death in a cabin eight miles south of Aurora. The parents of Arvid Turri, who resided on a farm near Aurora, were missing.

Fires flared at scattered points throughout the tinder-dry Minnesota-Wisconsin nortnwoods. Grover Conzet, State Forester, estimated there were 2000 fires in Minnesota alone, 25 of which were out of control. Fires at other points included Isle Royale, Mich., the Brule River district of Northern Wisconsin, Douglas County, Wisconsin, and Moose Lake, Minn.

MUENCH DEFENSE GOES INTO PAST OF MRS. THOMASSON

In Cross-Examining Witness, Verne Lacy So Far Has Failed to Break Down Direct Testimony.

SHE IS ASKED ABOUT MEN ASSOCIATES

"Those Are Just Frame Ups, Mr. Lacy," She Replies Once at Baby Hoax Conspiracy Trial.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

KAHOKA, Mo., Aug. 8.—In nearly three hours of cross examination today, defense counsel in the Muench baby conspiracy trial explored the past life of Mrs. Grace Carolyn Thomasson, first of the State's witnesses, but did not challenge successfully any of her direct testimony in which she had accused the four defendants of participation in the alleged offense.

The cross examination by Verne R. C. Lacy, St. Louis attorney, was obviously an attempt at impeachment of the character and truthfulness of the witness who had told a detailed story, much as she did at the first trial here last April, ascribing to each of the defendants a part in a plot to get a baby for Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench to represent as her own in order to get a large sum of money (the witness said $250,000) from Dr. Marsh Pitzman, wealthy St. Louis bachelor physician.

The defendants besides Mrs. Muench are her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, Attorney Wilfred Jones, who procured two babies for the Muenches, and Mrs. Helen Berroyer, friend of Mrs. Muench. All are charged with criminal conspiracy to transfer the custody of a baby without the approval of the Juvenile Court, a misdemeanor. The case was sent to the Circuit Court here from the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction when the defendants asserted they could not get a fair trial in St. Louis. A mistrial was declared at the first hearing last April when a juror informed the court, under oath, that he had been approached with a proposal to "hang the jury."

"With Shotgun Behind Garage."

In the course of her cross examination Mrs. Thomasson, youthful looking blonde with a record of eight marriages, somewhat dramatically asserted that a man about whom she was being questioned had hidden one night, armed with a sawed-off shotgun, accompanied by Defendant Jones, behind the garage of Taylor Young, St. Louis lawyer who had represented interests opposed to Mrs. Thomasson in litigation over the estate of her husband, the late Hugh Thomasson.

This statement came after Lacy had repeatedly questioned Mrs. Thomasson as to whether she had associated with a man named John C. McCarthy. Denying any association with him, Mrs. Thomasson finally said, sharply, "I'll tell you who he is," and then made the statement, adding that he got "cold feet." She said the man had lived in St. Louis at Jones' apartment. She did not explain why they hid behind the garage. Jones said to newspaper reporters later that he had seen "McCarthy" once or twice, but denied having had him in the Jones' home or having hidden with him.

Lacy clashed frequently with the witness and almost as often with Judge Walter A. Higbee who showed impatience with the repetitious and persistent questioning by which the defense lawyer sought to make his points after objections by the State's attorneys to his inquiries had been sustained. The court also warned Lacy that the manner he some times used of stating questions in a loud and defiant tone, "doesn't go here."

Association With Men.

Much of the questioning was about Mrs. Thomasson's acquaintance or association with certain men. Lacy named one after another. Some she knew and some she didn't. One that she was asked about was Eddie Miller, also known as "Speedy" Wilhite, who was a St. Louis gangster. The attorney asked if she had once gone to Colorado with him or lived with him in Kansas City. She said she refused to answer on the ground that it might incriminate her. Lacy wanted to know why she feared incrimination and whether she thought Wilhite was a criminal, but Judge Higbee sustained objection to those questions. The witness said she did not know where Wilhite now is. (At the previous trial she testified she had read in newspapers that he was in prison.)

The attorney brought out that the witness had been married to a man named Mahood and one named Putney before her marriage to the elderly and wealthy Hugh Thomasson in 1930. He attempted to go into the grounds on which she was divorced by Mahood but was not permitted to do so. She testified also that she was married, after Thomasson's death, to Robert Diefenbach, known also as Bobby Roberts, a night club entertainer.

When Lacy expressed surprise that Mrs. Thomasson did not know certain men he named, some of whom were lawyers, Mrs. Thomasson smiled and said she had had a total of 84 lawyers in various phases of the litigation over the Thomasson estate and could not remember all of them.

"All Good Penmen."

Vainly Lacy sought to get the witness to identify certain letters and other papers as being in her handwriting. Some of the letters were addressed to a C. E. Frederick with whom she once associated and were signed with her name. When she was asked if they were in her handwriting her stock answer was, "I won't say it is my writing and I won't say it isn't." She declared that names pointed out on copies of certain hotel registers were not in her writing.

Once when asked why she could not say definitely whether the letters were in her writting, she declared, "Knowing these defendants as I do, all good penman, I won't identify anything that is brought in here by them." Another time when Lacy was questioning her about her knowledge of certain men she shot back, "Those are just frame-ups, Mr. Lacy."

When court was adjourned at noon till Monday morning Lacy said he was not nearly finished with the cross examination. When Mrs. Thomasson returns to the stand he will have an opportunity to examine her about her direct testimony involving the defendants, three of whom, the Muenches and Mrs. Berroyer, are represented by Lacy. Jones is his own counsel.

Her Story About Muenches.

In her direct testimony, which took up most of the half-day session Friday and a short time today, Mrs. Thomasson told a story of having discussed with the Muenches and Jones a scheme for getting a baby and of having arranged with them that she would act as the infant's nurse in the transfer. She said she was a "trained nurse," but not a graduate.

She quoted Mrs. Muench as having said Dr. Pitzman was to be made to believe he was the father of the child, because of an "affair" Mrs. Muench said she had had with him. Mrs. Thomasson testified that Dr. Muench "knew all about it." She said she was unable to go through with her part in the transfer of either one of the babies—first the Price baby, which died, and later the Ware baby—to the Muench home, being in Chicago at the time, but said Jones had told her of making arrangements to get the babies.

After her return to St. Louis, she testified, Jones and Mrs. Muench told her Mrs. Berroyer had acted as the "nurse" in both cases. She said Mrs. Berroyer confirmed this later in a conference at which it was agreed Jones was to testify in Anna Ware's habeas corpus suit in the St. Louis Court of Appeals that Mrs. Thomasson was the nurse so as to provide an "out" for Mrs. Berroyer.

In her direct testimony today, in response to questions by the associate prosecuting attorney, Frank E. Mathews of St. Louis, Mrs. Thomasson quoted Mrs. Muench as having told her that she, Mrs. Muench, was with Wilfred Jones when he took Anna Ware for an automobile ride in Forest Park shortly before the birth of Anna's son last Aug. 17. Mrs. Muench, in defense testimony at the first trial, denied she was in the car.

In the habeas corpus suit last autumn, Anna's baby was taken from the Muenches by the Court and restored to its mother. Much of the testimony here will be about the same as was given in that hearing.

NO CO-OPERATION FOR PERMANENT REGISTRATION BILL

favor of the principle of permanent registration," but he understood the election board would have a substitute bill.

"I would not desire to commit myself to any bill," the Mayor wrote, "until there has been a careful study of both bills and the conditions they are designed to correct."

Death of the Bill.

The Mayor was spared the necessity of committing himself as the legislative session dragged on by Waechter's failure to offer a substitute bill. The permanent registration bill was chloroformed in committee.

The legislative session at a close, the legislative committee which had drafted the bill and the League of Women Voters set about to prepare a permanent registration measure for introduction in 1937, requesting the assistance of Mayor Dickmann and Hannegan, Chairman Waechter, Secretary Moore and other members of the election board as experts.

Calling on Mayor Dickmann, John E. Weatherford, chairman of the legislative committee, Frank Wehrle, vice-president of the young men's division, and other members of the committee, were referred to City Counselor Wayman. Wayman suggested they call in experts and revise the bill for introduction again.

Mayor Does Not Appear.

Before each of five recent meetings, letters have been sent to Mayor Dickmann and those "thoroughly familiar with electoral processes," but none has attended. At the time of the first two the Mayor was out of town. The letter announcing the third was unanswered. The fourth brought the reply that City Counselor Wayman would be present, but he was not. The fifth invitation, to last Friday night's meeting at Hotel Mayfair, also brought no acknowledgment from the Mayor, although a week previously, during the registration fraud disclosures, he had volunteered the statement that he wanted permanent registration and would appoint a committee to draft a bill. The Mayor was at the Municipal Opera Friday night.

None of the "experts" has answered the invitations or attended.

At the request of the Legislative Committee and the League of Women Voters, however, Carter W. Atkins, director of the Governmental Research Institute, and City Budget Director Arthur C. Meyers from Comptroller Louis Nolte's office have regularly attended and taken an active part in obtaining data from states which have permanent registration laws. They estimate the saving to St. Louis under the proposed bill would amount to about $60,000 a year.

BOYS REPORT WOMAN LEAPED OFF EADS BRIDGE INTO RIVER

Motorist Tells E. St. Louis Police He Called to Her as She Climbed Over Railing.

Four boys reported to East St. Louis police last night that they saw a woman climb over a railing on the Eads Bridge at 9:15 o'clock and leap screaming into the Mississippi River. They said a motorist stopped and tried to grab her before she leaped but failed.

The motorist, William Simmons of the Broadview Hotel, East St Louis, told the police he was driving west over the bridge when he saw the woman starting to climb over the railing, stopped his car and called to her. He said she was about 35 or 40 years old, slender, wearing a pink dress and white shoes. She was hatless and had a white purse in her hands.

The boys, all of East St. Louis, were Arthur Lalumandier, 1522 North Thirty-sixth street; Harry Kittle, 3147 Gross avenue; Richard Byrne, 1526 North Thirty-sixth, and James Shank, 1530 North Thirty-sixth.

54 PCT. OF 46,252 NOT FOUND VOTERS IN 11TH DISTRICT

25,150 Such Registrants in Wards Where Hennings Was Renominated With Dickmann Support.

Inspection of the Election Board's recanvass of the registration of voters, completed shortly before last Tuesday's primary, has showed that 54.3 per cent of the 46,252 registrants "not found" by the recanvassers were in the Eleventh Congressional District, where Congressman Thomas C. Hennings Jr., Democrat, was renominated with the support of Mayor Dickmann's forces.

This district contained 40.6 per cent of the registration, as tabulated prior to the recanvass.

There were 25,150 registrants "not found" in the Eleventh District, out of an enrollment of 160,649.

The vote for Congressman in the district, in the primary, aggregated 74,708—48,507 Democratic and 26,201 Republican. The Democratic vote was divided as follows: Hennings, 33,325; Police Judge George G. Vest Jr., 12,088; Harry C. White, 1885; Charles F. Hill, 1209. On the Republican side, former Congressman L. C. Dyer defeated Charles F. Meier, 21,448 to 4753.

Hennings Had Kinney Backing.

Of the 11 whole wards and parts of five others in the district, Hennings ran ahead of Vest in all but two. Hennings was backed by such lieutenants of the Mayor as State Senator Mike Kinney and Park Commissioner Joseph J. Mestres. The Eleventh District, covering the central portion of the city and running as far west as De Baliviere avenue, includes the downtown section, where the most flagrant padding of the registration was exposed by the Post-Dispatch.

Vest ran ahead of Hennings in two wards. In the Twenty-third Ward, where Democratic Committeeman Charles M. Reardon was on Dickmann's committee slate but disavowed the Mayor's support, the vote was: Vest, 1735; Hennings, 1013. In seven precincts of Justice of the Peace Jimmy Miller's Fourth Ward, within the congressional district, Vest was given 1963 votes and Hennings only 68. Miller was aligned with the anti-Dickmann faction, opposing all the Mayor's candidates.

In the other wards of the district Hennings ran far ahead of Vest.

Two years ago, when Hennings was nominated for Congress for the first time, he and his Republican opponent, Dyer, both were unopposed in the primary. Their nominating votes then were: Hennings, 42,940; Dyer, 27,324.

In the November election, 1934, the vote was: Hennings, 59,119; Dyer, 44,693; three minority party candidates together, 1007.

"Not Founds" in Other Districts.

Congressman John J. Cochran, Democrat, who has been supported principally by the anti-Dickmann forces, was renominated in the Thirteenth District, covering the North Side, without opposition and Harry E. Wiehe was the Republican nominee there. In that district the recanvass of the registration showed 15,393 registrants "not found," or 33.2 per cent of the entire 46,252 "not found" in the city. This district had a registration, before the recanvass, of 129,535, or 32.8 per cent of the city-wide enrollment.

The city portion of the Twelfth District showed 5709 voters "not found," of 12.3 per cent of all those in that category. The district had a registration, before the recanvass, of 104,590, or 26.4 per cent of the city total. Prosecuting Attorney C. Arthur Anderson of St. Louis County and former Prosecuting Attorney Harry P. Rosecan of the city, respectively, were the Democratic and Republican congressional nominees in that district.

"NO MAN'S LAND" LONG OVERLOOKED ANNEXED BY U. S.

Area in Colorado Formally Taken Over in Flag-Raising Ceremony.

BRECKENRIDGE, Col., Aug. 8.—The American flag flew over "new territory" today. Thirteen hundred square miles—bought from Napoleon Bonaparte for approximately three cents an acre—in the heart of Colorado was formally annexed with flag-raising ceremonies and an address by Gov. Ed. C. Johnson.

The land lies between the region acquired through the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 and the area north of the Rio Grande river which Mexico ceded to the United States after the war of 1846-48. By an oversight the area was not included in formal additions to American territory. It has produced at least $100,000,000 in ore and in cattle, sheep and farm crops.

D. A. R. CAMPAIGN TO ENFORCE STATE TEACHER'S OATH LAWS

Would Weed Out Those "Planting Subversive Doctrines in Minds of Pupils."

WASHINGTON. Aug. 8.—A campaign by the Daughters of the American Revolution for strict enforcement of teacher's oath laws starting with the fall school term was announced today by Mrs. William A. Becker, president-general.

In urging enforcement of such laws now on the books of many states, the Daughters have frequently clashed with the National Educational Association, which has held that the oaths were not in keeping with academic freedom and unfairly implied disloyalty in the school-teaching profession.

Mrs. Becker in a statement said: "No patriotic teacher should object to taking the oath of allegiance. It is an honor, not a reflection, upon character. It does not carry with it interference with the right of educators to determine courses of study. Courses of study will be safe in the hands of loyal teachers."

"We are not trying to raise any 'red scare', but do maintain our position is sound," she added. "Our one purpose in insisting on this pledge is to weed out, as far as possible, the un-American teacher engaged in planting subversive doctrines in the minds of future citizens."

She added that she issued her statement "to correct reports that the DAR was attempting to create the alarming impression that America's public schools are packed with Communistic teachers."

WILL OF W. C. MAXWELL, WABASH OFFICER, FILED

Leaves Home to Widow; Residue in Trust With No Estimate as to Value.

The will of William Cochrane Maxwell, chief traffic officer of the Wabash Railway, who died Tuesday, was filed yesterday in Probate Court. His home, at 5922 Clemens avenue, is left to his widow, Mrs. Persis T. Maxwell; $7000 in insurance to a daughter, Mrs. D. C. McCord of Chicago, and a total of $3000 in specific bequests to three other relatives.

The residue of the estate, the value of which was not estimated, is left in trust with L. Wade Childress and William C. Streit Jr. as trustees. They are directed to pay $75 a month from the income to Minnie I. Cochrane, testator's sister-in-law. The remainder of the income is to be paid to Mrs. Maxwell, who is also permitted to draw $1500 annually from the principal of the estate.

After the death of these two beneficiaries the trust is to terminate and the property is to be turned over to Mrs. McCord or her heirs. The sum of $8000 is to be used for the education of her son, William M. McCord. The specific bequests include $1000 each to two sisters, Eliza and Grace Maxwell, and to the sister-in-law.

WOMAN KILLED, AUTOS GOING SAME WAY HIT

Accident on Highway 30 Near Cedar Hill, Mo.; Victim's Husband Injured.

Mrs. Jesse Buxton of Cedar Hill, Jefferson County, was killed and her husband was injured when another automobile crashed into the rear of their car on Highway 30, a mile north of Cedar Hill, at 3:30 p. m. yesterday.

The other car was driven by Oscar Eggars of Dittmer, Jefferson City, an employe of Anheuser-Busch, Inc. He told Constable Adolph Bauer that he drove over the top of a hill, came suddenly on the Buxton coupe moving slowly, and was unable to slow down in time to prevent running into it. Mrs. Buxton's head was thrown against the top of the car and she died of a skull fracture. She was about 68 years old.

Buxton, a retired real estate dealer, was taken to St. Anthony's Hospital here, where he was found to have suffered a broken wrist, several fractured ribs, and a severe cut on the head. A grandson riding with the Buxtons was uninjured.

STUCK IN DRAIN

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

ROBERT McPETERS.

BOY SUCKED INTO DRAIN PIPE AT WADING POOL IS RESCUED

Lifeguard Pulls Robert McPeters, 10, From Three Feet of Water; Children Removed Lid.

Drawn into a foot-wide drainpipe up to his armpits under three feet of water in a wading pool last night at the Concordia Community Park, Thirteenth and Wyoming streets, 10-year-old Robert McPeters, was rescued, unconscious, by a lifeguard. Revived by inhalator treatment, he was taken to City Hospital suffering from shock and contusions of the thighs. Companions of the boy had removed the iron cover of the drain pipe.

At the hospital, the boy said that he and his companions had noticed the screws on the lid were loose and started to take it off.

"I was a few feet from the pipe, and I wanted to feel the rush of the water. My brother, Frank Jr., was standing next to me. As they took the lid off, the rush of the water dragged me under, and my brother grabbed me but had to let go. I slid along the bottom trying to hold on by the concrete, but couldn't stop. I felt myself going into the pipe up to my arms when I stuck and everything got black."

His brother called for help when Robert went under and the lifeguard pulled the boy from the pipe. Police were unable to learn the names of the boys who removed the lid.

The McPeters boys live with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank McPeters Sr., 1306 Arsenal street.

FURTHER VOTE FRAUD INQUIRY THIS WEEK

Grand Jury to Resume Sessions Tomorrow—17 Have Been Indicted.

The grand jury which has been investigating registration frauds exposed by the Post-Dispatch will resume its daily sessions tomorrow, planning to consider each day one precinct in which there have been charges of fraud.

The jury met for a brief session yesterday to make its plans for this week, but heard no witnesses.

Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller will depart tomorrow for a vacation in Michigan, leaving the grand jury in charge of his assistant, James E. McLaughlin.

After its session next Saturday the grand jury will recess until Sept. 1, when it will reconvene to attend to routine matters before submitting its final report to the Circuit Court Sept. 11. A new grand jury will be impaneled Sept. 14.

Since its registration fraud inquiry began the grand jury has returned 17 indictments. Fourteen of them charge precinct election clerks with willful neglect to make the revision canvass which should have followed the registration of June 18.

$100,000,000 BOND LIKELY ON E. H. R. GREEN ESTATE

Texas Judge Plans to Name Widow Administrator Unless Contest Is Filed.

KAUFMAN, Tex., Aug. 8.—Kaufman County Judge Ben Brooks said today he expected Mrs. Mabel H. Green to be present in his courtroom Monday when legal proceedings regarding disposition of her husband's vast estate, estimated at $80,000,000, start.

Unless an unexpected contest is filed before the hearing starts, Judge Brooks said he would name Mrs. Green permanent administrator of the late Col. Edward H. R. Green's estate.

The former Terrell, Tex., resident who died at Lake Placid, N. Y., June 8, inherited part of the huge estate from his mother, Hetty Green, and enriched it with railroad earnings.

Mrs. Matthew Astor Wilkes of New York, sister of Col. Green, recently filed in Surrogates Court at Port Henry, N. Y., which named her sole beneficiary. Col. Green's will, dated 1908, will be probated formally at Port Henry, Sept. 8.

Judge Brooks said the appointment of Mrs. Green as permanent administrator would necessitate the posting of bonds of about $100,000,000.

ANTI-NEW DEAL DEMOCRATS' DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES

Roosevelt Charged With Replacing Party Doctrines With Tenets of 'Blended Communism and Socialism.'

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—Following is the text of the statement and declaration of principles issued by the "National Jeffersonian Democrats" organized here today to oppose re-election of President Roosevelt:

"A conference intended to be informal, and at which a limited attendance only was anticipated, developed into a meeting in the city of Detroit, at which representative Democrats from 22 states were present.

"The underlying purpose of the conference was to review the situation in which the Democrats of the nation, who still conceive themselves to be loyal to the historic Democratic party, and attached to its time-honored principles, find themselves, in view of the New Deal or Roosevelt party's apostasy to Democratic principles, both in the measures which it has enacted, and the designs which it harbors and proposes to carry into effect should it prevail in the approaching election.

"A full day was spent by the conferees in the consideration of reports as to the spreading dissatisfaction in the various states represented, among Democrats who are still consistent in their regard for Democratic theories of government and administration.

"An expression of opinion was sought from the delegates as to how their protest against Democratic betrayal by the administration could most effectively be made.

"There was complete concurrence of view at the conclusion of the day's session, and two committees were appointed, one, to draft a report of the deliberations of the conference to the Democrats of the nation, and another to perfect a national organization of Democrats who agree with the views, conclusions and recommendations of the conference.

"The conference decided that it would not at this time and on this occasion, stress President Roosevelt's disregard of the platform upon which he was elected; his various breaches of campaign promises solemnly made and as solemnly repeated from time to time; his light regard for his oath to preserve and defend the Constitution, and his disrespect for the great court charged with the upholding and interpretation of the Constitution; his frequent displays of contempt for this great instrument of freedom; his repudiation of the tradiitonal principles of the party to which he owes his election as President; the appalling and wanton waste under his administration of the nation's substance, with the resultant undermining of the national credit and the financial structure of the country.

"Other counts in the Democratic indictment of the President, and his administration, were left for another time, such as the highly political and largely pretended humanitarianism with which the moneys appropriated for the relief of the destitute have been used to throttle the free expression of the Democratic party and facilitate its capture and perpetuate its use by non-Democratic appointees of the President, who have used the power of his great office placed at their disposal to serve objectives and promote theories and hidden designs which are abhorrent to all true Democrats.

"The deliberations of the conference centered upon the funamental question as to whether the President and his party can longer be considered Democratic. In the light of his record and that of his administration, and whether in the revelations he has given of his mind and purposes, he should be suffered without protest to represent himself as a Democrat and to claim the titular leadership of the Democratic party.

Committee Declaration.

"The sense of the conference was expressed in a declaration drafted by its committee and unanimously adopted by the full conference.

"The declaration is as follows:

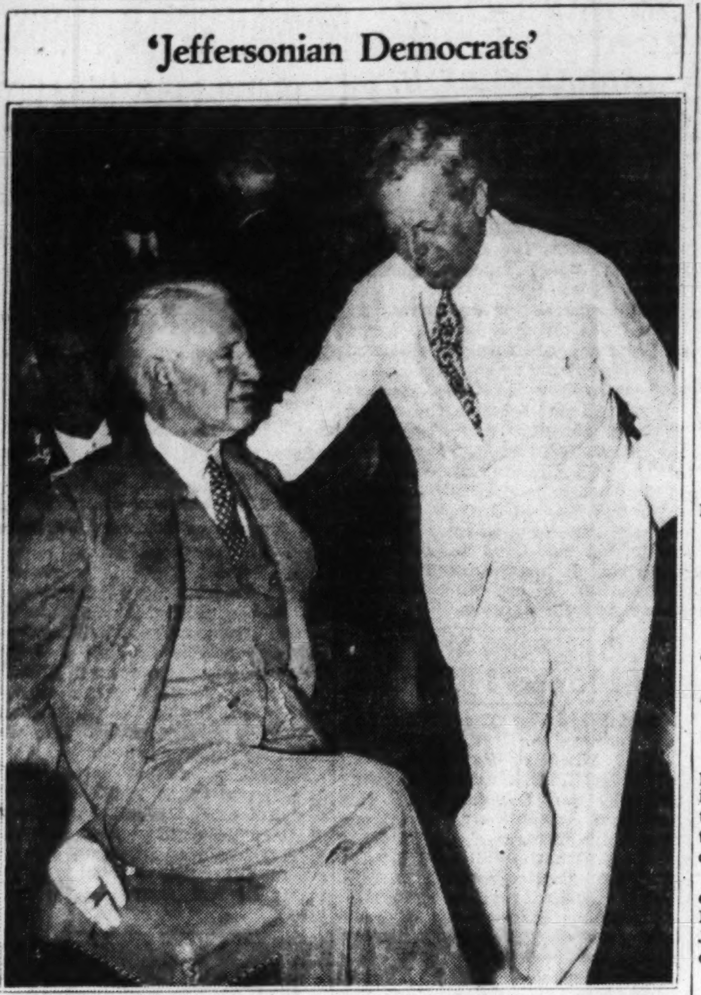
" 'The reasons impelling the members of a political party to repudiate its leadership and to disavow its policies, must be fundamental and all-controlling.

" 'Mere dissent from its measures or disagreement with its policies is not ordinarily sufficient justification for so extreme a course.

" 'It is recognized that differences of opinion are constantly arising within the membership of a great national party. Sound party theory assumes that such differences will be freely discussed and resolved in accordance with the prevailing opinions of the party membership.

" 'These propositions, however, proceed upon the assumption that the party is both led and conducted in good faith and in loyal adherence to its known and declared principles; and, further, that the party's attitude toward the country and its established and time-honored institutions is one of loyalty and support.

'Jeffersonian Democrats'



BAINBRIDGE COLBY and JOSEPH B. ELY

AT Detroit meeting of anti-New Deal Democrats, who voted to conduct a campaign against Roosevelt.

" 'The United States of America is a democracy, the most enduring and successful known to history.

" 'It has knit together a vast and heterogeneous population into one united, stable, industrious and pacific state, combining the centralized concert of a federal system with local independence, and uniting collective energy with the full preservation of individual freedom.

Divisions of Power.

" 'This has been made possible by the constitutional division of political power between the states and the Federal Government, and between the several parts and organs of the Federal Government itself.

" 'The liberty of Americans, since the reception of the republic, has been the product and the result of the American constitutional system, to which we owe our greatness as a nation and the survival of our freedom against all attempts to limit or destroy it.

"The Democratic party throughout the century of its honorable service to the country has been the alert and vigilant guardian of American liberty and of the constitutional system from which it springs.

" 'It has been equally watchful in holding both the states and the Federal Government within the limitations of power assigned to each respectively by the Constitution, protecting each against any attempted encroachment by the other.

" 'It has jealously striven throughout its party life to maintain the just constitutional balance between the three great branches of the Federal Government, seeing in the Constitution's rigid restriction of the executive, legislative and judicial departments to their respective fields within the Constitution a lasting and efficacious guarantee of the individual liberty of the citizen.

The Party Platform.

" 'With deep concern and the most sincere feeling of apprehension, the Democrats of the nation see today a President calling himself Democratic, and elected to his great office by the suffrage of the Democratic party, turning his back upon the party platform upon which he was elected, and the Administration, made up of his appointees, exerting itself in every conceivable way to strike down the beneficent structure of democratic government and to substitute for it a collectivist state, replacing the doctrines of democracy with the tenets and teachings of a blended Communism and Socialism.

" 'This is more than a deviation which can be corrected, or a lapse which can be cured, or an honest mistake which can be forgiven. It discloses a perversion of heart and spirit which can neither be remedied nor condoned.

" 'It is indeed fundamental and all-controlling, presenting to the loyal members of such a party the duty of abstention from its evil courses and of applying such punishment and discipline as can only be inflicted by the defeat of a party that has so far forgotten its mission and its duty.

" 'The American people can recover from some of the wounds inflicted by mistaken policies. They can recover from almost any folly of administration and government. The process may involve years of anguish, suffering, impoverishment and set-back.

" 'Such is the indomitable spirit of Americans that if unhampered in the exercise of their abilities and the exertion of their strength, recover they will, but neither the United States nor any country can recover from destruction, and destruction is the only possible result which can attend the subverting and ruinous designs of the present administration.

Denial of Support.

" 'We will therefore not support for re-election the candidates of the Philadelphia convention for President and Vice-President, and we call upon all loyal and sincere Democrats to consider the question of their duty to the country in the approaching election with the same earnestness that has guided our deliberations, joining with us if they feel that our conclusions are sound and our anxiety for the future of our party and of our country is justified.' "

This was signed by Joseph B. Ely, Massachusetts, chairman; Bainbridge Colby, New York; Graham Wright, Georgia; Joseph W. Bailey Jr., Texas; R. Contee Rose, Maryland; J. Evetts Haley, Texas; Henry Breckinridge, New York; James A. Reed, Missouri, as a committee.

Lifebuoy's super-mildness and unequalled ability to stop "B. O." due to special purifying ingredient

THE true "B.O." experience illustrated is just one of thousands of letters sent to the makers of Lifebuoy! . . . Letters relating experiences that are daily causing more and more people to turn to Lifebuoy . . .

These Lifebuoy users owe their safeness from "B. O." (body odor) to a special purifying ingredient—found in no other popular toilet soap. And Lifebuoy complexions owe their smoothness and freshness to the same source.

Here's why—because of this exclusive ingredient, Lifebuoy's creamy lather not only cleanses the surface—it penetrates deep into the pores, gets at and removes the cause of "B.O." The fresh, clean scent of Lifebuoy's revivifying lather completely disappears as you rinse.

Yet this very same ingredient actually gives the soap's action greater mildness! "Patch" tests made on the skins of hundreds of women prove Lifebuoy is more than 20% milder than many so-called "beauty soaps."

Start today to enjoy Lifebuoy's double blessing! Bathe regularly with Lifebuoy, and be safer, and safer longer! Make Lifebuoy your complexion soap—and your skin will be fresher, clearer, finer textured!

G. O. P. TO UNLEASH RECOVERY, KNOX SAYS IN INDIANA

Declares at Rally That Party Will Return "Millions of Unemployed to Honest Work."

OPENING ADDRESS OF THE CAMPAIGN

Vice-Presidential Nominee Promises Ending of "Waste" and Fairer Distribution of Taxes.

SUES FOR $100,000

LEONORE MILLER,

PROPRIETOR of a Chicago dancing school and a former motion picture actress, charges breach of promise in a suit filed in Miami, Fla., against David P. Scobic, Chicago insurance broker, asking for $100,000. Scobie is the husband of Florance Yates, heiress to $20,000,000, and known as Wisconsin's "richest girl,"

By the Associated Press.

CONNERSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 8.—Col. Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential candidate, said tonight a Republican administration would "unleash recovery" and return "millions of unemployed to honest work."

Addressing a rally of Indiana Republicans, he charged that the Government of the United States "is the worst-managed business in the world today."

The speech was the opening address of the Republican national campaign, Knox told his audience.

To "drive out the sweatshop and the exploiting employer" is one of the party's resolutions, he said, if it is successful in the fall election. Another is to fight monopolies, while encouraging and fostering "honest business." For a third he listed cutting taxes and shifting their weight from "the plain man."

The rally was held in a natural amphitheater in a park on the outskirts of Connersville, a town of 12,000. Chairmen of the meeting estimated the crowd at 50,000. Following his address Knox left by automobile for Dayton, continuing the speaking tour that will take him into 35 states.

What G. O. P. Offers.

Knox struck into this subject after charging that "recovery began in 1932," and "we should have been entirely out of the woods by this time."

"What has the Republican party to offer?" he asked. "We propose first of all to end the waste of the people's money. We propose to make taxes less and to make them fairer.

"Instead of NRA, we propose to have freedom of enterprise.

"We propose to put extortionate and uneconomic monopoly out of business. The sweatshop and the exploiting employer we intend to drive out. The man who adulterates goods . . . or sells dishonest stocks we expect to put in jail.

"But honest business is to be free.

"With this program in operation the forces of recovery will be unleashed. . . . Millions of unemployed will be restored to honest work and earned wages."

Speaking to an audience of mixed industrial and farm interests, Knox attacked both the NRA and the AAA as failures. As for the AAA benefits, he said:

"The little farmer did not get very much. It was the big fellows who got the big benefits.

"A New York bank received . . . $782,000 for not growing sugar in Puerto Rico. I submit that in the history of the world there has never been so idiotic an economic transaction.

Says Farmer Lost.

"All the evidence indicates our farms actually lost money by the whole transaction. They lost their foreign markets. They lost a part of their home markets to foreigners. The increase in prices plus the cash payments did not make up for their losses.

"There will be no dirty campaign on our side. A man does not throw dirt unless his hands are in it."

He said the Republican campaign would acknowledge that some of the Roosevelt administration's measures were valuable. He mentioned regulation of the sale of securities, "some of the banking measures," and the CCC.

"A government that tries everything must do some things right," Knox said. "A man with both eyes shut firing a machine gun is going to hit something after a while.

"The Republican platform promises no miracles. Miracles have not worked well lately. They are going out of fashion."

Knox told his audience the "American system of free enterprise" holds the promise of "a new order" with a magnificent standard of living, free of poverty and insecurity. But this must come, he said, through low costs and high production, based on "co-operation, not class hate."

Talk at Indianapolis.

Knox spoke at the formal notification of Raymond S. Springer of his nomination for Governor. On his way here he stopped at Indianapolis, where he spoke at a luncheon in the historic Columbia Club.

"We will win," he said, "but only if we realize that nothing can be taken for granted. We must make a stiff fight."

He recalled that it was in the Columbia Club in 1934 that he had made one of the first of his speeches against the New Deal.

Turning to a direct attack on President Roosevelt he said that "it has only been in the last three years we have words from a President intended to create class hatred."

"We are having an illuminated lesson," he continued, "as to what comes from building up class hatred. We have only to look at Spain where bloody, fratricidal war rages as a result of class hatred built up through the years."

'RELIGIONS DISRUPTING FORCE'

Dr. Frank Kingdom States Social Scientists' View.

By the Associated Press.

ESTES PARK, Colo., Aug. 8.—Dr. Frank Kingdom, president of Newark University, called "religion or so-called religions, the greatest single divisive, disrupting force in community life" today, in discussions at the second annual institute of Human Relations. Social scientists find religions have divided people into classes, groups and antagonisms, he said.

His statement was in reply to Dr M. Willard Lampe, director of religion at the University of Iowa who said: "I have noticed that social scientists are inclined to disparage religion." The institute is sponsored by the National Conference of Jews and Christians.

NEW COMMUNIST REPUBLIC SET UP BY CHINESE REDS

Close to 100,000, Including Tibetans, Live on Banks of Rivers in Remote Sikong Province.

By the Associated Press.

NANKING, China, Aug. 7.—A new Communist People's Republic which has yet to receive recognition from the U. S. S. R., and which is but little known beyond its own boundaries, has been set up by Chinese Reds on the banks of the River of Golden Sands in the remote border province of Sikong.

Close to 100,000 Chinese and Tibetans make up the citizenry and soldiery of the little republic, whose capital is Kantse, 400 miles northwest of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's Szechuen stronghold, Chungking, near the upper navigation limit of the Yangtze River.

Pursued through West China and driven from Szechuen by Gen. Chiang's troops, Red chieftain Hsiao Keh led his Communist comrades into Sikong, Inner Tibet, finding for them a home in a region protected by nature from the operations of modern military forces and yet close enough to trade and pilgrim routes to Tibet to assure steady supplies of food and money.

While robbing the rich to support their own poor followers, these Chinese Reds have won over Tibetan lamas (priests) who control the affairs of the more remote areas of Sikong, by offering them posts in the Golden Sand River people's republic. Having established their authority in Northeastern Sikong, the Reds now are casting their eyes on Baan, capital of the Sikong provisional provincial administration, garrisoned by a mixed Tibetan and Chinese force of only 1500 men, who have never shown any great aptitude for fighting, except among themselves, the capital is not expected to be able to withstand a siege by Hsiao Keh's Reds.

MARY ASTOR SCHEDULED TO RESUME TESTIMONY

Actress Under Cross-Examination in Child Custody Case When Trial Recessed.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Aug. 8.—Mary Astor is scheduled to return to the witness stand Monday in the trial of her suit against her ex-husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, for custody of their four-year-old daughter, Marylyn.

A subpena has been issued by Joseph Anderson, Dr. Thorpe's counsel, for George S. Kaufman, Broadway dramatist. Anderson said one might be served later on John Barrymore, now ill in a Culver City sanitarium.

When the hearing was adjourned last Monday, Miss Astor was under cross-examination.

"After Miss Astor's attorneys have finished their side of the case, I will call her to the witness stand as my own witness," said Anderson. This is one way, he pointed out, of introducing the actress' diary, which Dr. Thorpe, in answering Miss Astor's suit, charged showed evidence of misconduct.

ZIONCHECK'S FUNERAL TO BE HELD TUESDAY

Congressman's Suicide Laid to Worry Over Advice He Quit Politics for Time.

By the Associated Press.

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 8. — The suicide of Representative Marion A. Zioncheck, Washington's erratic Congressman, was attributed by friends tonight to worry over a psychiatrist's advice that he take a long rest from politics.

The Congressman dashed from a desk in his campaign headquarters yesterday, leaped out of a fifth-floor window and plunged to his death on the sidewalk below, in sight of his bride, waiting for him in a parked automobile.

City officials offered to arrange a public funeral, but there was no immediate response from Mrs. Zioncheck, who remained in seclusion. The House of Representatives' sergeant-at-arms said in Washington she had informed him funeral services will be held Tuesday. A congressional committee was named to attend.

News of the death of her son was kept from the Congressman's ailing mother, Mrs. Frances Zioncheck, at whose insistence, Zioncheck recently said, he decided to run for re-election after once having announced he would not be a candidate.

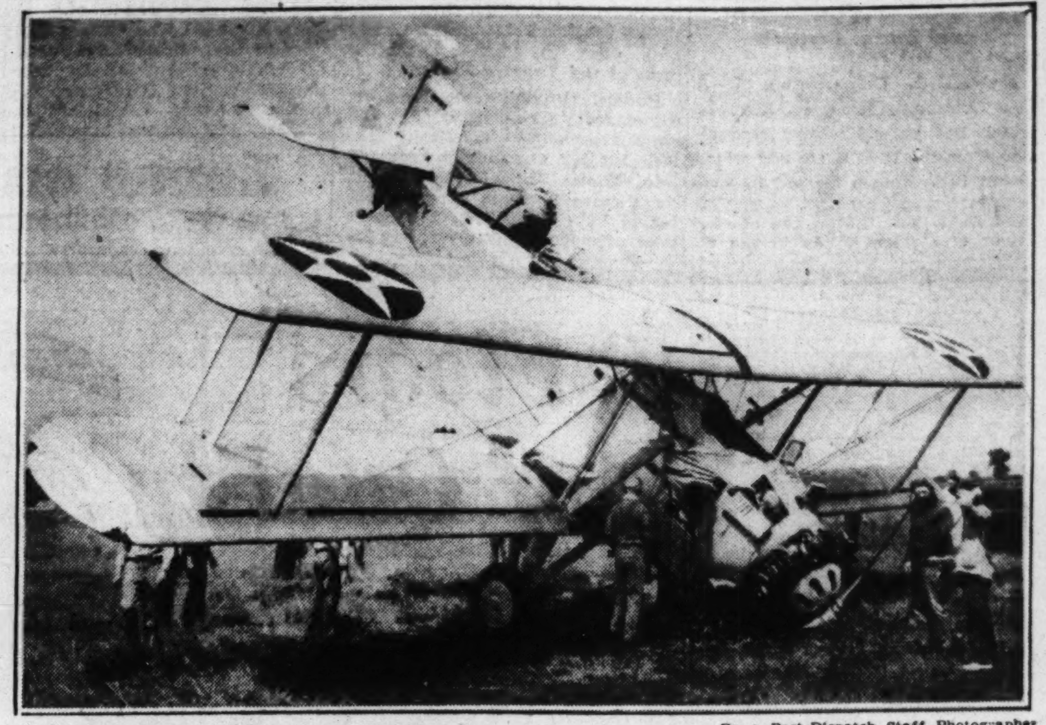
Navy Plane Damaged in Landing at Airport Here



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

THE propeller of a Navy bombing plane was damaged yesterday at Municipal Airport when the pilot, Lieut. W. R. Allen, flying with another officer and an enlisted man from Norfolk, Va., to his post at San Diego, applied the brakes too soon after landing. The pilot and passengers were uninjured.

propeller was mutilated and broken. One blade of the left propeller was broken near the hub, the other was severely twisted. Examination convinced me that the propellers were properly attached up to the time of the crash.

"Contact with the ground was at considerable speed, with the power on—this was true of both propellers. I have investigated other crashes, and have not before found propellers of this type broken so near the hub. The propellers, when found, were still in the low-pitch position, which is the position of the takeoff, giving the power needed for getting off."

"Engines Turning at Full Power."

E. R. Bayless of Little Falls, N. J., contact man for the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, and a mechanical engineer, testified that he examined the broken parts, and that he concluded that the propellers were functioning properly until the crash. He said he was unable to find anything in his examination of the propellers to indicate a contributing cause of the disaster.

"Comparing this with other crashes I have investigated," he said, "I would say that these engines were turning at full power."

Radio Dispatcher on Stand.

Lawrence W. Jewell, airport radio dispatcher, testified that he "worked" the City of Memphis when it arrived from New Orleans, and cleared it for Chicago at 9:55 p. m.

"Visibility was three-quarters of a mile," he testified. "The pilot ran up each engine separately, at the end of the runway, before he turned around for the takeoff. He took off to the north, and did not seem to be gaining much altitude, but he cleared the wires at the end of the field.

"I watched the plane pass out of sight, and though our receivers were on constantly, I did not hear from it again. At 10:12, the pilot of an arriving T. W. A. plane reported having seen the airport from an altitude of 1500 feet."

Company Head on Stand.

Carleton Putnam, president of Chicago & Southern Air Lines, with headquarters in St. Louis, testified as to the plane City of Memphis, a Lockheed Electra type, making the flight regularly scheduled as Flight No. 4. He announced that the company would co-operate with the bureau of air commerce in the inquiry, but when asked as to his view on the accident, said the company would prefer to withhold any statement, with a view to joining with the bureau in making a statement at the end of the hearing.

E. M. Gholdstein, maintenance foreman for the line at New Orleans, testified that he examined the City of Memphis at New Orleans Wednesday, giving it a thorough inspection, equal to the prescribed 60-hour check. The inspection took 8½ hours, he said, and was made by him and two mechanics.

"No complaint was recorded," he testified. "There was a report on one of the brakes, and we found an antenna insulator cracked on the auxiliary radio set. We did not have an insulator in stock to replace it, but the crack would not prevent using the set if it was needed. Otherwise, the condition was perfect."

Testimony of First Pilot.

M. T. Benedict, pilot on the flight from New Orleans to St. Louis, testified that he had been a pilot since 1928. He brought the City of Memphis here from New Orleans Wednesday, making the regular stops at Jackson, Miss., and Memphis, and arriving at Lambert-St. Louis Field at 9:23 p. m.

"Forty miles south of St. Louis," Benedict testified, "we ran into bad weather, with clouds at 2000 feet, and came in the last 20 miles on the radio beam. I made a visual landing, though, and contacted the radio at the airport about six minutes before arrival, getting instructions on where to land.

"The fuel analyzer on the left engine was not functioning properly," the pilot said when asked whether he had noted any faults in mechanical performance. "However, the analyzer has nothing to do with the operation of the engine; it is to show the mixture of the fuel." He said he made a report on the analyzer, and this report was part of the log found in the wreckage.

"I talked to Pilot Zeier," Benedict said. "He was in good spirits, and spoke of having had two weeks off, and having just returned to work. He said the weather had been good while he was off, but just then seemed to be getting thick. 'You saved up some weather for me,' was the way he put it.

"Co-Pilot Mossman came up with me. He was a capable pilot, and was in good spirits."

The testimony of representatives of the air line came after that of persons in the vicinity of the crash.

Two Say Engines Were Missing.

Of 13 such persons who testified, only two dissented from the general agreement that the engines were heard continuously, working steadily, until the plane's impact with the ground. Robert Mason, Negro garage man, living at Robertson, told of the engines "cutting on and off," and said the plane appeared to rise and fall.

Mrs. Katherine Dacon, a visitor from Florida, who was at a farm near the scene, said the engines seemed to be "missing" when the plane passed over the farmhouse.

Thomas R. King, Chester Tesson, John A. Busken, Ralph L. Sharp and Herbert Collier, testified that they heard a steady roar from the engines. Among the other witnesses was George Behlmann, on whose farm the plane fell, and who heard the crash while in bed.

The hearing was conducted by Maj. R. W. Schroeder, chief of inspection service of the United States Bureau of Air Commerce. Director Eugene L. Vidal of the bureau, who participated in an examination of the wreckage Friday, left St. Louis yesterday.

Others at the hearing included Dennis Mulligan, attorney for the bureau; Charles L. Stanton, chief engineer of the air navigation division; D. M. Rainey, radio beacon expert; B. M. Jacobs and E. P. Kerr, crash investigation experts, and Inspectors Al Koch and Guy Faulkner, stationed at Lambert-St. Louis Field. Chicago & Southern pilots were represented by Pilot Victor Hoganson.

Funeral Services Held for Chief Pilot Carl Zeier.

Funeral services for Carl F. Zeier, chief pilot of the City of Memphis, were held yesterday from Stuart & Sons' Chapel, 1225 Union boulevard, with burial in Lakewood Park Cemetery.

The services, which were attended by more than 75 persons, including numerous associates of Mr. Zeier at Lambert Field, were conducted by the Rev. Herman G Heuser of the Normandy Presbyterian Church. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Euphemia Zeier, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zeier.

Other Indictments Contemplated in New York Inquiry, Authorities Say.

By the Associated Press.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 8.—The determination of the Federal grand jury to continue its investigation of the Paul H. Wendel kidnaping case in September was said reliably tonight to mean other Lindbergh law indictments are under consideration in addition to those already reported voted against six persons.

Five or 10 witnesses were unavailable yesterday and the jury adjourned yesterday until Sept. 14. The identities of the witnesses were closely guarded.

Sources close to the jury said the adjournment was taken because of the inability of additional witnesses to testify at this time. They denied the interpretation that the recess was designed to keep the jury inactive until Gov. Harold G. Hoffman announced his decision on New York's requests for the extradition of Ellis H. Parker Sr. and his son, Ellis Jr. There was no indication at Trenton how soon the Governor would announce his decision on the extradition requests Thursday.

INDIAN, 70, WHITE BRIDE, 40, ON HONEYMOON IN ARKANSAS

He Can't Speak English, She Can't Talk Osage; Interpreter, Wedding Witness, Jailed.

By the Associated Press.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Aug. 8.—Hehshahke, 70-year-old Osage Indian, unable to speak English—and his 40-year-old white bride of four days—unable to speak Osage—continued their honeymoon here tonight without aid of an interpreter.

Interpreter C. J. Barnard of Fairfax, Ok., and Loudella Campbell, official witnesses when the couple secretly married at Tulsa, Ok., last Tuesday, were held in jail on order of Chief of Police Mike Gordon. No formal charges were preferred.

The Indian's bride, the former Maude Grayum, obtained a court order directed against Joe A. Thompson, Indian police officer of Fairfax, Ok., to prevent him from returning Hehshahke to his acre farm in Oklahoma.

After a conference with the attorney for the Indian's wife, Thompson, the Indian's great niece, Mrs. Jack Stuart, an Osage, and her husband left for Fairfax.

"Well, I won, didn't I, kid?" Mrs. Hehshahke remarked to a reporter. "I'm a fighting son-of-a-gun."

At Pawhuska, Ok., W. M. Nash, special officer of the U. S. Indian Service, said the Government planned no further moves at present.

MISSOURI CONFERENCE ON DROUTH PROGRAM

Meeting Tomorrow to Discuss Increasing Water Supply Called by Gov. Park.

With the drouth damage in Missouri now in excess of the loss in [illegible], a program for relief of distressed farmers through federal and State agricultural agencies will be discussed at Gov. Park's emergency conference tomorrow afternoon at Jefferson City, according to Robert K. Ryland, State director for the National Emergency Council, who suggested the conference following a survey by counties which he said disclosed "alarming conditions."

The survey showed that corn, small grains and many other crops, as well as pastures, are ruined; that 80 per cent of the farmers in the majority of the 97 officially designated drouth counties, are hauling water for home use, as well as for livestock consumption; that many farm families are existing with a minimum of water to sustain life, lacking equipment to haul it and money to have it hauled; that the remaining 17 of Missouri's 114 counties, not as yet designated in the official drouth area, are on the borderline; that farmers will need seed loans, as well as feed loans and subsistence grants.

The conference is expected to prepare a program of well digging and reservoir construction, Ryland said, and chart a works program to insure drouth sufferers employment throughout the winter. The conference, beginning at 2 o'clock, will be in the Governor's office.

Ryland's survey will be supplemented, at the meeting, by the latest statistical reports on the drouth by J. W. Burch, director of the State Agricultural Extension Service; E. A. Logan, State agricultural statistician; R. W. Brown, Jefferson City, president of the Missouri Farm Bureau; Dean F. B. Mumford of the Missouri College of Agriculture, and J. W. Head, Palmyra, chairman of the State Agricultural Advisory Committee.

Others expected to attend include Kenyon Harmon, Columbia, State co-ordinator of the Soil Conservation Service, who is employing 1700 farmers on projects in Central Missouri; W. Cochel, editor of the Weekly Kansas City Star; L. J. Norton and W. S. Brock of the Production Credit Corporation of St. Louis; John F. Nicholson, Columbia, State director of the Rural Rehabilitation Division of the Resettlement Administration, and Paul D. Kelleter, St. Louis, Federal Forest Supervisor for Eastern Missouri.

Counties not, as yet, designated in the official drouth area, are: St. Louis, Jefferson, Ste. Genevieve, Perry, Cape Girardeau, Scott, Mississippi, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Dunklin, Stoddard, Butler, Atchinson, Nodaway, Holt, Andrew and Buchanan.

FULBRIGHT WINS RACE FOR JUDGE BY 1767 VOTES

Complete Returns Show Him Victor Over C. L. Henson in Close Contest.

James F. Fulbright of Doniphan won the Democratic nomination for Judge of the Springfield Court of Appeals over Charles L. Henson of Springfield by 1767 votes, on the basis of complete returns, compiled yesterday. The vote in the 1061 precincts was: Fulbright, 38,962; Henson, 37,195.

The race had been one of the closest of the Missouri primary election last Tuesday, and Henson had held a slight lead from the time the first returns came in until Friday night, when Fulbright took the lead. The vote count was official in 33 of the district's 44 counties.

M'KITTRICK ASKS R. C. GOSHORN IF HE HAS EVIDENCE

Jefferson City Publisher Requested to Give Facts About "Other Initiative Petitions."

PAPER ATTACKED CODE INVESTIGATION

It Alleges Same Circulation Methods Were Used to Get Names for Other Measures.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 8.—Attorney-General McKittrick today called on R. C. Goshorn, Jefferson City publisher, for any evidence he might have to substantiate charges, published in one of his newspapers, that the same methods were used in circulating petitions for every initiative proposal ever adopted in Missouri as were used for the insurance code proposal, which was barred from the November election ballot Thursday by court order because of fraud.

The newspaper article attacked McKittrick for his activity in investigating the insurance code proposal, which, had it been placed on the ballot, would have resulted in a $275,000 raid on the State treasury for the benefit of Democratic rural newspapers which caused the petitions for submission of the proposal to be circulated and filed with the Secretary of State. The proposal was a reprint of a bill which failed of passage in the 1935 Legislature.

Circuit Judge E. L. Alford, of Hannibal, sitting as a special judge in Cole County Circuit Court, issued a permanent injunction Thursday restraining Secretary of State Brown from publishing the proposal in one newspaper in each county of the State, and from certifying it to election officials for a place on the ballot of the general election in November. The injunction suit was filed by McKittrick, and the court order sustained the Attorney-General's charges of fraud in the circulation of the initiate petitions.

Goshorn could not be reached for a statement today and employes in his office said they did not know where he could be found. He is head of a company which publishes a Democratic morning newspaper and a Republican evening newspaper in Jefferson City, and is president of the Missouri Press Association.

Evidence developed in McKittrick's investigation of the proposal showed that persons who circulated the petitions in Cole County were employed by Goshorn's newspapers and the petitions for the county were notarized by Goshorn's secretary.

When the petitions were placed in circulation the identity of the sponsors of the proposal, which would have revised the entire insurance code of Missouri, was shrouded in mystery. It was opposed by State Insurance Superintendent R. E. O'Malley and by the insurance companies.

The fact that the petitions were being circulated at the instance of rural Democratic newspapers was first published by the Post-Dispatch last June 5. Had the proposal gone on the ballot one newspaper in each county of the State, to be selected by Secretary of State Dwight H. Brown, Democrat and candidate for re-election, would have received about $2400 for publication of the text of the proposal in advance of the November election.

What Goshorn's Paper Said.

The newspaper article, in commenting on the issuance of the injunction barring the insurance code proposal from the ballot, said McKittrick "Stood credited with the doubtful distinction of having killed the initiative and referendum as a means of submitting proposals to a vote of the people. . . ."

It was further asserted that "Every law written into the statutes by the initiative is illegal if the same test is applied to them as was used to keep the insurance code off the ballot."

Evidence submitted by McKittrick in the injunction suit attacked the validity of about 12,000 of the approximately 50,000 signatures attached to the insurance code petitions filed from 10 of the 13 Congressional Districts of the State. The charges involved fraud, illegal affidavits, forgery of signatures, and other irregularities.

After the investigation had been in progress for some time, about 15 rural publishers, following a conference with McKittrick, issued a statement that the petitions had been circulated at the instance of the rural newspapers, and that about 80 newspapers had contributed to a fund to pay the expenses. The statement condemned the fraud that had been developed in the Attorney-General's inquiry, and promised co-operation of the newspapers in the investigation.

McKittrick Letter to Goshorn.

McKittrick, in a letter sent to Goshorn today, called attention to the charges in the newspaper article that the same methods had been used for other initiative petitions as were used for the insurance code measure. "As you know," he said, "the court has sustained this department's charges of fraud in obtaining signatures to petitions for the initiative insurance code."

He also called attention to a statement that some of the persons who circulated the insurance code petitions also circulated petitions for submission of a proposed constitutional amendment to create a non-partisan state conservation commission, to supervise game, fish, wild life and forestry conservation work in Missouri.

"If you have any information or evidence upon which such statements are based," McKittrick said, "that there is fraud connected with the obtaining of signatures to the fish and game petitions or any other initiative petitions, present or past, will you please submit it to this department?"

AFFAIR FOUND OUT; EX-CONVICT KILLS WOMAN AND HER FAMILY

Confesses Murdering Three After Her Daughter Discovers Illicit Relationship.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 8.—Capt. Matt Leach of the State police, after questioning Harry Singer today, said the 25-year-old ex-convict admitted killing Mr. and Mrs. John Fielding Wesley and their 12-year-old daughter, Marjorie, at the Wesley farm near Wabash, Ind.

Leach said Singer declared his motive was fear of discovery of his illicit relationship with Mrs. Wesley which had been discovered by the child.

Leach said Singer declared he feared the daughter would inform her father and he killed the mother with a shotgun and then beat the daughter to death. He then lay in wait and killed Wesley on his return home, Singer said.

Wins Nomination by One Vote.

By the Associated Press.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., Aug. 8.—Carl Lamb nosed out Alex Nichols, his primary opponent for nomination as Johnson County Sheriff, by one vote, after a tabulation of the absentee votes today. The two were tied after a count of the regular votes.

REFINERY STRIKE HAS KEPT 2200 IDLE FOUR WEEKS

Walkout of 750 Shell Engineers Appears No Nearer Settlement Than When It Began.

The fifth week of idleness for the 2200 employes of the Shell Petroleum Co. refinery at Wood River, Ill., caused by the strike of 750 members of the Operating Engineers' Union, will begin tomorrow with no prospect of settlement in sight.

The efforts of W. F. White, conciliator of the United States Department of Labor, who came from Washington last week to assist in bringing about an agreement, have failed. Picketing of Shell filling stations at Alton, East Alton, Roxana and Wood River, suspended during White's negotiations last week, has been resumed.

Representatives of both union and company are agreed that reconciliation is as remote today as it was July 12 when the activities at the extensive plant were suspended by the strike order. The remaining 1500 employes, members of other unions, have declined to support the walkout.

Issue in Walkout.

Union officers said the strike was called because one of their members was dismissed, accused of sleeping on duty. They contended he was not asleep and that other union members had been discharged when they failed to sign individual employment agreements. Offers of the company to arbitrate this dispute have met with union refusal, Shell officers asserted.

"It has now been definitely established," the Shell company announced in a statement yesterday, "that the discharge of Don Boren for sleeping while on duty was not the actual motive. The early reopening of our Wood River refinery, therefore, appears highly improbable."

At a meeting of company representatives, agents of other unions not participating in the strike, and of the engineers, the spokesman for the latter group stated that the discharge of Boren was not the real cause of the strike, but that the engineers' local wanted a new contract with the company, the Shell statement continued. They declined, however, to set forth their terms.

Terms "Unacceptable."

At a later meeting last Wednesday, the company stated, the new set of demands was presented "which contain stipulations wholly unacceptable to the company." Wage increases of from 8 to 20 per cent were stipulated. They asked for a closed shop and observance of strict seniority in regard to promotion and pay, unmodified by the "merit clause" contained in the previous contract.

The proposed contract, according to the company, carried no provision for arbitration, but specified that disputes would be reviewed by a committee of the engineers and of the company, and in the event of disagreement would be referred to officers of the International Union for final adjustment.

"It is usual," the statement pointed out, "in all labor contracts to provide for the arbitration of disputes, by calling in disinterested third parties whose decision will be accepted by both employe and employer.

"The engineers would not include in the agreement the 'no-strike, no-lockout' provision customarily placed in such agreements for the purpose of showing good faith of both parties."

Wage Question.

As to the requested wage increase, the company pointed out that a separate wage arrangement last September with the employes provided general wage increases of about 4½ per cent, retroactive to Aug. 27, 1935, and that July 1, they had received an unsolicited wage raise of about 4 per cent.

"The Operating Engineers' demands clearly indicate that their objective is to obtain special terms and privileges far beyond the standards established by and satisfactory to the other 13 International Unions represented at the plant," the statement concluded. "Obviously, to accede to these demands for special rights would be to establish a preferential class at the refinery.

"As a result, at the meeting Thursday the company had no alternative but to reject the demands. However, before so doing, the company appealed to the engineers to return to work under the terms and provisions of their former contract. This proposal of the company was rejected and all pending negotiations have been terminated."

Strikers' Case, as Presented by Union Secretary Kelahan.

Presenting the striking employes' point of view, Secretary Joseph R. Kelahan of the engineers' union said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the union proposal was made at the meeting Wednesday in the belief that acceptance or counter-proposal would be received from the company at the Thursday conference.

The company flatly refused to discuss the agreement in any manner except to reject it as a whole," Kelahan said. "The only alternative offered was that we could go back to work under the 1935 contract, which was canceled by unanimous vote of the union members on the termination date.

"Dissatisfaction with it was due largely to the inequitable representation plan under its clauses whereby our union, with almost one-half of plant employes, had no more voting power than any one of the 13 other unions, one of them with as few as seven members. It was impossible to discuss conditions peculiar to the craft under that type of agreement.

"The wage increase we sought was from 5 to 7 per cent. While the company stated that other crafts are satisfied with conditions, it is a well-known fact that several others are ready to cancel out when contracts have expired.

"The 1935 agreement created a condition similar to an endurance contest under which it became a gamble whether the union would wear itself out through unfruitful bargaining and arbitration or whether the forces of the company, who admit openly they are opposed to present employes' organizations of engineers and others, could destroy those organizations by systematic trickery. The contract we offered contained nothing uncommon to similar agreements in the community."

HELD IN KILLING

AUGUST WESSLER.

BEER DRIVER HELD, DENIES WITNESSES' STORY OF KILLING

August Wessler Asserts Clarence Bosler Shot Self in Scuffle for Pistol in Tavern.

August Wessler, beer truck driver, who witnesses said shot to death another beer truck driver, Clarence Bosler, in a tavern at 2870 Missouri avenue early yesterday morning, as the result of a quarrel over failure of their union to send flowers to the funeral of a wife of a member, yesterday afternoon declared to police Bosler shot himself in a struggle over a revolver.

In a signed statement made to police of the Wyoming Street station, Wessler contradicted the stories of two witnesses. He related what the police already knew, that the trouble started at 8 p. m. Friday in a saloon at 2000 Shenandoah avenue, when Christian Fexer, 3127 South Jefferson avenue, a beer truck driver whose wife was buried Friday, denounced the union as being "too cheap to send my wife a $3 bouquet."

Wessler threatened to report Fexer's statement to the union, and a brawl, in which several men took part, followed in front of the saloon. After they had continued the bickering over drinks in a saloon in the 1900 block of Shenandoah, Wessler drove away.

Tells of Pistol Display.

Later, Wessler returned to one of the taverns and picked up an acquaintance, James O'Toole, 2416 Lemp avenue, and then drove to the Missouri avenue saloon. On the way, O'Toole related, Wessler said, "I have some trouble to clean up," displayed two revolvers, and then said, "I have to shoot a guy."

In his statement, Wessler denied he said any of those things or that he had any weapon. He said he went to the Missouri avenue tavern "without any thought of trouble." He started to go into the washroom there, he asserted, when Bosler came out and said, "I thought I told you to stay out of South St. Louis."

Then Bosler drew a revolver and said, "I'm gonna take care of you now," Wessler declared. Wessler said he grappled with Bosler, and was thrown to the floor, with Bosler on top of him. "Then the gun went off several times in Bosler's hand," Wessler said, "and Bosler got up and walked to the street. I drove home, and detectives arres me outside my house."

Witnesses' Story Different.

However, another witness, William Watson, a WPA laborer, 312 Lemp avenue, declared that after several shots were fired in the washroom, the men lurched out and there was a revolver in Wessler's hand. Watson said he wrenched the weapon from Wessler, and Wessler drew a second revolver and ran outside to his automobile. Bosler, shot three times, staggered outside. He died on arrival at City Hospital. The second revolver was found at Wessler's home, 881 North Broadway, when detectives arrested him there three hours after the killing.

Bosler, who was married, lived at 3127A South Jefferson avenue.

JOBLESS APPEAL TO HOPKINS

Seek Resumption of WPA Work at Belleville, Scott Field.

Roy Wilkes, secretary of the Belleville WPA Workers' Association, sent a request yesterday to Harry L. Hopkins, works progress administrator, requesting approval and resumption of WPA work at Belleville and Scott Field.

Wilkes said 450 men had been without employment since June 20, and most of these had been unable to get local unemployment relief since relief administration was turned over by the State to townships last July 1. Lack of funds stopped the public works.

Mendenhall Auto Co. Observes Twentieth Business Anniversary

Concern Founded Aug. 6, 1916, by the Late William J. Mendenhall, Occupies 3 Buildings.

The twentieth anniversary of the Mendenhall Motor Co., oldest and largest Ford dealer in the St. Louis metropolitan area, was observed Thursday.

It was in the first floor of the building still occupied by the company at 2315 Locust street, that the business was started by the late William J. Mendenhall and his wife, Mrs. Estelle S. Mendenhall, Aug. 6, 1916. Exposition officials and city executives headed a throng which greeted the arrival of the 3,000,000th V-8 Ford at the Texas Centennial Exposition at Dallas. The car, arriving at the Ford building, was flying the six flags of Texas history and bearing special license plates of the six states through which it passed en route from Dearborn to Dallas. Reo Sales Activity In U. S. and Abroad In Hands of Poxson

G. E. Smith Appointed Assistant General Manager—Triphagen Has Resigned.

George E. Smith, vice-president and purchasing manager of the Reo Motor Co., Lansing, Mich., has been made assistant general manager.

In addition, Don E. Bates, president and general manager of Reo, announces that domestic sales activities have been transferred to the Reo Sales Corporation, whose president, Elijah G. Poxson, will have charge of both foreign and domestic sales.

"There is no intention of changing the policy on domestic sales," Poxson said. "However, we have a number of plans for expanding and promoting Reo sales in this country and abroad."

The Reo Sales Corporation originally was organized as the operating company for wholesale branch houses. Later, all foreign sales activities were placed under the sales corporation, which now absorbs the entire Reo sales division.

C. A. Triphagen, formerly sales manager, has resigned. T. F. Cullen has been named advertising manager, and Charles Boutelle has been placed in charge of domestic sales under Poxson.

Smith was one of the founders of the Reo Motor Car Co. in 1904, and has been purchasing manager since Reo was first organized. He has been a director of the company for almost 30 years.

Poxson joined Reo in 1924 as manager of the Reo Speed Wagon division. Later he was made assistant general sales manager, then general sales manager and, in 1934, president of the Reo Sales Corporation.

Farm Dollar Buys Three Times as Much Tire as 3 Years Ago

The farm dollar today will go twice as far in the purchase of automobie tires as it did three years ago, it is shown by recent research by the United States Rubber Co. Statisticians took the 1933 price of one of the most popular size U. S. Royals, 4.75x19, and the 1933 unit prices of various farm commodities, and determined the quantity of commodities needed to buy the tire in that year. Then they took similar prices for 1936 and made similar calculations. A comparison of the 1936 and 1933 figures revealed how the cost of the tire had decreased in terms of farm commodities.

For example, the farmer who raised hogs in 1933 had to pay the equivalent of 227 pounds to buy the 4.75x19 U. S. Royal. Today he can buy the same tire for the equivalent of 87 pounds.

Expressed in terms of wheat, 19.4 bushels were required to buy the tire in 1933. Today only 9.4 bushels are needed. Three years ago, the farmer had to part with the equivalent of 33.2 bushels of corn. Today 14.3 bushels will close the deal. Similarly, 115 pounds of cotton were needed in 1933. Today only 73.1 pounds are required.

Kreyling, who is widely known in the St. Louis territory in automotive and specialty sales circles, uses a special truck as his traveling sales toom and office. The truck, a standard Plymouth commerical sedan, carries a full line of Chrysler and Plymouth accessories and steel bins of emergency parts. The new service operated by Kreyling, Clarence C. Zak, manager of L. M. Stewart, Inc., parts and accessories division, already has been welcomed by dealers and service men throughout the territory.

TWA Authorizes Improvement Program To Cost $2,500,000

An equipment purchase and improvement program announced by Transcontinental & Western Air, Inc., involves an expenditure of $2,500,000, according to Jack Frye, president of the company. Principal items in this program are:

Appropriation of $1,950,000 for construction of the nucleus of a fleet of new super-transport aircraft, development and research work in four-engined transport planes, and experimentation in "overweather" flight with specially designed equipment.

Investment of $350,000 in conversion of TWA's present fleet of Douglas aircraft to higher horsepower, which will increase speed and efficiency of these craft further beyond present levels which have permitted TWA to maintain the world's fastest schedules.

The remainder of the $2,500,000 will be applied to certain additions to present equipment, airport improvements and other facilities.

Engineers of TWA have been working for the past eight months with Douglas Aircraft Corporation to design a new super-transport airplane to meet specifications calling for the highest known standards in safety, passenger comfort and speed. It is expected this entire super-fleet will be in service within six months.

Setting new leveles in luxury and efficiency, the new super-transport will have the best of sleeper and day plane accommodations incorporated into its design. A special kitchen for meals aloft and other innovations will be provided. Soundproofing to a new degree is provided as well as new standards in other passenger comforts. Accommodations for 23 persons are called for in present plans.

200,000th 1936 Car Leaves Oldsmobile's Lansing Assembly Line

The 200,000th Oldsmobile car produced since the new 1936 models were introduced last fall rolled off the assembly line at Lansing, Mich., the past week.

All previous Oldsmobile production records for any year's model were broken before the 200,000th car was turned out. Its completion marked an increase of 58 per cent in Oldsmobile production over that in 1935 and production of 10 times as many units as the company marketed in 1932.

Hayes Body Corporation Ready for Introducing Line of Home Trailers

A line of "motor-home" tourist trailers is being produced by the Hayes Body Corporation of Grand Rapids, Mich., one of the largest independent builders of fine automobile bodies and a factor in the motor car industry since it began.

Various estimates are that there are 100,000 to 200,000 trailers in use at the present time. The new Hayes line is low priced, of safety steel construction, with interiors planned for comfort and efficiency and finished with chromium fixtures and fine cabinetwork and every home convenience.

A distributor-dealer organization is now being formed to market the Hayes touring trailer and first deliveries are planned early in September.

Chevrolet Rolls Its 12,000,000th Car Off Assembly Line

It's All-Time Sales Record on 1936 Model Possible Because of $25,000,000 Expansion.

Chevrolet's expenditure of $25,000,000 on expanding manufacturing and assembly facilities in the second half of 1935, has already proved its value, according to officials of the Chevrolet Motor Co., and enable it to produce cars in sufficient numbers to make possible the new all-time Chevrolet sales records set in the first six months of 1936. Even with the stepped-up production, it is stated, Chevrolet dealers now have in stock no more than a three weeks' supply of units.

The 12,000,000th Chevrolet car came off the assembly line the past week, M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of Chevrolet, said that credit for the record-breaking rate of production belonged to C. E. Wetherald, vice-president in charge of manufacturing, and W. C. Williams, Jr., supervisor of assembly plants.

Wetherald is charged with the operation of all the plants in which Chevrolet builds its own units, including engines, transmissions, axles, wheels, carburetors and other vital elements. The management of the plants in 10 different cities of the United States in which these units are put together in cars and trucks is Williams' job. Each is thus responsible for the employment of thousands of productive workers, and the maintenance of production at the rate required to meet the demands of Chevrolet's 10,000 dealers.

Since the manufacturing and assembly plants began on the 1936 model Chevrolets in October, a total of 1,182,000 units have been produced. New records were set for three of the months, and in all but two months' production was over the 100,000 mark. In June and July the totals exceeded 143,000 monthly. The 11,000,000th Chevrolet was built Dec. 4, 1935, and the 12,000,000th was scheduled for Aug. 5, 1936, eight months later.

Cadillac Sales Hit Nine-Year High Level

A new nine-year high for July shipments of Cadillac and La Salle cars is assured by field reports arriving at the office, Don E. Ahrens, general salesmanager of the Cadillac Motor Car Co., states.

"With only a few scattered reports still to be received, the figures show that July sales ran at least 33 per cent above those in July of a year ago," says Ahrens. "Neither our July sales total nor our sales for the first seven months of this year has been matched since 1929. All of our lines, including the Cadillac, La Salle and Cadillac-Fleetwood cars, contributed toward the rise in sales volume."

Stock Market Is at the Highest Average Level Since June, 1931; Rails Advance Late in the Week

Three Divisions of the Associated Press Share Average Reach New Tops Simultaneously —60 Stock Group at 6-Year Record, 69.6.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Signs of hesitancy in some lines of industry failed to check Wall Street's appetite for common stocks last week and the market pushed up to the highest average level since June, 1931.

Analyists said the driving forces behind the share market were the same as in recent weeks: The general conviction that further business gains lie ahead, the huge pile of cash lying idle in banks and the comparative absence of demand for funds in other channels.

As the week came to a close a new factor loomed on the foreign horizon. This was the sharp tone of the official German protest against reported executions of German Nationals in Spain. Wall streeters feared this might bring a hitch in France's plea for non-interference in Spain and result in a spreading of serious unsettlement on the continent.

That equities put on a good burst of speed in spite of these developments indicated the market was in good condition, it was said in street.

Explaining its resilience, they pointed to firmer scrap steel prices expanding building contracts, a contra-seasonal rise in freight carloadings and sharp gains in retail sales in July.

Early in the week the stock market had a faltering spell as traders sold motors and aircrafts.

Liquidation in the former group was said to have reflected disappointment in some circles over the failure of General Motors to declare a more liberal extra dividend than 75 cents.

Rails Lead Rebound.

Offerings of aviation issues was believed to have been touched off by the decline in earnings of Douglas Aircraft in the first six months.

As trading approached the finish, however, doubts were dispelled by the vigorous manner in which the rails stepped to the fore. Estimates of sharp fall loadings upturns stimulated demand, experts said.

Bonds shuffled along a narrow path at the start of the week. Later industrial loans and U. S. Government obligations broke into a forward gait which carried them to within striking distance of the year's high. Italian issues bumped into nervous selling which was ascribed to the darkening of clouds over the Spanish civil war.

The grain market was a touch-and-go affair with drouth news at home and weather in foreign producing countries playing important parts. Wheat and corn were under pressure. In cotton the sellers likewise had the advantage.

The high spot of the foreign exchange market was the relapse of the French franc below the point at which it became profitable to ship gold from Paris to New York.

The money market was unruffled with excess reserves unchanged at $3,050,000,000 for the week ended Wednesday.

Sales during the week amounted to 7,047,870 shares, compared with 9,290,980 last week and 9,737,980 corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 303,040,834 shares, compared with 168,538,948 a year ago and 243,029,630 two years ago.

New Peak at Weekend.

The share market pushed vigorously ahead at final session to new average peaks since June, 1931, leaders showing advances of fractions to around 2 points along with highly unusual vitality for a weekend session.

For the first time since February of this year all three divisions of the Associated Press share average reached new tops simultaneously, while the 60-stock compilation touched its six-year record at 69.6, up .5 of a point.

The 30 industrials, at 92.0, and the 10-issue divisions of rails at 41.3 and utilities at 53.4 were each at tops for four years or longer.

Leadership was asserted by a number of rails, utilities and relatively high-priced specialties, but the gains were sown in orderly rows throughout the list. Stocks ahead outnumbered losers by more than 2 to 1. The total number of issues traded, 740, was large for the abbreviated session.

With two prime pieces of news important to Wall street scheduled after the close of share dealings, observers were particularly impressed that trading was so active. Turnover in the Stock Exchange was 865,270 shares, the liveliest two-hour day, with one exception, since early April.

General Motors Record Sales.

The General Motors monthly sales report showing the greatest disposal of cars and trucks for July and for the seven months in its history and the Government cotton report, predicting a somewhat larger-than-expected crop of 12,481,000 bales, veteran market men said, might usually have been calculated to hold Saturday trading volume down.

General Motors shares moved along rather calmly, tenth on the list in point of activity, and ended with a gain of ½ point at 69⅝.

Uncommon attention was accorded the Federal cotton figures due to the wide divergence of private estimates of the crop total which had resulted from uncertainty regarding drouth damage. New York and New Orleans markets did not trade after the report, but at Chicago the fiber futures lost $1.45 to $1.80 a bale. The earlier New York closing was 20 cents lower to 5 cents higher.

Non-ferrous metal stocks found a few willing buyers, although trading was not especially active. Sentiment was friendly to the group, observers said, because of the rise in export copper prices to the 9.60@9.62½ cent level, the best in more than six years. Some analysts have suggested that another boost in the 9¾-cent domestic price might be in order shortly.

Kennecott at 46 and McIntyre Porcupine at 41½ each added more than a point, while fractional improvement was recorded for Anaconda at 40, International Nickel at 51⅞ and Cerro de Pasco at 53.

General Electric Top 48¼.

General Electric was the day's most active stock, advancing more than a point at 47¾, after having been at 48¼ for a time, a new 1936 top. Some brokerage observers cited the gains in electric power output week after week as pointing to the likelihood of a nearby set-up in demand for heavy electrical equipment.

Among active shares ahead fractions to more than a point were American Water Works at 26¾, North American at 35, Illinois Central at 26½, Santa Fe at 88, Sears-Roebuck at 84⅜, Continental Can at 70½, Consolidated Edison at 43⅝, Union Pacific at 145, Bethlehem at 59⅛, U. S. Steel at 68¼ and International Harvester at 83½.

A small group of assorted issues managed to add up to 3 points, including Allied Chemical at 245, Westinghouse at 143⅝ and American Can at 122½. Western Union was bought following the good earnings report issued overnight.

Bonds, especially the rails, followed the share market higher, although Italian loans were again unsettled. Foreign currencies edged a bit ahead against the dollar. Wheat improved ⅝ to 1¼ cents a bushel, while corn was ⅛ of a cent off to ⅜ better.

MOST RESERVES NOW ABOVE NEW DEMANDS

Local Federal Reserve Bank Head Says Few May Need Increased Funds by Saturday.

Most banks in this Federal Reserve District are already carrying excess reserves with the Federal Reserve Bank and will not be affected by the increase in reserve requirements which will go into effect next Saturday, it was said yesterday by William McC. Martin, president of the bank.

There are a few banks, Martin said, which will be called on to increase their reserve deposits. He had no definite information of what the increase woud amount to, but thought it might be in the neighborhood of $5,000,000.

As of June 30, Martin said, banks in this district had reserves of $154,000,000 on deposit with the Federal Reserve Bank. The required reserves on that date were $73,000,000. Assuming that deposits on Aug. 15, the effective date of the new reserve rates, will be equal to those of June 30, the required reserves will be $110,000,000, or $44,000,000 less than the actual reserve deposits on June 30.

The increase was ordered by the Federal Reserve Board to forestall what it termed any possible "injurious credit expansion." Nationally it is expected to cut down the present excess reserves of over $3,000,000,000—representing potential credit expansion of 10 times that amount—to about $1,900,000,000.

For St. Louis, Memphis, Louisville, and Little Rock, the Federal Reserve cities in this district, the new reserve requirement will be that banks keep on deposit with the Federal Reserve Bank 15 per cent of their demand deposits, instead of 10 per cent as at present. Banks in other cities within the district will be required to keep 10½ per cent of their demand deposits with the Federal Reserve Bank, instead of 7 per cent, as at present.

For time deposits the reserve requirement is uniform throughout the district, 4½ per cent instead of 3 per cent as at present.

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY BEST SINCE FEB. 1930

Index of Associated Press Stands at 95.8 Per Cent of the 1929-30 Average.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8. — Industry in the last week extended its march toward 1929 levels, as measured by leading business barometers.

For the tenth consecutive week the Associated Press index of industrial activity, adjusted for seasonal variations, scaled new heights on the major recovery movement.

It stands at 95.8 per cent of the 1929-30 average compared with 95.3 the preceding week and 72.6 a year ago, when the sustained upturn of heavy industry was gathering headway.

The index now is the highest since February, 1930. At that time business was trying to rally from the first effects of the disastrous stock market crash the preceding October and November.

Four of Six Higher.

Four of the six components of the index worked out at higher figures. Automobile production dropped more than seasonally as makers began to curtail in preparation for new models. But it remained far above the comparable 1935 figure.

Steel activity eased from the peak operations maintained through most of July. That index also was widely above the comparable figure last year.

The general industrial index derived its support chiefly from an unexpected increase in freight car loadings, which lifted the total to the highest since October, 1931, and brisk operations in the cotton textile industry, which has been stimulated by higher prices for raw material and good domestic demand.

Residential building, the laggard in the recovery march, moved up a few notches as if out to make up for lost ground. Home building was calculated as running in excess of seasonal expectations.

The Index.

Adjusted for seasonal change on basis of latest available statistics, with 1929-30 activity equal to 100, the index follows:

	Latest Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Year Ago
*Composite index —	95.8	95.3	72.6
Automobile prod. —	91.2	105.3	53.6
Steel mill activity—	95.8	96	61.7
*Cotton mfg.— — —	115.3	107.7	82.8
Electric power prod.	114.6	114.4	101.9
*Residential bldg. —	57.2	54.6	40.3
*Total carloadings—	76.1	74.2	60.8

Resumption of Gold Shipments From Paris as Franc Declines

International Banking Quarters Report Engagement of $7,000,000—First Since June 19.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—European currencies displayed a silghtly steadier tone in terms of the dollar today, although the upturn failed to check the flow of gold from Paris.

International banking quarters reported the engagement in Paris of $5,500,000, bringing to around $7,000,000 the total for the current movement which began Friday when the franc yielded below its export point for the first time since June 19.

The usual Saturday closing of exchange markets in Paris was believed partially responsible for the better showing of the franc, which closed .001-6 of a cent higher. A certain amount of short covering for the week-end layoff was believed to have taken place.

The Holland guilder advanced .04 of a cent, Swiss francs improved .00½ of a cent, and the British pound sterling climbed 5-16 of a cent. A "nominal" quotation of 13.65c was posted for the Spanish peseta but there was no business in this unit, which has been without the benefit of a quotation for more than a week due to the moratorium in Spain and highly unsettled markets for the unit in outside centers.

The dollar closed in London at 5.02¾ and in Paris it was quoted unofficially at 6.583 cents to the franc.

Although foreign currencies remained fairly steady in terms of the dollar during the major part of the week the exchange market was not entirely free of the tension growing out of the civil war in Spain.

Coincident with Friday's decline in the French unit to 6.58 5-16 cents it was made known that gold to the amount of $1,500,000 had been engaged in Paris for shipment here.

At its best level the franc was around 6.59¼ cents.

The situation in Spanish pesetas received attention through the action of a group of large New York banks in agreeing to hold contracts in the unit until September. It is expected that this agreement will be renewed before that date should the nation's banking moratorium continue in effect.

Special Tide Water Oil Dividend.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Directors of Tide Water Oil Co. today declared a special dividend of 55 cents a share on the common, payable Aug. 19 to stock of record Aug. 18. The last payment was 50 cents on May 11.

Demand deposits decreased $4,922,000 to $275,970,000; bank deposits increased $1,736,00 0to $162,991,000; time deposits increased $367,000 to $100,417,000; total deposits decreased $2,819,000 to $539,378,000; bond and stock accounts increased $513,000 to $266,854,000; total resources decreased $2,594,000 to $594,346,000; total lawful reserves decreased $6,750,000 to $73,343,000.

Total clearings last week (five days—banks closed primary election day), amounted to $81,000,000, compared with $86,800,000 the previous week. Debits to individual accounts last week totaled $121,500,000 compared with $126,800,000 the preceding week and $89,100,000 the corresponding week last year. The daily average debits to individual accounts last week was $24,300,000, compared with $21,133,000 the previous week and $17,820,000 corresponding week last year.

Local money rates were as follows: Prime commercial paper, ¾@1 per cent; customers' loans, 1½@5 per cent; collateral loans, 2@6 per cent; loans secured by warehouse receipts, 1@5 per cent.

St. Paul Railway Car Loadings.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—The Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad reported today revenue cars loaded and received Aug. 1 to 7 totaled 32,009, against 24,054 the corresponding 1935 period and 30,962 the corresponding period in July.

Washington Commerce Notes

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—A rise in the index of department store sales during June to the highest level of the year was reported today by the Federal Reserve Board. The seasonally adjusted index reached a peak of 88, one point above the May figure and nine points above the level recorded in June, 1935.

The index of department store stocks stood at 64 during June, one point lower than the previous month and one point higher than the corresponding month last year.

Steadily increasing activity in the building trades was reflected in June shipments of prepared roofing, which rose 10 per cent above the previous month.

The Commerce Department reported that 14,435,047 squares of roofing material were shipped during the first half of this year, an increase of 20 per cent over the first six months of 1935 and 31 per cent above the comparable period in 1934.

Petroleum production in Venezuela, where American companies have large investments, increased 7½ per cent during the first half of 1936 as compared with the same period last year, reaching a total for the period of 11,348,000 metric tons.

Exports for the six months rose 12½ per cent above the first half of 1935, with shipments totaling 10,982,329 metric tons.

The monthly Federal Reserve bulletin showed an $18,000,000 pick-up in postal savings bank deposits during June, when depositors' balances reached a year's peak of $1,232,000,000. Deposits in the same month of 1935 were $1,205,000,000.

The increase proved unexpected to some financial authorities, who had predicted that Federal insurance of deposits in commercial banks might lead to a falling off of postal savings bank allowances.

Return of $118,197,816 to depositors and creditors in banks liquidated since the banking holiday of March, 1933, was reported today by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency. Returns averaged more than 74 per cent of the banks' total liabilities.

Dividend payments to creditors of all active receiverships have totaled $773,186,126 since the bank holiday.

PRICE OF EXPORT COPPER HIGHEST SINCE MAY '31

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—With the wave of foreign buying gaining force daily, the price of export copper today reached 9.60@9.62½ cents per pound, the best since May, 1931.

For some time the greatest portion of European copper consumption has been by armament and munitions manufacturers. The unsettling Spanish situation and its threat to international peace has primed the war materials' pump in at least eight of Europe's major countries.

Unlike the demand from abroad, domestic consumption has improved primarily as a result of general business recovery. Utility buying of copper for new distribution lines and generating equipment along with substantial orders from railroads, the Government and the automobile industry, have operated to strengthen the domestic market.

Although the latter market was quiet today, its tone was firm with quotations unchanged at 9.75 cents a pound. Local trade circles are debating the likelihood of a further rise in the domestic price.

Cotton Crop 1,842,609 Bales Larger Than Last Year's Is Forecast in First Production Report of Year

Estimate Is Above Average of Private Crop Summaries and Brings Selling Into Market and Price Drop.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—A cotton crop 1,842,609 bales larger than last year's was forecast today by the Department of Agriculture.

In its first production report of the season, the department estimated the amount to be grown in the United States this year at 12,481,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight compared with 10,638,391 last year and 9,636,000 in 1934.

The report said the indicated yield per acre was 199.7 pounds, 13.4 pounds more than for 1935, 28.1 more than 1934 and 29.8 more than the 10-year average of 1923-32.

The condition this year, at 72.3 per cent of normal, was slightly under the 73.6 percentage for last year but well above the 1934 average of 60.4 and the 10-year average of 67.7.

States adjoining the Mississippi River were said to "have especially favorable prospects." Record yields were forecast for Missouri and Mississippi.

Better Than Average Yield.

Better than average yields per acre were listed for all states except Virginia, the Carolinas and Oklahoma, the latter being hard hit by the drouth.

The department said dry weather also affected cotton in Virginia and the Carolinas and part of the crop in North Georgia.

Earlier private forecasts of the crop had ranged from 11,500,000 bales to 12,700,000.

The crop in Texas, largest producing State, was estimated at 3,850,000 bales, well above the 1935 crop of 2,956,000.

Loss caused by boll weevil this season was indicated at less than average.

The record production—in 1926-27—was 17,978,000 bales. The five-year average, 1928-32, was 14,667,000 bales. The yield forecast for California has been exceeded only once while that for Arkansas has been topped only once in 30 years.

Condition by States.

The cotton acreage this year is 9.8 per cent larger than that of last year. It is placed by the department at 29,924,000 acres, after deducting 2.3 per cent—the average abandonment for the last 10 years—From the area in cultivation July 1.

The condition of the crop Aug. 1 was 72.3 per cent of normal, compared with 73.6 a year ago and 67.7, the 1923-32 average.

Indicated yield per acre was 199.7 pounds, compared with 186.3 last year and 169.9, the 1923-32 average.

The Census Bureau announced ginnings prior to Aug. 1 totaled 41,130 running bales, counting round as half bales, compared with 94,346 for last year and 99,787 for 1934.

Cotton futures on the Chicago Board of Trade, the only market open after the forecast was made public, broke 28 to 42 points.

Drop in Price.

In the official cotton report the world carryover of United States cotton on Aug. 1 was placed at 7,100,000 bales, compared with 9,040,000 on the corresponding date last year. The domestic carryover was estimated at 5,450,000 bales against 7,200,000 in 1935.

The condition of the crop Aug. 1 and indicated production by states follow:

Virginia, condition 62 and indicated production 25,000 bales. North Carolina 60 and 501,000, South Carolina 54 and 586,000, Georgia 60 and 910,000, Florida 76 and 30,000, Missouri 90 and 287,000, Tennessee 81 and 403,000, Alabama 75 and 1,065,000, Mississippi 86 and 1,710,000, Louisiana 79 and 678,000, Texas 72 and 3,850,000, Oklahoma 48 and 465,000, Arkansas 84 and 1,272,000, New Mexico 91 and 101,000, Arizona 90 and 161,000, California 96 and 419,000, all other states 88 and 18,000, lower California (Old Mexico) 98 and 70,000 (latter not included in United States total).

CHICAGO, ONLY MARKET OPEN, BREAKS $1.50 BALE ON REPORT

Extreme Loss on Immediate Response to Forecast is $2 Per Bale.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—A break of 32 to 42 cents a hundred pounds below yesterday's finish occurred in the Board of Trade cotton futures market today after publication of the Government report estimating United States cotton production at 12,481,000 bales, 1,842,609 larger than last year.

After the extreme break, the market rallied 1 to 9 cents to close at a net loss for the session of 29 to 36, equivalent to about $1.50 a bale. October cotton closed at $11.70 a hundred pounds, off 33 cents. December was at $11.78.

Prices had worked 3 to 10 lower when trading was halted for 20 minutes to receive the report. When business was resumed it was extremely active but orderly, but prices fell 23 to 37 immediately. This was the only cotton futures market open after the figures were released.

Trade interpretation of the forecast was bearish inasmuch as many authorities had anticipated the estimte would be smaller. Earlier private forecasts of the crop had ranged from 11,500,000 to 12,700,000.

With other cotton markets closing earlier than Chicago, the trade here attracted unusual attention. More than 50 brokers swarmed before the board. It was estimated about 10,000 bales were traded during the first few minutes after the re-opening.

GENERAL MOTORS JULY AND 7 MONTHS SALES ARE RECORD

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—General Motors Corporation today reported the greatest July and seven months' sales of cars and trucks in its history. The aggregate disposed of to United States and Canadian dealers and shipped abroad last month was 204,693 cars, compared with 167,790 in July last year and 217,931 in the previous month.

For the first seven months this year dealer sales, United States and Canadian and overseas shipments, totaled 1,374,861 units, against 1,056,350 in the same period of 1935.

Sales to consumers in this country in July were 163,459 cars and trucks, against 108,645 in the same month last year and 189,756 for June, 1936.

Dealers in the United States bought from the corporation 177,436 units last month, while a year previous the total was 139,021 and in the preceding month 186,146.

Sales of General Motors cars to consumers in the United States in the first seven months totaled 1,127,910, compared with 757,480 in the first seven months of 1935.

Sales to dealers in the same period aggregated 1,155,710, against 849,245 in the first seven months of 1935.

While the July sales totals in all three classifications were the best for the month, they were still considerably below the all-time record period, April, 1936.

Then the corporation reported world dealer sales of 229,457 cars and trucks, domestic dealer sales of 194,695 units and purchases by United States consumers totaling 200,117.

The best previous July figures were in 1929, when world dealers aggregate was 189,428 units, domestic dealer takings were 157,111 and domestic consumers bought 147,079.

MONETARY GOLD STOCKS SHOW FURTHER INCREASE

Spanish Civil War Seen as Basis of Additional Metal Movement Here.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The gain in the country's monetary gold stock this year has been increased to more than $500,000,000 by recent imports.

While incoming shipments have dwindled to modest figures compared with the heavy spring movement from Europe, the total has continued to creep steadily to new heights, broadening the metal base for potential credit and currency expansion.

Moreover, a sinking spell in European gold currencies since the Spanish civil conflict raised fears of complications pointed to the possibility of another wave of imports. This country absorbed in the first seven months almost as much as the estimated world production of new gold in that period.

The monetary gold stock, as reported by the Federal Reserve banks, compared as follows:

Week ended Aug 5. —$10,650,000,000
Preceding week — — 10,642,000,000
Same week last year 9,158,000,000

Note—Saturday press dispatches said $7,000,000 gold had been engaged to move from Paris.

COMMODITY PRICES LIFTED BY STAPLES

Weighted Index of 35 Important Wholesale Prices Best for Years.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Farm staples hit by drouth continued in the past week to set the pace for a renewed advance of commodity prices.

Bolstered by additional sharp spurts in the major grain markets, the Associated Press weighted index of 35 important wholesale prices touched the highest point recorded in several years.

With agricultural products as a group at a new peak, the main index rose to 80.06 per cent of the 1926 level compared with 79.17 the week before and 74.89 a year ago.

Federal Farm officials had labeled the drouth the worst on record before rains began to fall late in the week over parched Middle West areas.

Moisture was welcomed as a help to the wilted corn crop, but much of it was described as beyond revival and the cereal retained the major part of its spectacular gains in face of a market reaction on the rain reports.

Wheat also finished higher on the week as figures indicated world production this year might leave nothing for carryover as a result of shrinkage in yields in other countries as well as at home.

Rise in Corn Prices.

Farm authorities noted prospects of more agricultural imports and advancing food costs next winter as the full force of drouth losses are felt by the consumer. Domestic supplies of grains and other products, it was pointed out, were cut sharply after the 1934 drouth and only partially replenished by last year's better harvests.

It was feared the rise in corn prices would discourage its feeding to livestock and poultry but experts did not look for the effect on meat prices to be appreciable until next year because of larger supplies coming to the market in the meanwhile.

In fact, livestock quotations entering into the Associated Press wholesale index sagged for the week and were moderately below the figure a year ago.

Food costs as a group rose with basic farm staples. Wholesale centers reported increased buying for inventory both by dealers and consumers in anticipation of higher levels.

Expectations of gains also were held a potent influence in forward buying in household goods and textiles. Generally, however, industrial indexes failed to match the farm group for vigor on the upside.

Non-ferrous metals were lower on the average after the record run of domestic buying of copper last month and the advance to 9¾ cents. The sustained pace of industrial recovery, with steel operations holding around the peak for the movement, was seen as a staunch prop for a large segment of the price structure.

What Index Shows.

Cotton ignored favorable trade news and fell back to lower levels while the market waited the Government's initial estimate of the season's crop.

The index and component groups, with 1926 average wholesale prices equivalent to 100, compared as follows:

	Aug. 7	Prev. week.	Year Ago.

of 1936 as compared with the same period last year, reaching a total for the period of 11,348,000 metric tons.

Exports for the six months rose 12½ per cent above the first half of 1935, with shipments totaling 10,982,329 metric tons.

The monthly Federal Reserve bulletin showed an $18,000,000 pick-up in postal savings bank deposits during June, when depositors' balances reached a year's peak of $1,232,000,000. Deposits in the same month of 1935 were $1,205,000,000.

The increase proved unexpected to some financial authorities, who had predicted that Federal insurance of deposits in commercial banks might lead to a falling off of postal savings bank allowances.

Return of $118,197,816 to depositors and creditors in banks liquidated since the banking holiday of March, 1933, was reported today by J. F. T. O'Connor, Comptroller of the Currency. Returns averaged more than 74 per cent of the banks' total liabilities.

Dividend payments to creditors of all active receiverships have totaled $773,186,126 since the bank holiday.

ment along with substantial orders from railroads, the Government and the automobile industry, have operated to strengthen the domestic market.

BULLISH CANADIAN WHEAT ESTIMATE BOOSTS PRICES

Northern Country's Crop Condition Officially Given as Only 45 Per Cent of Normal.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Aroused by 3 cents Winnipeg rally and by Canadian Government figures showing disastrous crop conditions, the Chicago wheat market late today registered 2⅛ cents upturn.

Canada's wheat crop condition was officially given as only 45 per cent of normal, and was interpreted here to indicate a 1936 yield of between 175,000,000 and 195,000,000 bushels, with even the maximum being the lowest estimate thus far this season. The Canadian crop report compares with earlier prospects of a 400,000,000 bushel harvest and with 1935 production of 260,000,000 bushels.

A special feature of the Canadian Government report was that both for Saskatchewan and Alberta provinces, the chief sources of wheat in Canada, crop condition figures are the lowest in 28 years. The report came as a surprise, such documents being usually issued after the day's trading has ended.

Last-Minute Profit Taking.

With much last-minute realizing of profits, top prices for wheat were not held, and the close here was unsettled, ⅝@1¼ cents above yesterday's finish, Sept., 1.12⅛@¼; Dec., 1.11¾@⅞; May 1.11¼@½; corn, ⅛ off to 3⅛ up; Sept., 1.04¾@⅞; Dec., 93⅛@¼; May, 90@90⅛; oats at ¼ decline to ¼ advance; Dec., 42⅞@43; and rye unchanged to ⅜ higher. Provisions results were 5 to 7 cents down.

Much interest among wheat traders was expressed tonight as to the effect the Canadian crop report would have on the Liverpool market Monday. Action of prices at Liverpool, together with European political developments over the week-end, were regarded as likely to determine to a large degree the course of values here. One leading authority said that assuming exports equal to last season, Canadian stocks of wheat would be completely exhausted Aug. 1, 1937.

Prior to issuance of the Canadian report, which came in the final hour of trading, Chicago wheat prices showed moderate advances that however, were more than overcome at times owing to downturns at Winnipeg. On the other hand, Liverpool wheat values were relatively strong. Unofficial early reports indicated the Canadian wheat yield this season would be the smallest since 1919, when only 165,000,000 bushels were harvested.

Visible Increase Expected.

A moderate increase of the United States wheat visible supply is expected Monday, but trade predictions are that from now on the increases will be very limited. September wheat contracts today scored the best advance, reaching a top of $1.12¾.

Forecasts of cool weather and some moisture in corn territory next week tended somewhat to retard the corn market from responding fully to wheat strength. Oats and rye as well as corn showed considerable disposition to mark time pending the United States Government crop report Monday.

Provisions lacked any aggressive buying support.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 45,461,000 bushels; corn, 15,466,000. Open interest in wheat was 92,491,000 bushels and in corn 37,140,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANT'S EXCHANGE, Aug. 8. —The local price on September wheat was raised ⅛c today without sale being recorded. No corn quotation was made.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼@⅝c higher and early was ¼@⅝c net lower. The close was ½@1⅛c net higher.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday soft wheat was steady to 1c lower. The supply was small but buyers and sellers were far apart in their views on prices and trading was slow in the forepart of the session. Near the close, however, buyers weakened and the grain moved readily at unchanged premiums. Traders again discriminated against the garlicky grades and the discounts widened to 6½c under the straight. Corn was ½@2c lower. Trading was active at the start but slowed up later in day. Feeders and outside order account buyers showed the early interest, industries making a few purchases late. Oats were unchanged to ¼c lower. The receipts were light but more than enough for current requirements. Elevators, mills and outside order account buyers made the trades.

Local wheat receipts which were 82,500 bushels, compared with 141,000 a week ago and 294,000 a year ago included 27 cars local and 28 through. Corn receipts which were 37,500 bushels, compared with 83,500 a week ago and 15,000 a year ago included 24 cars local and one through. Oats receipts which were 28,000 bushels, compared with 76,000 a week ago and 20,000 a year ago, included 13 cars local and one through. Hay receipts were two cars local.

LEAD ACTIVITY, STRENGTH OF COPPER FEATURE MARKET

Red Metal Reaches Highest Export Price Basis Since 1931.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Activity in lead and strength of export copper were developments of outstanding interest last week in metals.

Lead buyers in all divisions, for the sixth consecutive week, booked heavy tonnages. The week's sales were estimated between 8000 and 10,000 tons.

Battery makers and pigment demands have figured prominently in the buying, in addition to large takings by lead-covered cable makers. While large surplus stocks prevented a price advance, there has been more discussion concerning this possibility as shipments overtake production. Estimates are that monthly shipments throughout the fall will exceed 40,000 tons.

Attainment of the 9.60-9.62½-cent level for export copper, CIF European base ports, established a new high for the movement and the best level recorded since the early part of 1931. The domestic situation has been quiet and unchanged, but the sustained demand abroad at the higher prices have promoted discussion on the likelihood of a further rise in the domestic price from the prevailing 9¾-cent level.

Armament buying, stimulated by the Spanish situation, explained the foreign demand to some extent, while domestic consumers indicate the present rate of industrial operations is cutting into reserve stocks faster than had been originally anticipated.

Tin experienced a comparatively dull week, with prices reacting after steadiness, closing the period about ⅝ cent net lower.

Zinc was unchanged as to price, but sentiment was somewhat mixed. Uncertainty created by a hitch in the cartel negotiations abroad, and the consequent prospects for import competition, was offset, however, by the favorable domestic statistical situation and prospects for a continued large consumption.

Steel was featured by a rise in ingot production to 72 per cent of capacity and the growing strength in scrap prices, the latter advancing 50 cents to $1 a ton in leading centers.

BOND TREND HIGHER IN WEEK'S TRADING

U. S. Governments and Corporate Industrials Are the Most Active.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The bond market steered a fairly straight course into higher levels the past week with United States Governments and corporate industrials furnishing the main source of motive power.

As measured by the Associated Press averages, all groups save the foreign, ended the week with comfortable gains. The latter division manifested increasing nervousness over unsettled conditions abroad and some of the Italian Government and municipal bonds dropped sharply.

An assortment of factors was seen by analysts in the background of the latest upward swing, including technical conditions within the market itself, continued scarcity of new offerings, increased pressure of investment funds and improvement in speculative sentiment, which was particularly evident in the action of low-priced bonds.

United States Governments followed the general trend of the corporate division, and while dealings were none too active in the early part of the week, an increasing institutional demand lifted the volume toward the close of the period when the market as a whole made its best showing. New highs for the year were registered by several Treasury loans.

New Offerings Small.

New offerings for the week reached the comparatively small total of $34,350,000, of which railroad issues constituted the bulk. The Pennsylvania Railroad sold $20,000,000 of 3¾s and a $7,000,000 issue of Chicago Union Station 3½s were sold. In both cases the offering price was above par.

Investment quarters looked for a continuation of the mid-summer dullness in new financing until the end of August when a marked pick-up in both "new money" bonds and large-scale refunding is expected.

A firm tone continued in the bond market today, although trading tapered off to the customary Saturday volume.

A fairly active inquiry prevailed for the same group of leaders in the domestic corporate division that provided leadership on Friday but the Federal list was too inactive to provide any help.

Only nine Government issues were traded and but five of these had a price range. Sales aggregated $70,000 against $500,000 in the first two hours of Friday's session. Closing prices were 2-32nds of a point lower to 1-32nd higher.

Foreigns Under Pressure.

The foreign division continued under pressure of unsettled conditions abroad. Italian loans again led the downward parade, the Government 7s losing 2 points at 73 and Rome 6½s surrendering 4 at 68.

Corporate issues extending Friday's gain major fractions to more than a point included Alleghany 5s at 94, Chesapeake Corporation 5s at 155½, Illinois Central 4¾s at 81, International Telephone convertible 4½s at 82¼, New York Central 6s at 115¼, Postal Telegraph 5s at 29½, and Great Northern 4s at 122¾.

The list was not without the usual adjustments by traders who clean their slates for the weekend. American & Foreign Power 5s, St. Paul 5s, Missouri Pacific 4s and Paramount 6s were among issues slipping back for minor losses.

The Associated Press averages ranged from an advance of .1 of a point in the rails and utilities, to a decline of .1 of a point in the foreign group.

Sales of all bonds totaled $6,572,000, compared with $4,614,000 last Saturday.

COTTON LITTLE CHANGED BEFORE CROP FORECAST

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The Government cotton crop report did not appear until after the close of the New York market today and business during the morning was attributed chiefly to further evening-up of commitments.

December contracts, after selling off to 11.95 at the start, rallied to 12.04 and closed at 12.00 with the general market steady, net 4 points lower to 1 point higher.

An opening decline of 8 to 13 points was in response to easy Liverpool cables, and there was some scattered hedging as well as foreign selling and further pre-bureau liquidation.

Offerings were absorbed around the opening figures and prices rallied to about Friday's closing quotations, after which they eased slightly under renewed realizing or liquidation.

The Government report placed the condition at 72.3, the indicated yield per acre at 199.7 and the indicated crop at 12,481,000 bales compared with 10,638,000 last year.

This was some 300,000 to 400,000 bales above the average of recent private reports and the average crop views of about 12,118,000 bales as shown by a recent canvass of New York cotton exchange members.

The indicated crop is just about equal to last season's estimated world's consumption.

Spot steady 4 lower; middling, 12.63.

SAYS LANDON HAS NOT DONE THING FOR LABOR

Union Head Declares Kansan Has 'C. of C. and Company Union' Record.

Post-Dispatch Bureau,
201-205 Kellogg Bldg.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — The manner and degree in which organized labor will participate in the presidential campaign probably will be further indicated by developments at the first national convention of Labor's Non-partisan League, which opens here Monday. The league was organized to work for the re-election of President Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman of New York. George L. Berry, president of the Printing Pressmen's Union, is president of the league, and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amelgamated Clothing Workers, is treasurer.

Coincident with announcement of plans for the convention, Berry tonight issued an attack on Gov. Landon's labor record—which, he said, was "not a labor record at all, but a Chamber of Commerce record, and a company union record." It was supplemented by a statement by Finley Bell, who, as a conciliator for the Department of Labor, was sent to Southeastern Kansas to settle a strike in the lead and zinc mines, during which Gov. Landon called out the militia.

Strike "Mishandled."

Concerning this strike, which already has begun to figure in the campaign, and is certain to do so on an increasing scale, Bell declared:

"Gov. Landon has said that his only purpose in sending troops to the mines was to protect life and property. My investigation for the Department of Labor showed conclusively that neither life nor property were in danger until the troops arrived. My observation showed that the real purpose of sending the troops was to break the strike and force the employes into a company union, financed and controlled by the company. I witnessed the whole performance, and I wish to say it was one of the worst mishandled labor disputes I ever encountered.

"Under the protection of the troops, company thugs roamed the district, breaking up picket lines, destroying union placards and abusing citizens. One Sunday ichurchgoers were ordered to get off the streets, go home and stay there. On the day the troops arrived, a union official reported to the troops that he had been shot by a company man. For getting shot, the union official was arrested. His assailant was not."

"Gov. Landon," added Berry, "cannot point to a single legislative enactment during his administration, relating in any way to labor, which was indorsed by leaders of the Kansas State or Topeka Federations of Labor. In the more than three years he has been Governor of Kansas with political majorities in both branches of his legislature, not one piece of legislation designed to improve the condition of the wage earners of that state has been placed on the books. Specific proposals of that character have either been smothered in committee or defeated on the floor.

"The fact is that Gov. Landon has no labor record in the true sense. What he has is an excellent 'Chamber of Commerce record' and a record for promoting company unions."

Lewis to Speak.

A significant aspect of the Labor's Non-partisan League convention is that fact that two of the principal speakers will be John L. Lewis, chairman of the Committee for Industrial Organization, and Hillman. It will be surprising if their appearance and remarks fail further to identify the cause of the 10 C. I. O. unions, which were provisionally suspended from the American Federation of Labor this week, with the political fortunes of the Roosevelt administration.

The program for the convention states that delegates will be present from each of the 48 states, each duly selected by its respective state committee, and that the main purpose of the meeting will be to formulate and take home a detailed plan of campaign. Berry estimated that the delegates would represent "at least 3,000,000 votes for Roosevelt."

Incidentally it was announced that the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks has formally indorsed Roosevelt. Head of that union is George M. Harrison, president of the Association of Railway Labor Executives, which embraces the 20 standard railway labor unions. Harrison also is a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, which voted to suspend the C. I. O. unions. He opposed the action strenuously, but was absent when the final vote was taken.

JACOBY AND BURNSTINE WIN

Come from Behind to Take Masters' Bridge Title.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 8.—Coming up from tenth place, Oswald Jacoby and David Burnstine won the national masters' contract pair championship today, defeating a field of 44 other pairs, including Theodore A. Lightner of New York and B. J. Becker, Philadelphia, the defending champions, who finished in seventeenth place.

The winners wound up with 1060 match points for the three sessions, giving Jacoby his first victory in the competition for the Waldemar von Zedtwitz gold cup. Burnstine won the title in 1931 and in 1933, each time with Howard Schenken as partner. Von Zedtwitz, donor of the cup, was in twenty-fifth place, with Samuel Fry Jr. scoring 921 in the masters' tourney.

The Rosecan Law Firm

THREE ROSECANS NOW FAMILY LAW FIRM

Harry, Candidate for Congress, His Son, Mortimer, and Latter's Wife.

The law firm of Rosecan, Rosecan & Rosecan, came into existence yesterday with receipt of word from Jefferson City that Mortimer Rosecan and the wife he married during their senior year at the University of Missouri, Alice Flesch Rosecan, had passed the State bar examination.

The senior member is Harry P. Rosecan, father of Mortimer, who had cause for rejoicing on his own account last week when he won the Republican nomination for Congressman from the Twelfth District, breaking the slate of his party's organization, which indorsed another candidate.

"This is the happiest day of my life," the father boasted yesterday. "This is the day I've looked forward to since that fellow was born," he said, indicating his son. He was not joking about the new law firm. That will be the name painted on the door of his offices in the Paul Brown Building as soon as his son and daughter-in-law have gone through the formality of enroling as members of the bar.

The Rosecan partners have already had lots of experience working together as the campaign of Harry Rosecan, former Police Judge and former Prosecuting Attorney in St. Louis, was pretty much of a family affair.

Mrs. Rosecan Sr., her husband says, was the strategist and guiding genius of the campaign. Mortimer made an effort to address most of the political meetings his father could not get to, and Mrs. Rosecan Jr. helped in addressing campaign literature and running the office.

The district which Rosecan seeks to represent in Congress includes all of St. Louis County and about one-third of St. Louis. He plans to conduct his campaign from now until November much as he conducted the campaign for nomination; it will still be a family affair.

His Democratic opponent will be C. Arthur Anderson, Prosecuting Attorney of St. Louis County, who is running on a "support Roosevelt" platform. Rosecan is definitely opposed to most of the New Deal program.

LAST OF FOUR SPINSTERS DIES

Sisters Made Pledge in Youth Never to Marry.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ill., Aug. 8.—Mary Ann Pinkstaff, last of four sisters who kept a pledge never to marry, died at her farm home near here today of heart disease at the age of 73.

Two sisters, Clara Ann, 70, and Susie Ann, 86, died recently. The fourth sister, Martha Ann, died 40 years ago. The three sisters had operated their 180-acre farm along the Wabash River without outside help. The farm had belonged to their father and to his father. Susie Ann "kept company" with a man for many years, but refused to break the pledge. The sisters, until their deaths, dressed in the fashions of the '90s, wearing high-top shoes, long flowing skirts and stiff. starched bonnets. The three divided farm profits equally. Susie Ann was manager, Mary Ann, housekeeper and doer of chores, and Clara Ann was in charge of farm work. In harvest time all went into the fields.

THREE MAJOR TALKS ON LANDON ITINERARY

Thirty Personal Appearances in Six States Planned for Opening Campaign Tour.

By the Associated Press.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 8.—A cross-country trip into eastern territory, marked by at least 30 personal appearances in six states, was mapped by Gov. Alf M. Landon today for his first presidential campaign tour.

To 21 stops scheduled between Denver and Chicago, the Republican nominee added six in Ohio and four in Pennsylvania, and then put President Roosevelt's home state of New York down for three in a still-incomplete itinerary.

After a two-day—Aug. 20-21—jaunt across Colorado, Nebraska, Iowa and Illinois, Landon plans to leave Chicago shortly after midnight Aug. 22 and make his first Ohio rear platform appearance at Lima at 7 a. m. Brief halts are listed also for Ada, Bucyrus, Crestline, Mansfield and Canton when the special train speeds toward the candidate's Pennsylvania birthplace, West Middlesex.

On a golf course a mile outside West Middlesex, the Kansan will deliver his first major eastern address at 3 p. m. Aug. 22. That Saturday night will be spent in nearby Newcastle. Sunday morning the Governor will return to West Middlesex for personal visits. Aids said he might attend services at the Methodist Church of which his grandfather, the Rev. W. H. Mossman, was pastor at the time of Landon's birth.

After another night in Newcastle, the nominee plans to leave for Conneauville. An hour's stop is scheduled at Conneautville, where some of Landon's ancestors are buried.

Erie is down for a 10-minute rear-platform appearance before the Governor's train crosses the state line to reach Ripley, N. Y., at 1:10 p. m. Monday, Aug. 24. That evening Landon will speak at Chautauqua. He is expected to spend the night at the home of a friend.

Some time Tuesday morning, August 25, the nominee will leave Ripley for Buffalo on a schedule to be announced later. A speech at Buffalo Wednesday night will be the third and last major address of the first eastern tour.

This chart of the Governor's journey from Denver to New York concludes the itinerary as drafted to date. Some aids believe that Springfield and East St. Louis, Ill., will be marked for visits on the trip homeward.

With his West Middlesex address just two weeks off and an Estes Park, Col., visit with his family scheduled to intervene, Landon remained in the executive mansion today to work on his three speeches.

MOULDER'S UNION ON STRIKE, DEMANDS $7.26 FOR 8 HOURS

Also Wants 40-Hour Week, Time and a Half for All Overtime.

The demands of the International Moulders' Union, Local No. 59, whose members went on strike last Tuesday at 14 foundries ni the St. Louis industrial area, were made known yesterday. The union has requested a minimum wage of $7.26 for each eight-hour working day for iron moulders and coremakers.

The union also has demanded time and a half pay for all overtime in excess of eight hours and a maximum working week of 40 hours. An increase of 20 per cent in the present wage scale for unskilled labor was requested also. The present wage scales were not announced.

The strike, which affected several hundred moulders, on both sides of the river, was called after the foundries had refused to grant an increase in wages, which had been demanded 30 days before, according to a representative of the union. A special meeting of the union will be held tomorrow at 8 p. m. at Unity Hall, Grand and Page boulevards.

ANTI-DICKMANN MEN CONSIDERING CONTESTS

Three Committeemen, Defeated by Close Votes, Await Figures From Official Count.

Three Democratic City Committeemen allied with the faction opposing Mayor Dickmann, who were defeated for re-election in the primary Tuesday on the basis of unofficial returns, are considering filing election contests because of the closeness of the vote by which they were defeated.

The official count, made by the Board of Election Commissioners, will be completed late today or tomorrow and may change the number of votes for some of the committee candidates although it is not expected to change the results. The committee members who are considering contests will await the outcome of the official count before deciding definitely to contest.

English to Consider Contest.

Recorder of Deeds John P. English, chairman of the committee, who was defeated by L. Jean Gualdoni, the Mayor's candidate in the Twenty-fourth Ward, by 349 votes in the unofficial count, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday that his organization would meet Tuesday evening to decide whether English would contest Gualdoni's election. English said that in one precinct of the ward in the Italian district known as "the Hill," Gualdoni received 745 votes and English 23, and he doubted that many persons could have voted the long primary ballot in the 13-hour voting period.

English said that whether he decides to contest or not, his organization will remain intact and continue in opposition to the Mayor's group. It was learned that other anti-Dickmann organizations in the various wards would also remain intact with the purpose of opposing the administration faction in the municipal primary election next March, at which Mayor Dickmann will be a candidate for renomination.

In the Thirteenth Ward, Hendy J. Phelan, the anti-administration candidate, is considering contesting the re-election of Committeeman James H. Stewart. The unofficial count gave Stewart 4425 votes and Phelan 4423, but Chairman James A. Waechter of the Election Board has announced that Stewart's majority was increased to 20 votes in the official count. Mary Belle Sherry, Phelan's running mate in this ward, was elected committeewoman, defeating Mrs. Maude Kaufman, incumbent, by 145 votes in the unofficial count.

Friends of Charles J. Hunt, defeated for re-election in the Twenty-sixth Ward by John B. Sullivan, the administration candidate, by about 140 votes, said that Hunt was considering the possibility of contesting Sullivan's election. Miss Marjorie O'Rourke, the anti-Dickmann candidate for committeewoman, defeated Miss Addie O'Connell, incumbent, in this ward.

Vest to Return to Police Court.

The Mayor told reporters yesterday that Police Judge George G. Vest, defeated for the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eleventh District by Thomas C. Hennings Jr., incumbent, would return to City Court No. 2 tomorrow and continue there through the next week at least. Vest had been on leave of absence since the opening of his campaign against Hennings, who had the Mayor's indorsement for renomination.

The Mayor also announced that Police Judge Joseph L. Simpson, nominated Tuesday for Judge of the Court of Criminal Correction, who has also been on leave of absence since the primary campaign began, would take a vacation before considering his return to City Court. Simpson told reporters that he would probably continue on leave of absence until after the election Nov. 3.

NEW BLACK LEGION BEING FORMED, SAYS CONVICTED MAN

"Better Element" of Secret Society Reorganizing, Says Prisoner, Awaiting Sentence.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—Earl Angstadt, one of the three Black Legion men convicted of falsely imprisoning a fellow member, said tonight a "new and greater" organization is being formed by the "better element of the Legion to uphold the Constitution, combat Communism and work for the betterment of the community."

From his jail cell, Angstadt told reporters he had received this information "from people on the outside" who were important in the old Black Legion, but were not involved in the crimes charged against the secret society.

Angstadt, an Ecorse steel worker, awaits sentence on a conviction of forcng Robert Penland, a fellow employe, to attend a Black Legion meeting. Preparation for the trials of more than 50 other defendants charged with crimes of murder, kidnaping, arson and rioting is accupying much of the time of those investigating the order. Attorneys will argue Monday on defense motions to dismiss charges against four of the 12 Black Legion men charged with kidnaping and murder in the killing of Charles A. Poole on May 12.

ENGLISHWOMAN SUES OVER ST. LOUIS WILL

Mrs. Harriett Smith as Sister of Late Edward Bond Seeks Share of Estate.

Mrs. Harriett Smith of Newport, Monmouth, England, filed suit in Circuit Court yesterday to set aside the will of Edward Bond, a retired stationary engineer who died Aug. 5, 1935, leaving an estate of $96,031.

Mrs. Smith, who was not mentioned in the will, alleges that she is a sister of Bond. Her attorney, Roger D. Moore, said she would be entitled to half the estate if her suit should be successful.

Her petition alleges that although Bond was able to sign his name the will was signed with a cross mark designated as "his mark."

Walter G. Thielecke, one of the principal beneficiaries of the will and executor of the estate, was described in the will as Bond's "friend and adviser."

At the time the will was made, in February, 1934, Mrs. Smith's petition says, Bond was 79 years old, and his mental faculties were so impaired that he was of unsound mind.

Thielecke, who lives at 601 Dover place, said he had nothing to do with the drawing of the will, although he knew he was to be a beneficiary. He had looked after Bond's financial affairs for many years, Thielecke said, and took pride in the fact that Bond had "never lost a nickel" through his management. He said he was confident that the allegations in the suit would be disproved.

The will left $20,000 to Thielecke, who is in the title business, and an equal sum to his wife. There were specific bequests to nieces and nephews and two churches totaling $26,000. The residue of the estate, the will provided, was to go to Thielecke.

Another suit for an interest in the estate, filed by Mrs. James McGaughey, is pending in Circuit Court. Mrs. McGaughey alleges that she is a niece and adopted daughter of Bond's deceased wife. She charges that Bond, after the death of his wife, entered into a contract with her, agreeing that he would bequeath to her the share his wife would have received from his estate had she survived him. At the time the contract was made, Mrs. Gaughey alleges, she agreed not to contest the will of Bond's wife, which made him the chief beneficiary.

INJUNCTION AGAINST DAUGHTER

Georgian, 65, Says She Threatened to Kill Him and Mother.

ATLANTA, Aug. 8.—Miss Betty Skott's father, Eli Skott, 65 years old, obtained an injunction today to have her moved from home, charging she cursed him and her mother, attacked them and threatened to kill them. Superior Judge Virlyn B. Moore signed an order restraining the daughter, 29, from living in or entering her parents' home and from cursing them on the streets, at home or at the synagogue.

Skott in his petition quoted his daughter as saying: "It is not uncommon in these days and times for a daughter to kill her parents."

MIZE AND GARIBALDI LEAD WITH THREE EACH

By W. J. McGoogan.

Pounding Paul Derringer and Lee Stine for 17 hits, the Cardinals made it easy for Pop Haines to score his seventh victory of the season at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon when they defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 11 to 4, in the first of a three-game series.

The triumph did not, however, change the status of the three contenders as the Chicago Cubs defeated Pittsburgh, 3 to 2, and the New York Giants won from the Phillies, 3 to 2. So the Cardinals remain two games ahead of the Cubs, who are three games in front of the third-place Giants.

All But Medwick Hit.

All of the Cardinals participated in the attack except, strange to say, Joe Medwick, who went hitless in five times at bat after hitting safely in 13 successive games.

Haines helped his own cause along with two singles which drove in three runs while young Arthur Garibaldi continued his good work at the plate with two doubles and a single which accounted for two runs.

Slugging Johnny Mize had two doubles and a single in five trips to the plate and was robbed of another.

Herman Knocks Two Homers.

Cincinnati was the first to score, counting a run in the second inning on Babe Herman's home run to the top of the right field pavilion, the first of two round-trippers he cracked to that spot during the game.

But the Redbirds came right back with two in their half, Garibaldi's first double driving in Mize and Durocher who had singled.

The Reds tied it in the fourth when Herman singled after one was out and went to third on Scarsella's single. Lombardi hit weakly to Mize who threw to Durocher with the idea of getting a double play, but Leo dropped the ball and Herman scored.

Derringer Pounded in Fifth.

Frisch put the Redbirds out in front again in the fifth driving in Garibaldi with a single and in the sixth the Cardinals fell on Derringer with a vengeance, batting around and scoring three runs on four safeties and two bases on balls.

The blow which really meant the most in the rally was a single by Haines after Garibaldi had been purposely passed, to fill the bases. Jess knocked the ball through the box into centerfield and two runs came in.

Derringer retired for a pinchhitter in the seventh and Stine went in to pitch to the Cardinals and they treated him roughly, counting five runs on five hits and a base on balls. Again the Redbirds batted around.

Behind a nine-run lead, Haines let up a little and Cuyler led the Reds' eighth with a double, Herman cracked his second homer to the top of the pavilion, but then the Cincinnati attack subsided and

RUNS WERE EASY TO MAKE: Garibaldi Safe at Home in the Sixth

—By Jack Gould, Post-Dispatch Sports Staff Photographer

It appears that Art Garibaldi of the Cardinals hasn't a chance to score on this play, with Catcher Ernie Lombardi of the Reds blocking the plate so well, but the Redbirds couldn't do anything wrong in the game at Sportsman's Park yesterday, making 11 runs to only four for Cincinnati. This play, on which Umpire Goetz called Garibaldi safe, occurred in the sixth inning.

Discovery, 143 Pounds Up, Runs Last at Saratoga; Esposa, 100, Wins Race

By the Associated Press.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Burdened under 143 pounds, Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery failed in a bid for his third straight victory today as Esposa, flying the silks of Mrs. William Ziegler's Middleburg Stable, won the thirty-fourth running of the Merchants' and Citizens' Handicap.

Esposa, a 7 to 1 shot receiving 43 pounds from Discovery, finished the mile and three-sixteenths a length in front of Mrs. John D. Hertz's Count Arthur. DeWitt Page's Mantagna was only a head back in third place. Then came W. M. Jefford's Giant Killer, showing the way by four lengths to Discovery, last in the field of five.

A year ago Discovery picked up 139 pounds and beat Stand Pat and Top Row in the stake but today he was unable to give his rivals weight ranging from 35 to 43 pounds. He got away well and was as close as third at the three-quarter pole when the impost began to take its toll. Gradually he dropped back while Esposa, Count Arthur and Mantagna went on to fight it out for the purse of $8500. Discovery was the 7 to 10 choice.

Eddie Litzenberger had Mantagna in front to the far turn while Nick Wall ratted the lightly-weighted Esposa in second place. Rounding the bend, Mrs. Ziegler's four-year-old filly moved up fast and when the field straightened out for the run home, she was in front. Esposa easily held command to the wire while Count Arthur came up fast to head Mantagna out of runner-up honors in the closing strides.

The favorite players had better luck in the Saratoga Special when Mrs. Payne Whitney's Forty Winks, choice at 11 to 5, made a show of four other two-year-olds. The chestnut son of Twink finished the six furlongs eight lengths in front of John Hay Whitney's Flying Scot after setting all the pace. Warren Wright's Galsun was another two lengths back in third place.

With the winner taking all, the victory was worth $7000 to the owner of the Greentree Stable.

Cubs Two-Run Rally in Ninth Beats Pirates, 3-2

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—It took Billy Herman's third double and fourth hit today to give the Chicago Cubs a surprise 3 to 2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates, but for more than two hours it looked as if he were doubling in vain.

Trailing by a run as they came to bat in the ninth, the Bruins put on a two-run rally to pull the game out of the fire and give Larry French his twelfth conquest of the season.

English walked to open the last of the ninth and Stainback ran for him. Allen sacrificed, then Hack singled to score Stainback with the tying run. Herman's third double then sent Hack home with the winning marker.

Herman's final two-base clout was his forty-first of the season.

Giants Triumph For 19th Win in Last 23 Games

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—The New York Giants won their sixth straight victory today as Carl Hubbell turned in his sixteenth pitching conquest of the season, letting the Phillies down with seven hits for a 3 to 2 decision.

The triumph was the Giants' nineteenth in their last 23 starts.

Hubbell scored the winning run in the seventh, when he singled and came home on consecutive singles by Joe Moore and Burgess Whitehead. The Giants' other two runs were counted in the first on Joe Moore's single, Mel Ott's triple and Jim Ripple's long fly.

Chuck Klein produced both of the Phillies' runs with a double in the third.

By John E. Wray.
Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, August.

MODERN Olympic rules have saved the athletic world a lot of cruel and unusual punishment, in recent years. Take the case of the Olympic water polo rules which today are mild, almost exotic.

The game as played in the Olympic swimming stadium has all the earmarks of a soccer match played by swimmers. The athletes on each team strive to shoot the ball (one hand only may be used in handling the inflated sphere) into a net, one at either end of the tank.

The boys may not tackle, strangle or take a man down; it is just a nice, ladylike swimming event in which expert passing and pivoting in the water are features.

We admire water polo as a law and order game designed to promote the general welfare and guarantee the blessing of long life to swimmers. But if we wanted to get a kick out of this sport we would rather have them turn back the pages of history about 20 years and give us the water polo of the days of the Missouri Athletic Club.

Quick, Boy! The Pulmotor.

A PRETTY shot into the net is all right; but you can't get the same kick out of it as if you were watching a couple of expert stranglers going down, down, down to the bottom of the tank, with one man holding his opponent until you wondered whether even a pulmotor could do the victim any good.

The prevailing tendency of present day Olympic water polo to preserve human life, or at least, consciousness, has robbed the spectator of that scalp-tingling thrill which comes only when the bubbles begin to steam from the victim to the surface of the water, indicating that the ambulance or perhaps the mortician's slab is the next stop.

The "Good Old Days."

VETERAN Missouri Athletic Club swimmers remember when water polo was a major hazard. Tackling, choking and aquatic mayhem of several types were the custom. The better part of every game was under water and the swimmer could score by "touchdown"—swimming across the goal line—or by throwing the ball. The score for a touchdown was greater than for a shot and so—well, let Marquard Schwartz tell you. He's here with the Olympic team as an unofficial observer and he was also with the old Missouri Athletic Club squad in its prime.

"There isn't much doubt that the Olympic rules have taken a considerable element of roughness out of Olympic water polo," Schwartz told the writer. "These boys that we're watching now are just as tough and just as rough as the old M. A. C. swimmers, but the rules hold them in check.

"Really it's a splendid game today; but it's just water basketball or soccer. Handling the ball with one hand is mandatory. They must not resort to strangling an opponent. Tackling is verboten. But the passing, swimming and handling of the ball is more clever than under the ancient "everything-goes" rules.

"Why, the game became so rough at one stage in the day when St. Louis, New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh all had powerful teams, that the officials of the A. A. U., acting at my suggestion, stalled off the impending national title tournament for fear that something might happen.

"Before it could be held, the rules were changed and not since that time, more than 20 years ago,

GLENN MORRIS WINS DECATHLON FOR AMERICA'S 11TH TRIUMPH

U. S. ATHLETES FINISH ONE-TWO-THREE IN THE 10-EVENT COMPETITION

Colorado Auto Salesman Smashes His Own World Record — America's 400-Meter Relay Team Equals World Mark in Winning Qualifying Heat.

Sports Editor of the Post-Dispatch

BERLIN, Germany, Aug. 8.—(By Cable)—Glenn E. Morris, 24-year old Denver automobile salesman bested Father Time in a strenuous finish which gained him Olympic immortality under the floodlights of the Stadium tonight.

Morris came pounding down the stretch in a neck-and-neck finish to the 1500-meters final event of the two-day decathlon struggle with 60,000 yelling spectators urging him on. There was a rival at Morris' heels, but that meant nothing for in the decathlon only time counts.

A few minutes previously the announcer had proclaimed that in order to break the world decathlon record, Morris would have to finish in better than 4.35. Morris set the pace from the start and held it although he was closely challenged two or three times. In the last 300 yards he started a sprint that brought him down to the finish like a 400-meter man.

Mighty Roar of Applause.

A mighty roar went up as he crossed the line and it was repeated a few moments later when the announcement came that he had won the race in 4.33 and had broken his own world mark of 7880 points with a new total of 7900.

The event marked the eleventh victory for the United States track team and it was more impressive because America made a clean sweep of the first three places. Second place went to Robert Clark with 7577 points and third to Jack Parker with 7275.

Morris, a former student at Colorado State College, did little to distinguish himself athletically while in school. He first flashed into fame a few months ago during the national championships, when he broke the old record. It was his own world mark of 7880 that he surpassed today in winning the decathlon.

Morris showed real class by taking five firsts—the shot put, the 400-meter race and the 110-meters hurdles, discus throw and 1500 meter race. He finished second in the 100-meters and tied for second in the high jump. He was third in the javelin and fifth in the broad jump, twelfth in the pole vault.

The finish was the climax of a day of record-breaking in the stadium which saw six men smash the world record for steeplechase and the world record tied in the 400 meters men's relay and broken in the 100-meter women's relay in addition to the decathlon.

Relay Victory Assured.

Owens, Metcalfe, Draper and Wykoff, in that order, ran the first heat of the men's relay in 40 seconds, 1.3 seconds faster than their nearest rivals. A victory in finals tomorrow over Italy, Holland, Argentina, Germany and Canada is a foregone conclusion, making seven victories in which Negro athletes have figured.

Owens and Metcalfe gave the others a big lead today and Wykoff easily won from his Canadian rival.

Germany's women's relay team cut one-tenth of a second off the old mark in their qualifying heat. Helen Stephens, the Fulton (Mo.) star and anchor girl of America's relay team, showed tremendous speed to win the first women's heat by 10 yards, but the time was seven-tenths of a second slower than Germany's. Harriett Bland of St. Louis, Annette Rogers and Bet-

BROWNS DEFEAT TIGERS, 10 TO 5, AFTER LOSING, 9 TO 7

HORNSBY'S MEN ROUT BRIDGES IN FIRST GAME, ROWE IN SECOND

Crowd of 39,000 Sees Browns Score Seven Runs in Eighth of Nightcap—Pepper Hits Pinch Double and Single in Inning.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—With a seven-run rally in the eighth inning, the Browns beat the Tigers, 10 to 5, in the second game of a double-header at Navin Field this afternoon after losing the opener, 9 to 7.

Jim Bottomley's double with the bases filled was the high spot of an attack that chased Schoolboy Rowe from the mound. When the Browns came to bat in the eighth, they were trailing 5 to 1 and Rogers Hornsby sent Ray Pepper to bat for Earl Caldwell, his starting pitcher.

Pepper doubled to center and the Browns were on the way to an even division of the day's spoils. Rowe lost control, walked Lyn Lary and Harland Clift, filling the bases. Moose Solters singled to left, scoring Pepper and Lary and sending Clift to second.

Two Hits by Pinch-Batter Pepper.

Beau Bell likewise drove a single to left, scoring Clift and advancing Solters to second. Rowe gave West a pass, filling the bases for the second time in the inning and bringing Bottomley to the plate. Sunny Jim smashed a two-bagger to deep left field corner and three runners trotted home. Pepper's single, his second pinch hit of the inning, scored Bottomley. The Browns had enough runs to win. They did not need the one Bottomley's earlier double had provided in the fifth inning nor two that were added in the ninth off Joe Sullivan, the third Detroit pitcher.

Elon Hogsett went to the box to protect the St. Louis lead and retired the Tigers scoreless in the eighth and ninth. Before Hogsett's arrival, they had built up a lead at Caldwell's expense while Rowe was having little trouble with St. Louis. The picture changed quickly when the Browns began to blast the ball in the eighth.

Goslin Poles 19th Homer.

Detroit's attack included Goose Goslin's nineteenth home run of the season and Gerald Walker's sixth. Fortunately, for Caldwell, both were delivered with the bases bare.

Walker's batting beat the Browns in the first game. With three doubles and a home run off Al Thomas, the Mississippi Mauler figured in eight of Detroit's nine runs. He tallied the first one himself and drove in seven others.

Walker opened the first inning with a double against the left-field fence. Taking third on Burns' infield out, he came home on Goslin's long fly to West.

Too Much Walker.

In the third inning with Bridges on first, Walker hit a home run over the left field fence. Burns followed with a homer into the second-story bleachers in right field for the only Detroit run in which Walker had no part.

When Walker came to bat in the fourth inning, he found Owen and Rogell on base. He promptly scored both with another double to the left field barrier.

The Browns succeeded in retiring Walker on a grounder to short in the sixth. His most damaging thrust was delivered in the eighth, which opened with the Browns leading, 7 to 6. The Tigers filled the bases before Walker stepped to the plate with two out. He drove his third double against the left field fence and three runners trotted home to put the Browns under a handicap they could not overcome.

Detroit used three pitchers. The Browns made all their runs off Bridges, who started in an attempt to score his fifteenth victory of the season.

Sorrell Stops Browns.

Bell, leading off in the second, knocked a home run over the left field fence. Three more runs followed in the fourth. Clift and Solters singled and the bases were loaded when Bell was hit on the shoulder by a pitched ball. West struck out, but Bottomley singled to right, scoring Clift and leaving the bases packed. Hemsley looked at a third strike, but Bejma smashed a single to right, scoring Solters and Bell.

The Browns produced another cluster of three runs in the sixth before Bridges was relieved by Sorrell. West, Bottomley, Hemsley and Bejma singled in succession to provide two runs. Hemsley brought in the last one on Lary's fly to Goslin.

The Browns filled the bases with only one out in the eighth, but could not score off Sorrell. After Sorrell stepped aside for a pinch hitter, Roxie Lawson pitched a scoreless ninth.

KANSAS CITY PRO LEADS IN OKLAHOMA GOLF

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., Aug. 8.—Bunny Torpey, Kansas City pro, who has been burning up the dry Oakhurst course for the past week, held a three-stroke lead on the field tonight at the half way mark of the Oklahoma State Medal play tournament.

The Missouri professional compiled rounds of 70 and 72 for a 142 total. Torpey set a new course record in practice the other day. Today he equaled par on the morning round, but went one over in the afternoon.

In second place was Jimmy Gauntt, assistant pro at Ardmore, Ok., with 145. A stroke behind the Ardmore player was Ed Stannard, assistant professional at the Oklahoma City Golf and Country Club.

Three players were tied at 147. They were Jimmy Gullane, Bartlesville, former open champion; Walter Emery, defending champion, who also holds the amateur title, and Clarence Yockey, Kansas City pro.

The tournament will be completed tomorrow, with 36 holes. All players who finished the first 18 are eligible to play in Sunday's competition.

Jim's New Cow, Well-Thought-of In Her Set, Has Everything—That Is, Everything but a Name

The Jim Bottomley Cow Committee—James Conzelman, chairman—announced late last night that it had discovered and acquired title to a Jersey milker suitable for presentation to "Sunny Jim" on this day at Sportsman's Park next Saturday afternoon.

The cow, according to the committee, comes from a long line of cows—Jersey cows—and is well thought of in her set. She is a consistent .300 hitter in the Butterfat League and seldom errs in her fielding. In fact, the committee reported, the cow has everything. Everything, that is, but a name.

The Bottomley Cow Committee feels that any Jersey milker so carefully selected should not be marched up to home plate at Sportsman's Park without a name and, further, announces that it is empowered to offer the reward of a box at the Bottomley Day game between the Browns and Cleveland Indians to the person submitting in the opinion of the committee, the name most apt.

The contest to name "Sunny Jim's" Jersey is open to everyone, Chairman Conzelman announced, except the cow and members of her immediate family. Entries should be addressed to "Bottomley Contest, Sportsman's Park, St. Louis." The award will be announced in time to enable the winner to invite enough of his or her friends to fill up the free box at the Bottomley day game.

Pending the outcome of the contest and arrival of Bottomley day, the nameless Jersey milker is in hiding and being schooled in "Major League Rules."

"Bottomley day" will be Ladies' day at Sportsman's Park, with boys and girls admitted free.

MISS WHEELER IS EASY VICTOR IN TENNIS FINAL

By the Associated Press.

EASTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Gracyn Wheeler of Santa Monica, Cal., ended Helen Pedersen's string of upset tennis triumphs today when she defeated the Stamford, Conn., girl, 6—3, 6—4, to win the eleventh women's invitation tournament of the Maidstone Club.

Miss Pedersen, former national girls' champion, who said she had been playing "over her head" when she conquered two first-ten players, Mrs. Mary Greef Harris of Kansas City and Mrs. John Van Ryn of Philadelphia, en route to the final, proved her point when she made only one serious gesture toward winning in the final match.

After losing the first set, Miss Pedersen rallied to win the first two games of the second, but she couldn't cope with the Californian's clever placements. Miss Wheeler, using her backhand to shoot the ball first to one side of the court, then the other, had her rival running wildly back and forth all through the match. With these well-placed drives she mixed short forehand shots which barely dropped over the net. Miss Pedersen was unable to cover enough territory to match such tactics and seldom managed to get up for the short ones.

The experienced Franco-American combination of Mme. Sylvia Henrotin and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus of New York, partners at Wimbledon and in various European tournaments, had little trouble winning the doubles crown from a pair of young Californians, Dorothy Workman of Los Angeles, and Dorothy Bundy of Santa Monica, 6—4, 6—4. The veterans had too much experience and better strokes.

GERMANS BEAT U. S. AT FIELD HANDBALL

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Germany eliminated America's Olympic field handball team today, 29-1, and thus moved into the championship play-off with Austria, Switzerland and Hungary next week. Fred Leinweber of Brooklyn, N. Y., scored the Americans' lone goal in the second half. The Americans, beaten by Hungary in their first match yesterday, 7-2, will meet Rumania Monday to decide fifth and sixth places.

ALEXANDER LEAVES EVANSVILLE HOSPITAL

By the Associated Press.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Aug. 8.—Grover Cleveland Alexander (Old Pete they called him at the end of his score of years as a National League pitcher) today left the hospital to which he was taken a week ago when he was found in a gutter here with a badly bruised head.

Physicians said he suffered a severe brain concussion. Police have been unable to determine whether he fell or was slugged after an evening visiting local taverns.

BROWNS SELECT SAN ANTONIO AS TRAINING CAMP FOR NEXT YEAR

By James M. Gould.

Apparently the Browns have decided that, things being as they are and the team being some 10,000 meters behind the league-leading Yanks, the time has come to do some thinking about next year and let this one ride for Sweeney.

At any rate, Vice-President McEvoy would seem to be proceeding along those lines by his official announcement last night that the 1937 edition of the Browns would desert West Palm Beach, Fla., as a training base and do its conditioning at San Antonio, Tex.

The Browns first went to Florida in 1924. That year and for the next two they trained at Tarpon Springs. In 1927, with Dan Howley the manager, they moved to West Palm Beach, where they stayed through last spring. There was no complaint about the weather conditions in Florida, but the situation of the camp on the East Coast made possible only a few exhibition games with major league clubs and such exhibitions are considered helpful in spring work.

At San Antonio they will be better fixed in this respect. Games can and will be booked with the Cubs, Pirates and White Sox, who will travel back from the Pacific Coast through Texas, and with the Athletics after the Mackmen finish their training in Mexico City.

Also, the Toledo and Kansas City clubs of the American Association will work out in the fairly close neighborhood, as will the Brownie farmhands of the San Antonio club. The farm club, however, will not train at San Antonio.

Tech Park, where the Texas Leaguers play their home games, will be the site of the Browns' camp.

It will not be the first visit of the Browns or of Manager Hornsby to Santone. The Browns trained there in 1919, the year, it will be remembered, when the then poor Cardinals were compelled to do their spring work at Washington University. Hornsby trained his 1926 world champions there in 1926.

HADLEY SCORES TENTH VICTORY IN ROW; YANKS BEAT ATHLETICS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Irving Hadley pitched his tenth straight victory and his first shutout of the year today, blanking the Philadelphia Athletics 4 to 0 with nine hits as the Yankees opened their current home stand successfully.

Although the Yanks were outhit, 9 to 7, Hadley was tighter in the pinches than his opponents, and was aided by homers in the second inning by Bill Dickey and Tony Lazzeri. The four-baggers were Dickey's 19th and Lazzeri's 12th.

Buck Ross, who started for the Athletics, yielded only seven hits in the seven innings he worked, but all of the league leaders' runs were made off him.

Lew Finney and Lamar Newsome made six of the nine A's hits. Only one Philadelphia batter got as far as third base. He was Chubby Dean, who tripled in the first inning.

The homers by Dickey and Lazzeri started the Yankee scoring in the second. In the third, Hadley singled, advanced on a walk and Roy Johnson's grounder to second, and scored on Joe Di Maggio's long fly for the third New York run. Frank Crosetti's three-bagger and Johnson's single brought in the last Yankee run in the fifth.

The defeat snapped the A's three-game winning streak, and left the Yankees still way out in front of the rest of the American League pack.

Now who is ahead on points, Mrs. E. H. Jarrett, who was thrilled to the bone at meeting the former Crown Prince of Germany, or Helen Stephens, who got such a wallop out of being presented to Herr Hitler?

It is worthy of note that while Jesse Owens was cracking records all over the place, Herr Hitler didn't even crack a smile.

Due probably to that trick mustache, Der Feuhrer can't see what is going on right under his nose.

The passing of Bill Walker leaves the Cardinals without a left-handed hurler and makes Paul Derringer the best dressed pitcher in the National League.

there was no more scoring in that inning, nor in the ninth in which Haines retired them in order, only the second inning he did that in the game, although only three men faced him in the first when Goodman doubled and was out trying for a triple.

RED BIRD NOTES

DIZZY DEAN and Jim Winford are the probable pitchers for the Cardinals in today's doubleheader with the Reds, while Benny Frey and Ray Davis are schedule to pitch for Cincinnati.

The Reds were attired in grey palm beach uniforms which the players said were somewhat cooler in the warm weather, but afforded little protection in sliding.

Pepper Martin was out of the lineup because of an injured shoulder which he did not suffer pitching in Chicago as he was hurt the previous day. Rip Collins was in right field.

The attendance was announced as 13,296, including 4800 paid. It was "Ladies' and Girls'" day.

There will be a special "Ladies' and Girls'" day Monday for the first of the three-game series with the Cubs and Knotholers will not be admitted that day but will Tuesday and Wednesday.

Thevenow started the game with a fine stop of Terry Moore's grounder behind second base and threw him out. Then Lew Riggs leaped into the air to snare Frisch's line drive.

The Reds have to learn they can't take liberties with Davis' throwing arm. Riggs tried to steal in the second and was out out Virgil's perfect throw to Durocher.

The various distances from home plate were marked in large white figures at points around the outfield walls.

Goodman went to right center for a great running catch of Frisch's drive, taking the ball with his glove backhanded as he was under full speed.

Durocher apparently was effected by the heat early in the game and took time out but remained in the contest.

Ed Heusser, righthanded relief pitcher, who was sent home from Chicago because of an abcessed throat, is coming along nicely and Dr. Robert F. Hyland said he would be in uniform tomorrow. Paul Dean also is doing nicely.

BAN IN EUROPE ON MRS. JARRETT AS AN AMATEUR

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Discharged from the American Olympic team for drinking champagne, Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, back-stroke swimming champion, today received another stunning blow when she was barred from participation in amateur events by the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

Acting at the request of Avery Brundage, chairman of the American Olympic Committee, Dr. Robert Donach, secretary of the Federation, "regretfully" informed Mrs. Jarrett that she was suspended from amateur events and won't be allowed to compete in swimming events in Europe.

The unexpected move by the Federation was the result of a letter from Brundage, which read:

"It has been reported to us that Mrs. Jarrett violated A. A. A. rules and therefore she is uncertified for further competition before the question has passed the respective A. A. A. Committee; therefore, she is not eligible for European competitions at this time."

Pressed for a further explanation, Dr. Donach said:

has water polo been a game of strangle-your-neighbor.

"The Olympic rules are the mildest of all water polo regulations. The intercollegiate games are still pretty rough and permit tackling. You can take a man down only when he has the ball and then he must be released immediately if he relinquishes possession of the sphere."

Put Them in the Rules.

IF water polo of the early vintage was so violent, why were there not more casualties on record? we inquired.

"There were plenty of casualties but, of course, they did not turn into fatalities," commented Schwartz. "Several came so close to being serious that this led to a decision to change the game.

"That old Missouri A. C. team was pretty rough—Martin, Laughlin, Cohn, Toeppen and others in the lineup. And perhaps you think friendship helped soften it. But it didn't.

"I remember one game played by two teams of the M. A. C. I was on one, and during the exhibition Amadee Reyburn, a husky football player, took me down. He had my head between his legs, in a sort of head scissors, and I was just about done. I reached for his toe to twist it, but couldn't make it.

"My lungs were bursting and, realizing that I couldn't stand much more and that I had no way of letting him know I was in trouble, I took the easiest way out. I took a bite at his leg, which was almost covering my mouth. He let go in a hurry and I swam aside a stroke or two and came up for air just about at the last gasp."

"Reyburn wanted to fight about it, but I explained that it was either bite or pass out. Then he calmed down."

Imagine a guy getting sore because an opponent objected to being drowned!

Modern Game Has Appeal.

NEVER having been present at any legalized drownings, the recollection of ancient water polo had no appeal to this writer. But Olympic water polo has. It is a fast game, full of action, with surprising demonstration of how the human body can carry on an independent activity other than swimming, while maintaining buoyancy.

These boys remind one of trained seals. They seem to surge up out of the water, and you half expect them to leave the surface, like a fighting tarpon—but they're not quite that good.

The American water polo team includes seven regulars, all members of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, under the direction of Clyde Swenson of the same organization. They won the right to represent the country in a series of eliminations. There are four alternates, two from New York, one from the Illinois A. C. and the other from the Collegians of Los Angeles.

The popularity of water polo with Olympic contenders is evident from the fact that it will require an entire week to complete the contests, from eliminations to final.

Gestures Toward Peace.

WHEREAS, the tendency of the ancient Olympic games was generally toward increasing roughness, danger and violence, Olympic rules since the first revival in 1896 have been toward softness. Wrestling, boxing and other regulations, as well as water polo, point to this.

In ancient days they began with foot racing and the more moderate competitions; but a few hundred years later the crowds were roaring approval not so much at the winner of the stade race of the javelin thrower as at the bone-crushing grip of the wrestler, the jaw-breaking wallop of the caestus boxer or the strangulation grip of the pankration fighter.

They liked their Olympics rough, then. Now the idea is to take all the fight, and thereby the animus, out of competition, contributing toward peace on earth and good will among nations.

However, that "good will" has caused some to raise eyebrows.

The recollection of the nearness with which our representation in the Olympics was defeated in this country is still remembered. And it also may be recalled that where once truce was declared between the warring states during the holding of the ancient Olympic Games, in 1916 war prevented the holding of their modern revival.

Germany was to have been the Olympic host, in that year, ty Robinson were the other runners for America.

The Terrible Finns Again.

Those terrible Finns of Paavo Nurmi were busy again in the 3000-meter steeplechase in which Harold Manning, Glen Dawson and Joe McCluskey were starters. Led by Iso Hollo, the Finns ran the hearts out of all their rivals. Manning kept close to the leaders for three-fourts of the race, but wilted when the big three stepped up the pace and at the finish they were pulling away from the field, Iso Hollo winning with Toumінen of Finland second, Dompert of Germany, third; Matilainene of Finland, fourth; Manning fifth and Larson sixth.

Every man of the six finished under the old world record of 9:21.8 and the winner's time was nine minutes, three and eight-tenths seconds.

Today's relay heats made it certain Americans will score not fewer than 12 firsts by the close of the games tomorrow night.

Criticism by German Scribes.

The German newspapers are grumbling because America used two Negroes in the relay when a sporting position would have been to give the unused white alternates a chance. Where would America have been without the Negro athletes, one German writer inquired?

A check of the events shows that America would have won six of 11 events without the aid of Negroes and possibly two more—exceeding any other nation's total.

Tomorrow marks the close of the track program in the stadium, with finals in the relays, high jump for women and marathon. The Americans are favored in both relays and have an outside chance in the marathon.

Following Sunday's games the athletes will depart for games in London and other European centers. The soccer football team already is on tour.

As an aftermath of the Eleanor Holm Jarrett case, the famous woman swimmer has been barred from amateur competition by order of the International Amateur Athletic Federation. Presumably it was due to violating the A. A. U. rule in writing for newspapers. Threats of a lawsuit are still coming from the Jarrett camp.

AMERICANS SCORE A SWEEP, MORRIS WINS OLYMPIC DECATHLON

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—Three Far Western youths swept the boards for America in the Olympic decathlon competition today, led by Colorado's magnificent Glenn Morris, who smashed his own world record, scaling Olympic heights as a climax to his first year in allround competition.

The Fort Collins automobile salesman, who got the idea admiring Jim Bausch capture another record-cracking Olympic tussle at Los Angeles in 1932, outstripped two Californians, Bob Clark and Jack Parker, while running up the amazing aggregate of 7900 points.

The 24-year-old former Colorado State College football and track star's performance was capped by a sensational stretch sprint concluding the 1500-meter run which carried him to the tape in 4:33.2, and gave him sufficient points to beat his own world mark by exactly 20 points.

Morris' exploits in the strenuous two-day, ten-event test enabled him to wipe out the Olympic record his former idol, Bausch, set by 502 points under the new scoring system. Bausch operated under the old system, but his figures translated in the new scale total 7398 points.

Finns Dominate 3000 Meter Run.

Earlier in the day, Volmari Iso-Hollo of Finland set the stage for record-smashing performances. The swift and durable Finn became the first champion to repeat as he paced the field in the 3000 meter steeplechase final to a 0:03.8 victory. He and the next four finishers all lowered his former Olympic record of 9:14.6.

Kaarlo Tuominen, another Finn, trailed his countryman by three seconds as Alfred Dompert of Germany, producing a great stretch drive, took third, followed by Martti Matilainen of Finland and Harold Manning of Wichita, Kan., all of whom were under Iso-Hollo's 1932 mark. Tuominen's time was 9:06.8; Dompert, 9:07.2; Matilainen, 9.09, and the Kansans, 9:11.2.

The semifinal day of the blue ribbon competition also saw Jesse Owens return to competition and lead off the 400-meter relay team to a world record-equalling 40 second preliminary triumph, and the American women's 400 and men's 1600 meter relayers survive the trials and qualify for tomorrow's final.

Dusk settled down not only on the weary decathloners but also on another rip-roaring Olympic day in which assorted developments included Finland's domination of the 3000-meter obstacle race and the latest "Jarrett case' development whereby Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee and also the A. A. U. ruled out the former backstroke queen, Eleanor Holm Jarrett, as an amateur at least while she's abroad.

Also there were repercussions over the omission of two Jewish boys, Marty Glickman and Sam Stoller, from America's 400-meter sprint relay team.

Morris, whose triumph marked the fourth successive time the Olympic winner smashed the world decathlon record, had his teammates to thank for the rivalry that spurred him through the last five events.

The Americans were one-two-three from the start and absolutely dominated the gruelling test of versatility, achieving the first sweep any nation ever enjoyed in Olympic decathlon competition.

Clark, the San Franciscan who paced the first day, holding a thin margin of two points over Morris at the end of five events, yielded the lead to the Coloradoan at the outset of the final program and never thereafter menaced Morris.

The former National A. A. U. Champion Clark, was 299 points behind the new champion with a total of 7601 points, but safely stood off his fellow Californian, who hails from Sacramento, Parker faltering in the 1500-meter run and winding up with 7275 points.

This was nearly 200 points better than the nearest European contender, Germany's Edwin Huber, who amassed 7087, overhauling Holland's Reindert Brasser with 7046 points, and Switzerland's Armin Guehl with 7033 points.

The lustrous all-around "Zehnkampf" as the program identified the decathlon overshadowed all internal as well as competitive activity spread over the vast Reichssportfield, attracting Saturday crowds close to 200,000 including another capacity throng and Chancellor Adolf Hitler in the main stadium.

The history-making sweep by the

FILLY EQUALS THE WASHINGTON PARK MARK FOR MILE, 1:35 3-5

20,000 Crowd at Chicago Track Sees Whereaway Finish Second and Threadneedle Third.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—Leading from start to finish, Myrtlewood, owned by Brownell Combs of Lexington, Ky., won the $5000 added Lakeside Handicap at Washington Park today by three lengths, with Whereaway second and Threadneedle third.

The fleet four-year-old filly, a daughter of Blue Larkspur, ran the mile in 1:35 3-5, to equal the track record made by Gallant Knight. She carried top weight of 120 pounds.

Myrtlewood, which was ridden by Jockey G. South, paid $6.20 to win, $3.60 to place and $3.20 to show. Whereaway paid $3.40 to place and $2.80 to show. Threadneedle paid $4.40 to show.

A crowd of 20,000 saw the race.

Bolo equaled the track record for six furlongs in the third race. The three-year-old son of Busy American-Mary Helen, ridden by Jockey R. Dotter, stepped the distance in 1:11. No More, Bedight and Manners Man held the same record here.

Bolo flashed by the judges one length and a quarter in advance of Southern Belle, the favorite from the stable of T. C. Worden. A. R. Born's Caliban saved the short end of the purse.

Americans, which was a rare tribute to Brutus Hamilton's coaching, had the crowd excited as well as their European rivals staggering. Only 17 of the original 28 starters finished, the chief overnight casualty being Finland's Akilles Jarvinen, 1932 runner-up and former world record holder.

New Relay Mark Assured.

American players, both men and women, romped through their qualifying heats in three races without being pressed. The men's 400-meter foursome, which stirred up so much commotion among camp followers, equaled the world record of 40 seconds flat with such ease that a new mark certainly is within their grasp for tomorrow's final.

The heralded Dutch and German opposition, which Head Coach Lawson Robertson said prompted him to use Owens and Draper, failed to materialize as far as qualifying times revealed, they doing only 41.3 and 41.4, respectively.

If the American quartet actually is pressed tomorrow it seems likely that it may clip half a second off the record which the American team set at Los Angeles with Wykoff running anchor as he is here.

Owens, back in the running after his third individual triumph three days ago, started perfectly and had a five-meter margin as he passed the baton to Metcalf. Then his teammates steadily increased the margin to 15 meters over the Italian team which was clocked in 41.1 seconds.

The 1600-meter team, consisting of Harold Cagle, Shawnee, Ok., Bob Young, Bakersfield, Cal., Eddie O'Brien of Atlantic City, N. J., and Al Fitch of South Pasadena, Cal., all making their first Olympic appearance, reeled off the distance in 3:13, beating Italy by 35 meters.

However, the British team, anchored by the flashy Arthur Godfrey Brown, as well as the Canadians, looked capable of extending the defending champions. The Britons beat the speedy Swedes in the second heat in 3:14.4, while the Canadians lost a close decision to Germany in the third and last heat which they could have won if Johnny Loaring hadn't loafed in the final stretch, saving his strength. Both Germany and Canada were clocked in 3:15 flat.

Women's Relay Team Qualifies.

The American women's 400-meter relay team, Harriet Bland, St. Louis; Annette Rogers and Betty Robinson of Chicago, and Helen Stephens of Fulton, Mo., beat Canada by eight meters in the first heat as they were clocked in 47.1 seconds.

The red-headed Miss Bland got off to a great start and gained a four-meter margin which Miss Rogers and Miss Robinson safeguarded and Miss Stephens, Olympic 100-meter champion, doubled in the stretch. Holland ran third and Austria fourth.

Emmy Albus, Kathe Kraus, Marie Dollinger and Isle Derffeldt reeled off the lap in 46.4 seconds, beating the British and the Italians decisively and indicating they are likely to clinch the women's track and field title for the home forces tomorrow.

The classic marathon climaxes the record-smashing eight-day program tomorrow, starting at 3 p. m. (9 a. m. Eastern standard time) from the stadium. The United States has three strong runners, Ellison (Tarzan) Brown of Alton, R. I.; Bill McMahon of Worcester, Mass., and Johnny Kelley of Arlington, Mass., but the race is expected to be fought out among Japanese and Finnish challengers of Argentina's champion, Juan Carlos Zabala, who has been training in Germany for five months and is primed to become the first marathon repeater.

FINAL POINT STANDING—Glenn Morris, United States, 7900 (new Olympic and world record); betters former world record of 7880 points made by Morris); second, Bob Clark, United States, 7601 points; third, Jack Parker, United States, 7275 points; fourth, Erwin Huber, Germany, 7097 points; fifth, Reindert Brasser, Holland, 7046 points; sixth, Armin Guehl, Switzerland, 7033 points; seventh, Bexell, Sweden, 7024 points; eighth, Bonnet, Germany, 6939 points; ninth, Plawczyk, Poland, 6871 points; tenth, Natvig, Norway, 6759 points; eleventh, Reinikka, Finland, 6755 points; twelfth, Bacsalmasi, Hungary, 6395 points; thirteenth, Daellenbach, Switzerland, 6311 points; fourteenth, Doitscheff, Bulgaria, 6307 points; fifteenth, Wenzel, Chile, 6058 points; sixteenth, Klein, Czechoslovakia, 5883 points; seventeenth, Boulanger, Belgium, 5097 points. Dahlgren, Sweden; Buchrer, Switzerland, and Csany, Hungary, withdrew after ninth event; Jarvinen, Finland, withdrew after fifth event; Dislis, Latvia, withdrew after fourth event; Reimer, Chile and Vilmundarson, Iceland, withdrew after second event.

BUDGE IS EASY WINNER IN RYE TENNIS TOURNEY

By the Associated Press.

RYE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The Eastern grass courts tennis championships opened today with 24 first-round matches played in the men's and women's singles and not a surprise in the lot.

Headed by Don Budge, the flaming-thatched Davis Cup star from Oakland, Cal., and Bryan "Bitsy" Grant, Atlanta's "mighty mite" in the men's division, and Mrs. Mary Greef Harris of Kansas City and Norma Taubele in the women's in the favorites came through without the loss of a set.

Budge Loses Only One Game.

Budge, top-seeded, dropped only one game as he blasted Marion Reese of Atlanta off the court, 6—1, 6—0. It was his first singles match since his return from the Wimbledon tourney and he appeared to unleash all his pent-up energy as he drove viciously from either side, carried his rival out of position and slammed the ball past him. Don's only difficulty was his occasional failure to send his terrific drives over the net.

Grant had a somewhat harder struggle against Edward De Gray of Brooklyn but won out, 6—4, 6—1. Other seeded stars came through as easily as Gene Mako of Oakland, Budge's doubles partner, routed C. D. Steele Jr. of New York, 6—2, 6—4, and John Van Ryn of Philadelphia, another Davis Cup player, trounced Peter Blanchard of West Orange, N. J., 6—3, 6—2.

Kansas Cityan Wins Easily.

Mrs. Harris, seeded fourth, was the top-ranking woman player in action and she had no trouble defeating Alice Burrage, East Hampton, N. Y., 6—0, 6—0. Miss Taubele, seeded sixth, trounced Marian Eiler, Monmouth, N. J., 6—0, 6—1. Other feminine favorites, including Elizabeth Blackman of Detroit, Mrs. Lila Porter of Mobile, Ala., Eunice Dean, Dallas, Tex., and Helen Fulton of Chicago, also won their opening matches in straight sets.

PARKER WINS MEADOW CLUB TENNIS TITLE

By the Associated Press.

SOUTHAMPTON, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Frankie Parker, 20-year-old racquet wielder of Spring Lake, N. J., and Milwaukee, added the valued Meadow Club singles trophy to his list of permanent tennis possessions today when he routed Gregory Mangin of Newark, N. J., 1—6, 6—1, 6—2, 6—0 in the final.

Then he hooked up with the loser to capture the doubles title from the national clay courts champions, Robert Riggs and Wayne Sabin of Los Angeles, 11—13, 3—6, 7—5, 8—6, 6—1.

URUGUAY, CHINA AND EGYPT VICTORS IN BASKET TOURNEY

BERLIN, Aug. 8. — Uruguay, China and Egypt turned in victories in the consolation section of the first round of Olympic basketball competition today.

Uruguay beat Belgium, 17-10; China defeated France 45-38, and Egypt turned back Turkey, 33-2.

AMERICA OPPOSES ESTONIA IN FIRST BASKETBALL GAME

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—After spending the first two days of the tournament on the sidelines, America's basketball representatives open their drive for the Olympic title tomorrow against the strong Estonian quintet in a second round game. The Americans had a walk-over in the first round when the Spanish team failed to arrive.

Coach Jimmy Needles tonight submitted a list of seven men, all that is permissable under Olympic rules. Sam Balter, Don Piper, Carl Shy and Art Mollner of Los Angeles, Frank Lubin of Hollywood, Cal., and John Gibbons and Willard Schmidt of McPherson, Kan., will make up the squad.

The Estonians, who are recognized as one of Europe's most formidable combinations, are expected to offer fair opposition to the Americans, heavy favorites to capture the championship. The Yankees' superior finesse and height should give them a decided edge.

HELDMAN WINS JUNIOR TENNIS TITLE, BEATING JOSEPH HUNT

By the Associated Press.

CULVER, Ind., Aug. 8.—Julius Heldman, young Hollywood, Cal., southpaw, today combined brilliance and accuracy to win the National junior tennis singles championship, defeating Joseph Hunt of Los Angeles in a spectacular upset, 1—6, 6—2, 3—6, 6—1, 6—1.

The boys' singles crown returned to the Pacific Coast as John Kramer of Monticello defeated the top seeded player, William Umstaedter of Millburn, N. J., by scores of 6—, 7—5.

By taking both doubles titles California swept all the championships. The junior singles finalists, Heldman and Hunt, outlasted Don McNeill of Oklahoma City and Morey Lewis of Texarkana, Ark., to win the junior doubles title in five sets, 9—7, 7—5, 4—6, 3—6, 6—2.

Kramer, the boys' singles champion, paired with George McQuown of Los Angeles to defeat Harper Ink of San Diego and James Wade of Altadena, Cal., for the boys' doubles crown, 9—11, 6—4, 6—3.

Heldman struck and held one of his periodic streaks of brilliance in the junior final against Hunt. His left-handed cross court drives and volleys were constantly just out of Hunt's reach. Heldman hit his fastest pace in the fourth set and Hunt tossed off the set when Heldman ran into a 5-1 lead.

In the boys' final Umstaedter balled his way to a 5—2 edge in the second set. Then Kramer reverted to his old tactics of taking the net and swept through five straight games for the set and match.

By Reno Hahn

The Aubuchon-Dennison P am, the St. Louis entry, has hance to go far in the Americ egion junior baseball competiti ossibly farther than any St. Lo am has gone. The 14 hustli ng ball players who won te title this week are marki me until the Arkansas champi heir next opponent, qualifies, h hey are not wasting time.

They are working out daily und he direction of John Scully, v ran manager, who has piloted se ral Legion teams to state titl nd last year led the Aubuch am to the regional final.

Scully is getting his squad rea r the two-out-of-three-ga ries with the Arkansas cha ons that will decide which tea ill play in the regional eve he Arkansas titlists will be t me team for the series, whi ust be decided by Aug. 15, at the sectional event can g nder way. This means that t ubuchons probably will depart t rrow or Tuesday for the inte te games.

Coach Likes Squad.

Scully thinks this year's squa ill go further than last yea am, which lost out in the region nal in a heart-breaking 1-0 co st to a Chicago nine.

"This year's team, except in on r two positions, is a better a und squad than last year," sa ully as his team practiced.

"We miss, of course, the pitc g of Norvall Hunthausen and th tching and batting of Joe Schult this year we have two pitche nearly equal ability, and, wha more important, we have bot left-handed and a right-hande tcher to start. Last year all ou urlers were right-handed.

"The squad is better balan d anyone on the squad is like break up a ball game with a lon t. Then, too, the boys are big r than last year's squad.

"The team is steadily improving the first games for the city ampionship my squad looked ver d. They were in second plac d hadn't shown much. Bu hen those first games were rown out and the season started er, the boys really began to work gether.

"They won the title without much ble and improved steadily, as y eliminated Hannibal, and went to defeat the Shaughnessy Post Kasas City and then Springld for the state honors."

The workout was impressive. aseball experts tell you that the ne of defensive strength is rough the middle. In that case, e Aubuchons are well fortified. om Rich Moran, the catcher, Dan Jostedt, center fielder, the is strong.

Moran Is Dependable.

Moran, while he may not be as as Schultz, is a steady, dendable catcher who can hit. Har Kahre at shortstop is probably best defensive player on the m. A tall, well-built athlete, he mbines power with speed and ll. He is the best looking prost on the squad.

At second is Robert "Bud" Blatt, well-known to St. Louis table nis fans as the best player in city. Blattner is not as good baseball as at the indoor sport, he fields well and gets his share hits.

Jostedt in center is the team's ding batter, hitting well over 0 this season and always danger at the plate. He isn't the best lder on the team, but he can er a lot of ground.

Gene Dowling takes care of the corner and what he lacks in , he makes up for in speed and gressiveness.

Jack Bowers, the captain of the m, is the first baseman. His exlent fieldinig has saved his teamtes many errors on hasty throws. Jack Roehlk in left field and rb. Vallat in right complete the al starting lineup, with either ne Haley, the southpaw, or Har Nepper, a righthander, on the . Others on the squad, who see quent action, are: Howard mhoff, pitcher; Ted Johns, outer; Lee Tevis, catcher and Lou l, outfielder and pitcher. Kis has been working lately and has been able to play and his abce has hurt the team. He usu plays in the outfield, taking edt's place while Jostedt moves r to one of the other fields.

If the Aubuchons defeat the Ar as champions they will qualify the sectional playoffs to be held week of Aug. 17. Participants that tournament will be State mpions that have already elimd another State titleholder. e will be eight teams in the with the winner qualifying right to play the winners other two sectional tourneys national championship.

900 Track and Field Stars From District Are to Compete in Last Week of Junior Olympics Events

Nearly 900 young athletes under 19 years of age will take part, starting tomorrow, in the final week of the Greater St. Louis Junior Olympic track and field meet. These ambitious boys and girls have been participating for the past six weeks in preliminaries and will go through four more days of eliminations this week before the finals are held Saturday.

All events this week will be held at Washington University's Francis Field. The meet, sponsored by an East St. Louis radio station, has attracted outstanding athletes from high schools in St. Louis, the county, and the East Side, some coming from as far as Benton, Ill.

Stars Not Extended.

While the field, when considered as a whole, is probably better than any that took part in local high school meets this season, the preliminaries have been devoid of any interesting or outstanding performances because so few athletes entered from each district, that the good athletes were not pressed in qualifying.

The district high school meet lacked interest this year because the city schools did not participate. The Illinois schools never hold a big meet with the St. Louis district schools, so that this event starting tomorrow will give the three groups their first chance to compete against one another this year.

Tomorrow's program will open with a parade and other ceremonies, to be followed by preliminaries in all the relays. Tuesday and Thursday will be well filled with 49 heats scheduled each day in the various running events. Wednesday is reserved for the preliminaries in the field events. Friday will be a day of rest. The finals are scheduled to start at 1:30 o'clock, Saturday afternoon.

Starting time during the week will be 4 o'clock.

In the three boys' divisions, there are over 700 athletes entered, and in the girls' two groups, there are more than 200.

Because few, if any, of the relay teams have run as a team before, not much can be said about their chances for qualifying, but the same does not hold for the individual events.

In Senior Sprints.

In the senior boys' sprints, for example, there are the Seidel twins, Al and Jerry, who have dominated the city schools' meets for the past few years; "Pete" Meara, Christian Brothers' High sprinter, probably the best in the district; Jack Bushyhead, who won every race he ran for the University City Junior High School team; and others well known.

The intermediate boys' dash events are also filled with good runners, including H. Waldschmidt, Webster; Joe Monolo, a coming sprinter from Maplewood; Bob Saldofsky, Roosevelt High's best junior dash man; Ralph Blumberg, University City; and Joe Duggan.

The meet was arranged this way. Athletes were entered through churches. They could enter through anyone they wished. Trophies are being awarded among the churches scoring the most points in the various divisions and to the winner of the whole meet. Medals will also be awarded the winning athletes.

The churches having the best chance of winning are: Harlem Place Methodist, with Roosevelt and McKinley High athletes; Niedringhaus Methodist from the East Side with the best from that district entered; St. Paul Methodist, Maplewood Methodist, Little Flower, and Shaare Zedek.

CONZELMAN TO OPEN FOOTBALL SCHOOL AUG. 17

With an expected enrollment of 40 boys from the St. Louis district and other points in Missouri and Illinois, the football school conducted each year by Head Coach Jimmy Conzelman of Washington University will open at Washington, Aug. 17. The students will report at the universty at 6 p. m., Sunday, Aug. 16.

This will be the third year of the school, which points to several college players and prep school stars as recent graduates. Among former students are Jack Grover of Kansas City, who last year was quarterback at Exeter; Vic Theiling, Beaumont's big fullback, and McKelvey, a Bellevile High star.

The out-of-town boys will live for the week of the course at the various fraternity houses on the Washington U. campus and the field work will be done on Francis Field and the Bears' practice field.

Among the features will be talks by prominent athletes at noonday luncheons and lectures by Coach Conzelman, Head Coach Don Faurot of the University of Missouri, and Head Coach Cecil Muellerleile of St. Louis University.

On offense, there will be special work on punting, passing, running, attack, strategy and blocking, while on defense there will be instruction in tackling, defense systems, playing of individual positions, line play, spacing and pass defense.

Washington football men will assist the coaches in their explanation of plays.

Softball Tripleheader.

A tripleheader program is on tap for tonight at Sisler North Side Park with the Duro-Seams meeting Motorola Girls in the opening contest followed by North St. Louis Trust and Handling men in the second game, while Stix-Baer-Fuller and Snell-Harrison men scheduled for the nightcap.

UNION PRINTERS' BALL TEAM IN CHICAGO FOR INTERNATIONAL TOURNEY

A party of about 40 rooters departed early today for Chicago with the St. Louis Union Printers' baseball team, which finished in second place in the Empire League of the Municipal Association, for the twenty-sixth annual tournament of the Union Printers' International Baseball League, which will start its first round tomorrow at Wrigley Field. One game will be played this afternoon at Grant Park between Boston and Chicago, these two teams to remain idle tomorrow, when the first round officially begins at the Cubs' home, with Judge Kenesaw M. Landis and William Harridge, president of the American League, taking part in the opening ceremonies.

The printers making up the local squad were: Eddie Albrecht, manager; Mike Schimmer, Buddy Keenoy, Charles Ries, Larry Roberts, infielders; Andy Stremlau, Gene Roberts, Harry Blaisdell, Leo Hoehn, Dick Steger, outfielders; Sherman Bruns, catcher; Walter Dandridge, Leo Cepicky and George Ross, pitchers.

The party, in charge of Lou Steiner, commissioner for St. Louis, is due to arrive in Chicago early this afternoon, and Manager Albrecht plans to put his team through a workout immediately. The schedule for the opening day will be drawn at the close of the Boston-Chicago game.

KOMPA SISTERS BREAK WORLD RECORD IN BACKSTROKE RACE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—New York's swimming sisters, Erna and Elizabeth Kompa, both bettered the listed world record for the 300 meters backstroke swim at a carnival staged by the Women's Swimming Association in commemoration of the tenth anniversary of Gertrude Ederle's feat of swimming the English channel.

Swimming side by side in the 440-yard backstroke race, the Kompa sisters both passed the 300-meter mark in 4:33 flat, bettering the long course record of 4:33.1. Erna later forged ahead to win the race.

RIGHTMIRE AND ALCANTER WILL OPEN TRAINING HERE TODAY

The lineup of fighters for Wednesday night's program at the Municipal Auditorium will be competed today with the arrival here of Everette (Young) Rightmire, Sioux City featherweight, and Joey Alcanter, Missouri State lightweight champion, who mix in the 10-round semifinal bout.

They will join Georgie Nichols, former world's light-heavyweight champion, and John Henry Lewis, present champion of the 175-pounders, in training at local gymnasiums today.

Nichols and Lewis meet in the main attraction. For Nichols it will be the climax to a sensational comeback. Almost in oblivion six months ago, he has developed into one of the real punchers of the light-heavyweight ranks and has battered enough important foes to be regarded as an outstanding challenger in the division.

If he beats Lewis he has been promised a rematch with the title at stake. So Nichols has trained hard. He is anxious to regain that title which he lost when the commission took it from him while he was unable to fight as a result of an accident in which his leg was injured.

Nichols Works Hard.

In three days of training here he has shown that he is leaving no stone unturned to be in tip-top shape. Yesterday, for the second successive day, he stepped through a dozen rounds of hard work at the Business Men's Gymnasium, including three rounds in the ring.

Lewis, who decisioned Al Gainer, formerly regarded as the principal threat to his title, in Pittsburgh a week ago Friday, has been training there all week and came to St. Louis in perfect trim for battle. He will step through a workout today to limber up for the big battle.

Rightmire has been promised a title fight with Champion Petey Sarron if he gets past Alcanter so there will be no loss of motion in his camp today as he steps into action. The Kansas City Mexican, anxious to maintain his winning ways in this State, has brought himself to fine shape in his home city and will do a bit of tapering off.

Negroes Have K. O. Record.

The three preliminary bouts promise plenty of action also. The main battle among the six-rounders brings together the two big Negroes, Dynamite Jackson of Los Angeles and Willie Davies of Chicago. Each of these scrappers will bring a list of kayo victories into the ring with him.

11 Los Angeles Olympic Records Have Been Broken

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.

ELEVEN of the 18 Olympic men's track and field records made at Los Angeles four years ago have been broken here and two more may fall tomorrow—in the sprint relay and the marathon.

The only 1932 marks definitely left on the Olympic books are Eddie Tolan's 10.3 for 100 meters which Jesse Owens tied; Bill Carr's 46.2 for 400 meters; Tom Hampson's 1:49.8 for 800 meters, and Glenn Hardin's 52 seconds for the 400-meter hurdles.

So far as the current Olympic events are concerned, no records any longer antedate the Los Angeles meeting.

BURKES HELD TO TIE BY THE CABALLEROS IN TWILIGHT SOCCER

A well-executed dribble and shot by the veteran "Red" Diaz one minute before the final whistle enabled the Burke soccer team to gain a 1—1 draw with the Caballeros in their battle for first place in the Spanish Sport Club's twilight soccer league, Friday evening. The Caballeros held a one-goal lead up to the finish by reason of Lou Garcia's fine shot from 25 yards out. Diaz' tying score was the result of a fine corner kick by Art Garcia.

Center Halfback Jim Flynn's covering tactics robbed Cecil Rodriguez, the Caballeros' center forward, of much of his effectiveness. A victory by the Burkes in their game of Tuesday would bring about a three-way tie for the lead.

The standing of the teams in the second half schedule:

JESSE OWENS SAYS AUTOGRAPH SEEKERS HAVE HIM "ALL SHAKY"

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 8.—This tremendous popularity is beginning to gate on Jesse Owens' nerves.

After today's 400-meter relay race, he had to move his seat in the stands in order to escape autograph seekers and amater photographers.

"I'm all shaky," the Ohio State runner said afterward.

A large pair of dark glasses failed to hide his identity. He is almost mobbed everywhere he goes. Crowds wait before the door of the Bautzen House where he lives in the Olympic Village. Despite his amazing speed, it often takes him half an hour to cross the door sill.

RUTH BAILEY OUT OF PUBLIC PARKS TENNIS TOURNAMENT

Miss Ruth Bailey, municipal women's singles champion, will be unable to participate in the National Public Parks tennis tournament which will be held Aug. 17-23 at the Jefferson Memorial Courts, Forest Park.

Miss Bailey, long one of the district's outstanding woman players, injured her back recently while playing tennis. As a result she will be out of competition for the rest of the reason.

The fourteenth annual tournament has drawn entries from all sections of the country as well as Honolulu, Hawaii. Indications were that the total entry might approach 100 and thereby set a record.

Far West Threat.

A Far-Western threat developed in the men's singles division with the entry of Louis Wetherell of Los Angeles, who holds the public park title in this city, the Santa Ana championship and was runner-up at Long Beach to Dr. Bartosh.

Outstanding of the Western entries, however, is Elizabeth Deike, winner of the national singles championship at New Orleans in 1935. She will defend her title here and pair with Marjorie Lauderback in the doubles.

Miss Lauderback almost overshadows her teammate for on the West coast this year she has captured three titles—at Los Angeles, Long Beach and Santa Ana. Miss Lauderbach defeated Miss Deike in the final of the Long Beach tournament.

From Memphis will come Billy Hughes and Cecil Metz, the losing finalists of last year's national tournament doubles. Hughes is Memphis' singles champion, while Metz was a semi-finalist.

New Chicago Entries.

Contestants new to the tournament will come from Chicago. In the singles will be Eugene Quinn, Herbert Mertz and Seymour Greenburg, and in the women's singles Bernice Survallo.

Unheralded challengers from Shakopee, Minn., include Roman J. Kopp in the singles, Kopp and Joe Hirscher in the doubles and a women's doubles team of Margaret Christie and Vadis Woolsey.

St. Louis entries will be numerous. Frank Keaney, municipal champion; Ted Drewes, four-time national champion; Bob Norton, Merceina Weiss and Mrs. Jean McKinney Dalstrom will be entered.

Enclosed Court Seats 2500.

Ten courts at Jefferson Memorial will be used for the tournament with other matches possibly on the Kingshighway Memorial courts. Semifinals in men's and women's singles and doubles will be held Saturday, Aug. 22, with finals Sunday. The draw and pairings will be made Sunday, Aug. 16.

The City Park Department is enclosing one court with seats for 2500 spectators for special matches and all finals. It will be the third time the tourney has been held in St. Louis. The first one was here in 1923 and the other in 1927.

Miss Deike Wins Minnesota State Title.

By the Associated Press.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 8.—Elizabeth Deike of Pasadena smashed her way to the Minnesota State open women's singles tennis championship in a 4—6, 6—2, 6—1 defeat of Helen Germain of New York at the St. Paul Tennis Club today.

Miss Germain gained a share of the honors, however, pairing with Elizabeth Kesting of St. Paul to win the doubles title. They defeated Miss Deike and Merceina Weiss of St. Louis, 6—4, 7—9, 6—4.

Don Leavens of Milwaukee, defending men's singles champion, and Scott Rexinger of Minneapolis swept through their semifinals matches and will meet tomorrow for the title.

215 SWIMMERS TO COMPETE IN MUNY CARNIVAL

A record total of 215 swimmers have registered for the twenty-third annual municipal swimming meet to be held at the Marquette pool, Osage and Minnesota avenues, next Thursday night.

The previous record of 203 was established in 1933. Last year there were 201 competitors enlisted. This year's total includes 51 girls and 164 men.

Westborough Country Club leads the list with 35 entrants enrolled, while Fairground swimming pool has 32, Marquette pool has 26 and the Y. M. H. A.-Y. W. H. A. have 22. Fourteen organizations are represented, while 24 athletes have entered unattached. Westborough won the championship last year.

Diving preliminaries will be conducted tomorrow evening at 5:30 o'clock at the Marquette pool, with nine men and seven young women taking part. The public will not be admitted to the trials.

The diving participants are:

Men: J. Piotrowski, Nick Connell, N. Bergauer, Howard Humphries, E. Kuntscher, Dan Hochstadt, Robert Tesreau, William Miller and Nelson Goldstein.

Girls: Misses Lorraine Morrison, C. Agatstein, Geraldine Tiffany, Vera Delaplain, June Koehr, Marjorie Hilton and Hazel Micals.

Coach Robertson Defends His Relay Team Selection

By Lawson Robertson

BERLIN, Aug. 8. — By setting a new world and Olympic record in the decathlon today against one of the stiffest fields in Olympic history, Glenn Morris proved himself probably the greatest all-round athlete of all times.

Today he was better than Jim Thorpe, Jim Bausch or Hans Sievert. Though the pace was terrific he finished fresh. Somewhat nervous Morris proved himself a great competitor. He was out for a new world record and he made it. Bob Clark and Jack Parker also looked fine and it proved we were ahead of the rest of the world in all-round athletes.

I think Morris will definitely improve and will be a sure bet in the next Olympics.

The classic marathon race closes the Olympic track and field program tomorrow and nothing could be more fitting than an American triumph. No one, however, could sensibly make such a prediction. Son and Nan of Japan, both of whom have broken the world marathon records, looked good in practice and are the favorites.

Zabala Not at His Best.

Juan Carlos Zabala of Argentina, the defending champion, didn't show enough in the 10,000-meters last Sunday to warrant very high consideration.

Experience has taught us it's 10 to 1 and take your choice. This marathon course in exceptionally hard, the first and last 10 kilometers being uphill.

America's best bet, in my opinion, is John Kelly. His condition is excellent. Ellison Brown has been handicapped by lack of exercise forced by a leg injury.

I reversed myself on a decision regarding the American 400-meter relay team. This morning, full realizing that I was stepping into a "roasting' 'in the States, I chose Foy Draper to run the third leg around the turn instead of Sam Stoller.

I was aware that in so doing I was leaving two Jewish boys who made the team entirely out of competition. But I did it in good faith, without prejudice, and entirely on my own responsibility after consulting two assistant coaches.

The alleged sensational practice performances of the German and Holland sprint relay teams worried me and this morning I called all our sprint relay candidates together to explain my stand. I chose Draper because he placed fourth in the tryouts and had practiced running turns, yet I never felt worse about making a decision in my life.

Stoller and Blickman are two fine boys and both a credit to the team. Having seen the Germans and the Dutchmen, I'm sure we could have won with Stoller, Glickman, Draper and Frank Wykoff, but I have been worrying about an upset for three days and didn't feel it safe to take the chance.

The three-yard leap I figured Owens would give us in the final then appeared more important than it does now.

Two Temperamental Stars.

I can't say we are equally sure of winning the 1600-meter relay. The British are too good. I intended to start our two Olympic finalists on this team but the attitude of Archie Williams, our champion, and Jimmy Luvalle, made me change my mind. Williams said he would run if I asked him and Luvalle complained he was so tired he couldn't.

Such fire and pep was enough to discourage and so I named Harold Cagle, Bob Young, Eddie O'Brien and Al Fitch, who will have to give to the limit against the British.

Cagle's 49-second 400 was topped off with "quarters" of 48 seconds each by Young, O'Brien and Fitch. All three will have to improve.

SCHMELING ARRIVES FOR BRADDOCK BOUT

LAKEHURST, N. J., Aug. 8. — Max Schmeling, former heavyweight champion from Germany, returned to America aboard the Zeppelin Hindenburg today to prepare for his 15-round bout with Jimmy Braddock, current holder of the title, in September.

Despite a 12-hour delay in the landing of the big airship, Max was full of enthusiasm over air travel and was more inclined to discuss the ship than to talk about the boxing business. He was full of confidence in his ability to whip Braddock and become the first man ever to regain the heavyweight crown, but said he would have to train longer and harder for the bout with the champion than he did before he knocked out Joe Louis in June. He was accompanied, as usual, by his trainer, Max Machon.

Schmeling, apparently in good condition, said he was feeling fine, but was anxious to begin his training. He pointed out that Braddock's defense would be somewhat stronger than Louis' and hence he would need more preparation.

Max was still undecided about the location of his training camp although he favors Speculator, N. Y., where he prepared for his bout with Mickey Walker a few years ago. He plans to inspect the facilities within a week and begin training as soon as possible. He now weighs 194 pounds, close to his fighting weight.

Jimmy Johnston of Madison Square Garden, promoter of the bout, and Mike Jacobs, who will be associated with the Garden, were in the crowd which waited from early in the morning to seven in the evening for the Hindenburg to land. Johnston commented:

"I have known Schmeling for eight years and he looks bigger, better and more confident than any time since I've known him."

DOUBLE-BILL OFFERS EDGEMONT A CHANCE TO CLIMB IN RACE

With Edgemont A. C. trailing the Stags of Belleville by two full games in the Trolley League race, the East Siders will have an opportunity to climb in the race today when Manager Ray Besse's outfit meets the Hufschmidts in a double bill this afternoon at State Street Park, the first game being a postponed affair from May 3.

Last week saw Edgemont bow to the Stags, 6 to 5, while the Hufschmidts were being turned back by the last-place Boosters of Carlyle, 7 to 1. A double victory would put Edgemont within half a game of first place, providing the Alpen Braus of Granite City can come through with a victory over the Stags.

WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS OPENS FOR 10 DAYS IN GENEVA

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York Presides at First Session.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Aug. 8.—Hopeful of finding a solution to Jewish problems through collective action, the first World Jewish Congress convened tonight. More than 300 delegates, including 75 from the United States, registered for the 10-day Congress.

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise of New York opened the sessions saying: "Whether or not the world recognizes it, whether or not Jews understand it, anti-Semitism as a world problem is one of the major problems of civilization. If Hitlerism had been faced by the world when it was little more than an anti-Semitic election expedient it is doubtful whether the entire civilized world would be called upon as today to face the ever-growing peril of the increasing barbaric power of Nazi Germany."

Delegations were present from 32 countries.

ARMY'S WAR MANEUVERS MOVED TO CAMP CUSTER

Second Phase of Training to Start This Week; Three Forces in Mock Combat.

By the Associated Press.

FORT KNOX, Ky., Aug. 8.—Four days of the Second Army's war practice maneuvers ended in a recess today as opposing Red and Blue forces fought with blank ammunition over the McClellan Ridge sector east of Fort Knox. The second phase of these training operations were ordered to take place at Camp Custer, Mich., next week.

Col. Bruce Palmer's mechanized Red forces, outnumbered 10 to 1, penetrated Blue outposts time after time in today's flank attacks, only to withdraw swiftly to escape artillery fire.

The 20,000 Blue troops led by Maj. Gen. William E. Cole, Fifth Corps Area Commander, many of them tired from four days of intensive war maneuvers, were inactive on all other fronts. Overnight they had withdrawn 10 miles and had thrown a 15-mile semi-circular defense around a theoretical bridge at West Point, after the Reds were strengthened by an imaginary ally, the Browns, from the Northeast.

Such action, the ci contends, would have stopped cumulation of interest charg during the appeal period of near two years.

RESIDENTIAL JUNE PERMITS AT FIVE-YEAR HIGH

Construction in Chief Cities Totaled $67,820,566, a 141 Pct. Gain Over June, 1935.

Residential permits of principal cities of the United States in June rose to a new five-year high, according to a study made by the Federal Housing Administration, based on data provided by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Shooting up 141.9 per cent above the corresponding month of last year, the June residential permits amounted to $67,820,564, which is a gain of $39,787,541 over June, 1935. Residential building permits amounted to 47.3 per cent of the total building permits (non-residential, residential and additions, alterations and repair).

The number of new residential buildings for which permits were issued is 9280, as against 4792 for June, 1935. The number of families provided for is 17,431, over 10,000 more than in June, 1935. This is an increase of 142.6 per cent.

Permits issued for additions, alterations and repairs in 708 identical cities amounted to $28,188,399, a gain of 51.6 per cent over that of June, 1935, which amounted to $18,594,850.

The Federal Housing Administration reports for the month of June a total of $48,250,655 mortgages accepted for insurance from financial institutions approved by the Housing Administration. Of this amount 35.39 per cent were for new residential construction. In June of the preceding year, $12,099,311 mortgages were accepted for insurance, which means that June 1936 went 400 per cent ahead of June, 1935.

A special report made by A. C. Bozo, Chief of the License and Permit Section for the Detroit (Mich.) Department of Buildings and Safety Engineering, shows that during the first six months of 1936 more than twice as many homes were built here as during the combined years of 1932, 1933, and 1934. The report was made to the State Director of the Federal Housing Administrator.

A total of 1883 new residential buildings were constructed through June 30, this year, at an estimated cost of $11,302,095, compared to 950 residential buildings at an estimated cost of 4,956,529 for the three previous years.

Bozo also pointed out in his report that he had noted a considerable improvement both in the design and the structure of residential buildings erected in Detroit during the last year.

B. & L. ASSOCIATION HOME LOANS INCREASE

Volume 13 Per Cent Larger in July Compared With Corresponding Period of '35.

A 13 per cent increase in the volume of home loans made by building and loan associations in St. Louis and St. Louis County during July, as compared with July, 1935, was reported by E. A. Kamp, secretary of the St. Louis League of Incorporated Building and Loan Associations.

Thirty associations recorded 164 loans totaling $537,015 last month, Kamp reported. Although this was $1925 less than the loan volume of June, he continued, the decline was less than the usual seasonal decreases, and the month's total was $62,015 greater than the July, 1935, total of $475,000.

These figures, Kamp explained, are long-term, monthly-payment loans made for construction of new homes, repair and remodernization of existing buildings, and refinancing of homes already built.

BUILDING AND LOAN 1936 LENDING FIGURES

Sum May Reach Billion if Present Rate Is Kept Up, League Says.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 8.—A prediction that lending by savings, building and loan associations in 1936 will approximate $1,000,000,000, was contained today in the United States Building and Loan League's six months survey.

Money for home construction supplied by associations in June reached the largest figure for any month since 1931, the league reported. The total was $28,253,000 for the building of 8700 new family homes.

Total lending by associations in June for all purposes went to a new high for 1936 with 50,000 families borrowing $110,182,000. This rounded out a first six months' business of $500,000,000, the league said, equivalent to the total business done in all of 1932.

Estimated loans made in June, divided according to purposes, were: New construction, $28,253,000; repair and modernization, $7,745,000; home purchase, $32,006,000; refinancing, $26,374,000; other purposes, $15,804,000.

Morton Bodfish, executive vice-president of the league, said comparison of second quarter with first quarter loans showed construction mortgages were about twice as great in total volume during the second quarter. Advances to complete the purchase cost of existing homes increased 70 per cent in volume during April, May and June, while loans for modernization and repairs were about twice as great in volume during the latter three months.

He said the average purchase loan has been consistently around $2400 and the construction loan around $3000. This would indicate, he said, that the majority of borrowers from associationsh today are investing in properties worth between $3700 and $4000 are building $4000 and $5000 houses.

Lawn Requires Care in the Mid-Summer

The hot sun of midsummer makes new demands for the care of lawns. It is time to set the mower a little higher. Two inches is as close as the lawn should be clipped in midsummer. Hot weather will not cause the grass to grow faster, but on the contrary will send the blue grass into a dormant stage, from which it is awakened only by watering.

During this stage the lawn should be soaked rather than sprinkled. Let the hose run for several hours on one section each day and make the rounds once a week.

After midsummer the grass starts to grow again, and at this time, about mid-August or a little later, new lawns may be started under most favorable conditions and seed may be sown on bare patches or to thicken up old lawns. Seed sown then will have a longer growing season ahead of it, when temperature and humidity is most likely to be favorable. No seed is made in the fall and the young plants enter the winter in a stocky, vigorous condition.

Lawns should be cut regularly, even when growth is slow. When this is done the clippings need not be removed; if left to find their way down to the soil surface they help to check evaporation and build up a thick turf.

The best time to sow lawn seed is the middle of August, or a short time thereafter. There are very good reasons for this choice of time, and the lawnmaker will do well to heed them if he wants to avoid trouble later. By planting a lawn now, the seeds will get a chance to germinate early, and make a considerable growth during the cool days of fall, thus providing a healthy mat of well advanced turf to start with in the spring.

An even better reason for planting in the late summer or fall is that it will eliminate many weeds which would normally take root with lawn seed planted in the spring. Most weed seeds germinate in the spring, in spite of the fact that they have matured and found sanctuaries in your lawn seedbed in summer and fall. By giving the lawn seed a chance to form an early turf, which will wake up early in the spring and renew its growth vigorously, you will choke out many of the weeds which must wait until spring to germinate.

Starting early and maintaining a vigorous growth is the secret of lawn making. To assist in this, the gardener will do well to provide his lawn with applications of plant food to spur on this growth. When the lawn is made an application of four pounds for 100 square feet of area is recommended. Work the plant foo dinto the top soil, wait a day, and then sow seed, rolling the bed lightly, and watering with a fine spray. In the spring an additional two pounds of plant food should be applied, and in many cases a second application is recommended, especially on bare spots.

QUESTIONS BEFORE THE HOUSE

Q. What kind of finish is best for the top of a wooden bar which is subject to stains from glasses?

LESTER S.

A. There is a tempered pressed-wood composition board on the market which is used for desks and bars. One-eighth-inch thickness should be very good.

Q. We read your page with interest every Sunday and would appreciate some information about hot-water heating. This last winter (for the first time in 10 years) we had trouble in heating the flats, although having a big fire. Could a sediment in the radiators cause this and is there any way to remove it with little expense, or are there new valves that would help any? We always drain the system in the spring and fall.

MRS. A. P. V.

A. Last winter was a hard one and many people were unable to heat their homes properly. I am afraid the only solution to your problem is to call in a reliable heating man. Your trouble may be coming from flues or sediment, and in any case he will be able to do a much more thorough job than you could possibly have done by someone in the home who is more or less an amateur. Glad you like the page.

Q. We have a brick building which has never been painted and which is gradually becoming affected by the elements. We would like to paint the building as it now stands, but before doing so want a little information regarding the best type of paint to use. Should we use a paint which is heavy in oil or can we use paint with asbestos base which has a tendency to fill the pores? Also is there any special kind of red cement that we could use and which would resist water? MRS. W G. C., Macon, Mo.

A . Any one of the paints suggested made by reliable manufacturers, is good for your purpose. The building should be cleaned of all dirt and the joints pointed before painting. Cement paints come in colors and would provide the waterproofing you want. To judge by your letter, the brick has evidently begun to weather, and in this case a one-inch stucco finish might be more economical. Estimates from contractors on these materials will help you decide.

Q. Our oak table top which warps in the cold is normally flat in hot weather. Is there anything that you would recommend to keep it flat permanently?

J. G. A.

A. Drying out the wood accounts for the warping. Give the underside and edges two coats of varnish when top is flat.

Q. I expect to build a brick milk house on my farm and would like to know what is the best thickness for the mortar joints?

E. M., Edwardsville.

A. In commercial practice mortar joints vary from a quarter of an inch to three-quarters of an inch. Possibly the most common joint is a half-inch, but quarter-inch and three-eighth inch joints are excellent, especially the latter.

Q. The roof of our house seems to be sagging in the center. Is this dangerous? What can we do to remedy it?

HERMAN T. S.

A. It is probably not dangerous, but it indicates that the rafters are not properly tied together, and you will be troubled by cracks in the plaster and opening joints in the woodwork unless you stop the spreading. Not knowing the relation of your roof to the top floor, it is impossible to tell you how best to tie it, but the point to be kept in mind is that these ties must be as near the bottom of the rafters as possible. You had better call in an architect or an expert carpenter.

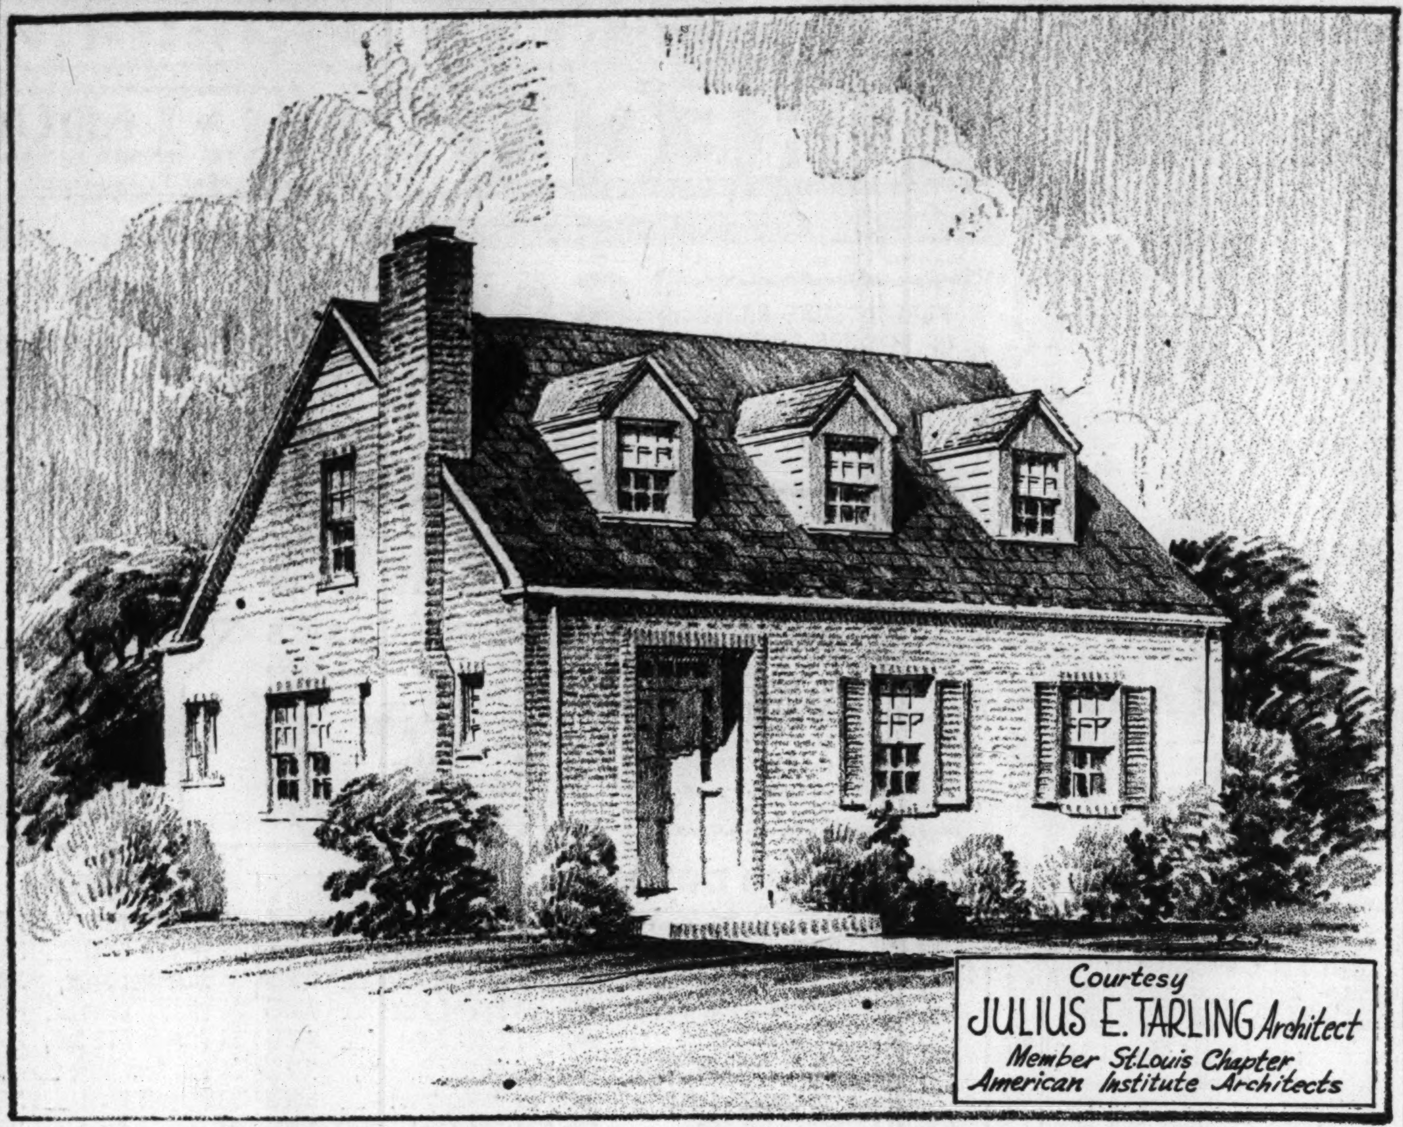
Q. Our lot is on a hillside, and we would like to set the house into the hill so it will not set up so high in the front. Can this be done without making the house damp?

PROSPECTIVE BUILDER.

A. Yes. You should procure the services of a good architect to prepare plans for such a house, as there are special conditions to be met that call for special designing. If the hill is very steep, it will probably be necessary to stagger the story levels.

Traditional Cape Cod in Brick Painted White



This Style of Architecture Which Is So Adaptable to Planned Additions Also Lends Itself Especially to the Simplified Living of Today.

It is very easy to understand the present vogue for house of the Cape Cod type. According to architects here, and this is true elsewhere, the small house is taking a strong hold on the consciousness of the home builder. Simplified living, however much some may object, is here to stay. Waste spaces and unnecessary rooms are things of the past. Then, too many home builders hope to have their homes grow up with the family or with the income.

Planned additions are always possible no matter what the style, but the Cape Cod, in traditional architecture, seems peculiarly adaptable not only to additions, but also to simplified living. Consequently so many home builders choose it.

The house planned here is the traditional type with downstairs bedrooms and a second floor that may be finished later. All living facilities are concentrated on the first floor with no wasted floor space. The entrance is directly into the living room. The hall that divides the living quarters from the sleeping rooms is small and the stair area is utilitarian with no effort at being decorative. It serves the main purpose of stairs and that is, access to a higher or lower floor.

The open dining room which connects directly with the living room provides a spacious quality that many of the smaller houses lack. It makes possible an L-shaped living area that may be treated as one room. Back of this is the kitchen which has been planned compactly and with ample work and storage space. It has two exposures which assure cross ventilation for any kitchen odors, and an exit to a rear porch and to the basement.

Both downstairs bedrooms are planned near the bath and have good-sized closets. The windows have been arranged to provide enough wall space for furnishings.

The second floor has been planned with two bedrooms and a bath. The architect suggested to his clients that this floor be left unfinished until some future time in the interests of cutting down the initial cost of the house. Each bedroom has been planned with two exposures, one of them a dormer window. There is a large closet which has a window on this floor.

While clapboard is the traditional construction for Cape Cod type houses this architect has chosen brick painted white. The roff is a sea green slate roof and the shutters, which are working shutters, are painted green. The entrance is deeply recessed and the panelled door has side lights and lights above it in the traditional colonial manner.

The fireplace in the living room is of brick with a simple wooden mantel shelf. A coat closet has been provided just inside the door in an inconspicuous corner where it is of greatest service. The wood trim is painted ivory throughout and the floors are hardwood stained dark. The bath has tinted tile while the kitchen has a white tile wainscoting. Finish hardware is polished brass and the gutters and downspouts are copper. The house is thoroughly insulated and weather-stripped and the basement is completely excavated. The heating system is warm air with winter air conditioning. Cubic content is 25,900 cubic feet and the cost complete with a finished second floor has been estimated at 27 cents per cubic foot. The house has been built in the county in a section off Natural Bridge road.

The upstairs bedrooms have a great many possibilities from a decorative standpoint. The size of the rooms and the dormers admit of the newer and more modern trend in colors. Contrasting colors may be used on the walls and dormers and the simplest of modern furniture in blond or grayed woods might be used. If spaciousness is desirable the wood trim may be painted the color of the walls, the floor a dark color and the ceiling a lighter tint.

Basic Points For Prospective Home Builder

The more a home-owner-to-be knows about sturdy construction, the better are his chances of avoiding jerry-building and the pitfalls of inferior construction. This is the opinion of P. A. Andrews, vice-president of Johns-Manville, who has recently set forth the following five basic points that should be observed by every person who is going to build a house.

1. Learn as much as possible about the fundamentals of construction. Knowledge of good building practices will aid in discussion of the house with the architect and builder and in understanding the various steps in erecting it.

2. Good design and efficient planning, which eliminate poor arrangement and unattractiveness, keep well-built houses from becoming liabilities. An architect is not as expensive as many people think, and his services will prove many times more valuable than his fee.

3. Sensible financing makes it simple to own a house outright after a period of years. Banks and building and loan institutions can provide information and advice on this phase.

4. Reputable building materials can "insure" a trouble-free home. Local dealers are best equipped to give information about materials made by responsible manufacturers which will make a home the last word in safety, comfort, convenience and economy.

5. Competent workmanship is vitally important. Careless or slipshod methods can ruin the best plans and materials. A prospective home owner should secure a reliable builder—the materials dealer will know several—with a reputation for honest, thorough work.

"Solid-wall construction and sturdy foundations and enduring roofs are the backbone of a permanent house," Mr. Andrews stated. "Materials recently developed after years of research now make easy the type of construction—at average costs—previously available only in the most expensive houses. The well-built house of today is triple insulated against fire, weather and wear."

The building expert also pointed out other construction details which should be observed. Foundation walls must both support the house and keep the basement dry. The foundation footings should be wide and flat, with sharp corners, resting in firm soil and should have tile drains. Foundations walls should be damp-proofed in an accepted manner.

Interior plaster which will not crack or fall is another important point in sound construction and one which will protect the home-owner from physical injury and his pocketbook from undue expense.

Taut Canvas

An ingenious way of making a nice smooth ceiling where the existing one is uneven and patched is to stretch decorators' canvas as close to the ceiling as possible, yet not touching it, and fasten it around the walls with a wooden molding. When the sizing is applied it will be stretched taut, like the canvas on the wings of a plane.

FOR BETTER LIVING

If you like to keep your home modern even down to the drapery fabric here is good news. There is now on the market an oiled silk fabric which softens but does not obscure the light and cuts off vision from the outside. This material comes in a number of colors and folds and drapes without fear of cracking. For summer dwellings bedroom windows, in fact for any place that is subject to dampness or rain this fabric will be very welcome. Where a window must be draped to keep out vision and yet allow a certain amount of light this fabric has few equals.

Hospitality is a virtue especially when your guests never need to crane their necks to find the house number. Lighted numbers work on a bell transformer and most inexpensively. They are easy to install, lend an air of welcome that most visitors will appreciate.

Housewives who enjoy washing windows but do not like the idea of "sitting out" in a second floor window will be glad to know about the contraption with a back which fastens to the sill and makes window sitting a thing of comfort if not of joy.

If you've managed to save your garden from the inroads of the drouth it seems only fair that you should want to show it off to best advantage. Floodlights and baby spots may now be had to turn your hobby into a fairyland of ethereal beauty. Water gardens lighted are especially effective.

And, looking forward to more garden gadgets for the garden fan, it is now possible to heat your hotbed with a cable that may be buried in the ground. Installation is simple and operation entirely automatic. This is a good point to remember when you do your armchair gardening this winter and plan your hotbed.

You need no longer risk life and limb in the eradication of that garden pest the tent caterpillar. Torches that come with jointed poles and consist of an asbestos ball which is dipped in kerosene are now available. It is possible to reach the nests in the topmost branches without breaking a leg.

If you are planning to lay down a wine cellar you will certainly want some of the new metal racks which hold the bottle at the proper angle and assure ever-moist corks. These racks come in the honey comb pattern which is like those in some of the famous cellars abroad and if you don't feel equal to famous wines you may at least have the pleasure of famous trimmings.

A secret panel is always thrilling, and while it is usually associated with old castles, it can be very usefull in the modern house. It is not a difficult thing to install, as there are modern hardware devices especially for this purpose.

NEW COLOR TRICKS IN CEILINGS

New colore tricks in painting ceiling are being tried out in N York apartments. With the ne and daring idea of having each four walls different in color, th ceiling is made to match one of th walls. Painting the ceiling slightly lighter shade than the wa color, instead of the usual white, probably the most conservative these new practices.

These color innovations in dec rating the top of the room are n mere whims, but are dictated logic. If a room is too high, for e ample, painting the ceiling sligh darker than the walls will seem lower it. If it is too low, on th other hand, a light color is pr scribed. Another way of increasin the apparent ceiling height is carry the light ceiling color dow the walls to the picture molding.

The ceiling color, which must, course, be in harmony with th walls, may be chosen to match th carpet or the curtains. Painting th trim the same hue as the ceili helps to unify the color schem This idea was seen developed in well-lighted living room where light blue of the ceiling and th harmonized artistically with th tan walls.

While a white-painted ceili does, of course, reflect the mo light, there are rooms receivi much natural light which do n need the assistance of a white ce ing. In rooms such as these, past tints of yellow, pink, cream salmon prove decidedly effectiv It is often the case that rooms see more restful when the ceiling a walls are the same color. Colore ceilings are especially good in be rooms, where your eyes rest up them when you first awaken.

Sometimes the color of the ce ing has a special decorative reas as in a nursery done by a Ne York decorator who specializes children's rooms. She made the c ing in the room mentioned s blue, which carried out the outdo spirit of the stencil decorations trees and flowers painted just abo the dado. Another decorator we still further and had white sta stenciled on the blue, indicating t Great Dipper and other famili constellations.

Closet Openings

A shallow closet is made mu more usable if it has a wide op ing. This can be accomplished using double doors instead of a si gle door. Thus there are no de ends in the closet that are awkwa to use, and the double doors proj into the room only half the di tance that a single door wou which was made for the same ope ing.

SALESMEN WANTED

MEN—IMMEDIATE EMPLOYMENT

WE WILL PUT ON 9 ADDITIONAL MEN WHO NEED EMPLOYMENT AND WHO WISH TO TRY TO SEE IF THEY CAN DO THIS WORK. WE WILL TRAIN SUCH MEN FREE. FURNISH FULL EQUIPMENT WITH NO DEPOSIT REQUIRED. THERE IS NO EXPENSE, BUT THOSE WHO CAN QUALIFY CAN MAKE $150 TO $400 OR MORE THE FIRST MONTH.

While you cannot make money here unless you earn it, many men who never previously even thought they could do work of this kind have found it to be just the opportunity they sought for years and are making more money than they ever previously dreamed of making. We have men making up to $750 a month. Others $600, $500, $400 and $300. On the other hand, many fail to fill the requirements and cannot do the work.

Experience in sales work is not necessary. Some of our best men never sold anything before. Men who made as high as $50 their first day in the field knew nothing about selling other than what they had learned the previous two days from our sales instructor. This man is himself an experienced salesman who first went into the field and made a splendid record selling this product. He is a man of earnest and sympathetic understanding with the problems of the beginner. He can and does awake and activate the latent abilities of men to do creative work. Many men who least suspect it possess very great and very valuable sales ability. It is not unusual for a beginner to make $20 to $40 his first few days here.

Perhaps he can help you to make a success of this work. It is worth a try. The training is free. The opportunity is open. If you can do it, you make real money and have assurance of its permanence. If you cannot do it, no harm done. The experience will have been valuable. Last year was the biggest year in our business, nationally and locally; and this year is following the same program of progress.

This is a new product by an established institution—the largest of its kind in the world, and the product already has a greater sale than anything in the world ever offered for the same service. It is now being introduced in this market. This is a genuine present opportunity for cash, and also for future progress in the certain growth of the business. It is for men who have foresight—men who are in earnest about seeking a sound opportunity to get in and work ahead.

Our requirements of you are that you be honest, of good reputation, active, alert, willing to learn and do the following things:

To learn (as taught) how to make a clear and convincing explanation of why you have called to see your prospect.

To learn (as taught) how to show the product so it will reveal the absolute need for it and the necessity of buying it.

To learn (as taught) how to persuade some one to do that which positively ought to be done.

To be honest in your own thought, so that you are entitled to confidence.

To work hard every day to make a genuine success in return for the privilege of a genuine opportunity in a permanent position with good people who will deeply interest themselves in helping you to get started and to get along.

This is a straightforward offer of sincere intent to worthy men who are in need of good, substantial positions. Please do not apply for these positions unless you feel you can meet these requirements. Applicants will be personally interviewed Monday, 9:15 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., Suite 512, Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive sts.

Violet Stanhope Is Wed in London

LONDON, Aug. 8.

MISS VIOLET STANHOPE, daughter of Russell C. Stanhope of London, was married at Brompton Oratory July 30 to Duncan Rollo. The bride was born in St. Louis of a prominent family who came to Europe to live when she was a child. She was educated at Eastbourne and lived with her father at Hotel Glendower. Her mother was the late Augustine Thompson of St. Louis. Miss Zelina de Macklot Thompson is an aunt.

The altar and chancel of the church were banked with roses and lilies for the ceremony, which took place at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. The bride, whose only attendants were two small flower girls, nieces of the bridegroom, was gowned in white satin made with a long court train. Her tulle veil was secured at one side with orange blossoms and her bouquet was of lilies of the valley. A reception followed the service.

Mr. Rollo is the son of the Hon. Mrs. Gilbert Rollo, and descends from a long line of English and Scotch nobility.

Miss Thompson went to London several weeks ago to attend the wedding, and will remain for a longer visit before returning to her apartment at Hotel St. James and d'Albany in Paris, where she has made her home for several years since leaving St. Louis.

Bridlespur Hunt Opens New Season

THE cub hunting season is on, which means to members of the Bridlespur Hunt the time for riding to hounds, lazy after months of idleness, after young foxes, novices in the art of evading a pack.

The 1936 season, which began early yesterday morning at 4:30 o'clock, serves a three-fold purpose —fostering love for the sport, hardening hounds for the more strenuous season beginning late in September, and qualifying some of the horses used for the annual steeplechase races at Huntleigh Downs Oct. 3. These races include the Mississippi Gold Cup event, won last year by Anderson Fowler of Long Island, on Charioteer.

The initial four-hour hunt yesterday, led by August A. Busch, master of fox hounds, and Adalbert von Gontard, honorary secretary, moved off from the Bridlespur Hunt Club kennels and rode over 10 miles of countryside west of Denny road, with permission of resident farmers. Barbed wire fences were protected by wooden panels to permit easy jumping.

The field, dressed for comfort in St. Louisans Visit Nantucket, Mass.

By Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NANTUCKET, Mass., Aug. 8.

ST. LOUIS visitors attended the annual meeting of the Nantucket Historical Association last week and later visited the Whaling Museum, the greatest asset of the association, sponsored by the late William F. Macy of Nantucket and New York. There is a legend that the Island of Nantucket was discovered by Indians when an eagle swooped down among the tribe on Cape Cod and siezed a papoose. It was followed by the parents in a canoe until they came to the Island of Nantucket.

No one visiting Nantucket would fail to attend a meeting of the "Neighbors," an organization of all visitors and residents on the island sponsored by the Nantucket Civic League. The principal speaker of the Tuesday meeting of this week was Percival Chubb of St. Louis, formerly president of the Drama League of America, who spoke on "Promotion of Leisure Activities." Mr. Chubb is now president of the American Ethical Union and is president emeritus of the Ethical Society of St. Louis. Any resident or summer visitor may be a Nantucket Neighbor. In the audience was Breckenridge Long, who, with his family, is summering in Nantucket. Many St. Louisans sponsor the program of this unique organization which has at least one activity daily during the entire summer season.

There were 36 guests at the birthday celebration for Mrs. Donaldson Lambert Saturday. The St. Louisans present were: Mrs. Edwin T. Stanard, Mrs. Landsen McCandless, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bascom, Mr. and Mrs. Craig Culbertson, William Desloge, Firmin Desloge and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Hess. Young women, playing the accordian, entertained the group and there was a swimming party preceding the clam bake which was followed by games.

Mr. and Mrs. Hess entertained in the new barn Mrs. Gwynne Evans has just had completed and decorated Saturday night. The interior is like a ship with port holes, and port and starboard lights marking the entrance. The spacious room on the first floor is suitable for entertaining, and above is a large cabin where guests may sleep while visiting Mr. and Mrs. Hess or Mrs. Evans.

Ted Bakewell Jr. is visiting Mrs. Eugenie Evans.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Plant of Woods Hole spent two days this week in Nantucket living aboard their yacht "Liliana" and visiting with friends ashore.

Mr. and Mrs. Valle Reyburn and daughter, Miss Frances Reyburn, spent a few days this week in Nantucket seeing St. Louis friends.

A group of St. Louis people who have season tickets for the theater Monday night saw "Lovers Meeting," a new play being tried out for the first time, and presented by the Beach Theater of Falmouth.

Firmin Desloge Jr. left Tuesday for a two weeks' stay in New York. He will return to Nantucket about Aug. 20 to await with his father and brother, William, the return of Mrs. Firmin Desloge and Ted Desloge from a North Cape cruise.

At a fancy dress party at the Yacht Club Thursday night, Don Lambert Jr. received much applause for his well chosen costume. He was an artist in a colony of artists.

Baron Munchausen Program Aug. 23.

A PROGRAM recalling Baron Munchausen, liar, will be broadcast from Bodenwerder, Germany, where the body of the world's greatest liar lies in the church yard, at 11 a. m., Sunday, Aug. 23, on the WEAF network and W9XPD, the Post-Dispatch's ultra short wave station on 31.6 megacycles (31,600 kilocycles).

Fantastic exaggeration will characterize the show, built around the Baron's legendary adventures as a calvary officer during the Russian campaign against the Turks in the eighteenth century. Listeners will hear (or so it's said) the very hunting horns which the Baron described as being frozen full of music one German winter.

To prove that the Munchausen tradition is being kept alive in Bodenwerder, there will be interviews with old timers who claim to remember the Baron as a boy in the days before the American Revolution.

This much, at least, is fact: The program will be broadcast, the NBC declares.

Belief Aerials 'Draw' Lightning Declared Fallacy

IT IS not dangerous to operate a radio set during a thunderstorm, and radio aerials do not attract lightning, says R. M. Morris, an NBC development engineer. Although his own home was struck by lightning several years ago, Engineer Morris says:

"Contrary to popular belief, radios in the home do not attract lightning, nor do radio antennas. In fact, a properly installed radio antenna, with good lightning arresters, serves as a measure of protection to a house during a thunderstorm. The lightning arresters found on most antennas serve to lessen the force of the lightning, deflecting the dangerous current into the ground, where it will do no harm. It is a fallacy to believe that it is dangerous to play a radio during an electrical storm.

"The chances during one year that your house will be struck by lightning are about one in 1000, as proved by statistics."

In NBC lightning research, Morris said, engineers measured lightning bolts of 10,000 to 200,000 amperes of current.

Gossip From the Studios

HARRY HORLICK, leader of the Gypsies orchestra in KSD's Monday night concert, is considering two offers for radio series and a personal appearance tour from coast to coast, to start when his current broadcast program terminates, New York reports have it . . . Imitators on small stations all over the country of Parks Johnson and Jerry Belcher's "Vox Pop" programs are running the idea into the ground...Reports from Hollywood are that George Burns and Gracie Allen with be broadcasting their programs from the Pacific coast for a long time to come...Gustave Haenschen, musical director of KSD's Sunday night Album of Familiar Music, says that since this program began five years ago fully 1300 songs have been sung and played on it. Frank Munn and Lucy Monroe, its featured singers, have done songs and duets from 13 Victor Herbert operettas and six by Friml, and seven of Haenschen's own pieces...

650 BOYS ON OUTINGS AT NEW SCOUT CAMP

150 of Them Spent Full Week at Lion's Den, Once Transient Camp.

The St. Louis Council of Boy Scouts of America announced yesterday that its new camp, Lion's Den, which closed its first season last week, had provided outdoor camping activities for more than 650 St. Louis scouts, who could not have afforded to attend Camp Irondale. More than 150 of these scouts spent an entire week at Lion's Den, while the others had week-end outings.

Lion's Den in previous years was operated by the United States Government as a camp for homeless men, but this year was turned over to the Scouts. The campmaster was Max Nusser. Harry Siemer was his assistant. They outlined a program of athletics, swimming, hikes and campfires for the boys, many of whom had never spent a night away from St. Louis.

Interest this year was focused on Lion's Den as a one-week experimental camp, and already a library has been provided for it for next year by Dr. R. R. Lewin, West District Commissioner, who has gathered books from Richmond Heights homes. He was helped in his collection by the West Richmond Heights Literary Club.

The 235 St. Louis Scouts in camp at Irondale will be augmented tomorrow by 20 Scouts and two scoutleaders from Troop 242 of Omaha, Neb., for the final week of the camping season. The Nebraska scouts spent last night in camp at the old tourist camp in Forest Park, and left for Irondale today.

The feature of the final week of Irondale's season will be a camporee in which the provisional troops will participate in field events. Today the visitors at Irondale will be entertained by a water carnival, conducted by the Scouts.

Twenty-one Scouts and 12 Scout leaders were elected to the Order of the Arrow, Scout honorary society, as a result of activities in the third section of the Irondale four summer camping sections. The Scouts selected were Orville Praechter, Jim Rosenthal, Bob Olson, James Mahaffey, James Latimore, Roy Walther, Albert Eichammer, Robert Busse, Austin Wyhs, Robert Johnson, Marvin Yavits, Tom Grace, Pete Glovinsky, Eugene Wallace, Del Cummins, Stanley Waxman, Warren Niebling, Otto Bauer, Robert Hemm, Charles Jenkins and Ray Kummert.

A conference on the St. Louis Boy Scout circus, the only indoor demonstration of Scouting on a council-wide basis this year, was held Friday, and plans were prepared to submit to the special circus committee when it meets early in September.

The following troops have just returned from camps: Kirkwood 3, of St. Peter's Catholic Church, Kirkwood, from Steeleville, Mo.; Troop 163, of Kirby Memorial Presbyterian Church, from Spring Lake at Columbia, Ill., and Troop 234, of the Messiah Evangelical Lutheran Church, from Cedar Lake, near Pevely, Mo.

Troop 230 tore down more than 600 campaign signs Wednesday after the primary election. The signs will be used for a bonfire, to be held early in September, when the Bellefontaine Neighborhood Association will hold a special meeting for the purpose of keeping county roads free from such signs in the November election. Jack Pendill, acting captain of the troop, received a letter of congratulations from the Bellefontaine Neighborhood Association for the work his troop did.

GIRL SCOUTS.

Cedarledge, the St. Louis Girl Scout camp, will close its tenth camping season Wednesday, but tents and cooking equipment will be left until early in November so that troops may spend week-ends at the camp. The camping season this year at Cedarledge was announced from St. Louis Girl Scout headquarters as a successful one.

Miss Jane White, president of the St. Louis Brownie Leaders' Association; Mrs. J. Burr Taylor and Miss L. W. Caldwell, Brownie leaders, will leave this week for Camp Edith Macy, Briarcliff Manor, New York, where they will study group leadership.

Girl Scouts and leaders from Joplin, Mo., spent this week-end at the St. Louis Girl Scout Little House. The 11 girls, under the leadership of Miss Dorothy H. Taylor, Mrs. D. G. Harrison, Mrs. H. L. Wilbur and Mrs. Irving are making a tour of the Middle West and came to St. Louis after visiting the Girl Scout camp on the Lake of the Ozarks.

RINGLING-BARNUM & BAILEY CIRCUS TO BE HERE AUG. 21-23

Three-Day Engagement at Kingshighway and Southwest Avenue Lot; Pigmy Elephants Featured.

Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Combined Circus will exhibit in St. Louis for three days, Aug. 21 to 23, at a lot near Kingshighway and Southwest avenue, with performances twice daily.

More than 100 railroad cars, bearing 1600 persons, 1009 menagerie animals, 700 horses, and seven herds of elephants, will arrive early Friday morning, Aug. 21, over the Wabash Railroad lines from Decatur, Ill.

Among the new features in this year's show is a herd of full-grown African pigmy elephants. Other new acts include Col. Tim McCoy's Indian Village; the Royal Bokaras, acrobats who perform on the backs of camels, and the Naittos, tight-rope performers.

R. L. LUND TO LEAD DIVISION IN UNITED CHARITIES DRIVE

Named Chairman of Corporations Unit, to Solicit Funds From 500 Firms.

Appointment of Robert L. Lund, executive vice-president of the Lambert Pharmacal Co. as chairman of the local corporations division of the United Charities Campaign Committee was announced yesterday by Fred L. English, general chairman.

This division will solicit contributions from about 500 firms which, in the past, have given $200 or more to United Charities. Fifty workers for this division will start solicitation shortly before the formal opening of the campaign in November.

Lund formerly was chairman of the Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment.

17 SCHOOL CHILDREN PAGEANTS THIS WEEK

Twelve More to Follow Will Complete Series Assigned to 5000 Pupils.

Pageants will be given this week by children at 17 of the 56 public school playgrounds, and next week at 12 other playgrounds.

This will complete the season's series of local pageants at the playgrounds, in which parts were assigned to 5000 children. They were arranged in connection with the dancing classes, in which the dancing steps and general routines of the entertainment were taught.

There also were special dancing classes at Beaumont and Roosevelt High Schools, and festivals will be held at those institutions later in the month.

The playgrounds, which opened June 15, will close Aug. 28. A similar series of local pageants was held last year, the practice previously having been to hold one large event at the end of the season at Public Schools Stadium.

This week's entertainments, all at 7:45 p. m. unless otherwise noted, will be as follows:

Tuesday—Columbia School, 3120 St. Louis avenue, "Hansel and Gretel"; Eliot School, 4242 Grove street, "Tinklebell of Lollipop Land", 8 p. m.; Walnut Park School, 5814 Thekla avenue, "The Gift of the Foam Fairy"; Scruggs School, 4611 South Grand boulevard, "Old King Cole."

Wednesday—Ashland School, 3921 N. Newstead avenue, "Lazy Town"; Wyman School, 1547 South Theresa avenue, "Peer Gynt"; Longfellow School, 3134 Ivanhoe avenue, "The Crystal Pipe"; Carondelet School, 8221 Minnesota avenue, "The Jolly Coppersmith."

Thursday — Woodward School, 725 Bellerive boulevard, "Winky"; Shepard School, 3450 Wisconsin avenue, "The Moonbeam Princess"; Emerson School, 5415 Page boulevard, "Columbine and Pierrot."

Friday — Walbridge School, 5500 Davison avenue, "The Bronze Ring"; Clay School, 3820 North Fourteenth street, "Fairy Foot"; Clinton School, 1109 Grattan street, "King Hawksbeak," 8 p. m.; Oak Hill School, 4300 Morganford road, "Ting Ling's Trance"; Rock Spring School, 3974 Sarpy avenue, "Harlequin and Columbine."

RECORD ATTENDANCE AT RETAIL MEETING

Convention of Merchants From 31 States Enters Second Week; 2335 Registered.

Having broken all previous records for one week's attendance, the twenty-sixth semi-annual convention of the American Retailers' Association entered its second week today with indications pointing to an even larger number of registrations than in the first.

A total of 2335 merchants had registered for the convention up to noon yesterday. The best previous week's attendance was last year when 1960 merchants registered during the first week of the convention, according to Scott R. DeKins, secretary of the association.

Thirty-one states are represented at the convention, DeKins stated, adding that merchants were coming from longer distances this year than formerly.

The association's convention, which is held regularly in St. Louis, annually ushers in the spring and fall market seasons. Merchants attending usually make their autumn and winter purchases while in the city, and DeKins said several St. Louis wholesalers had informed him that the volume of buying being done this year was larger than for any other year since 1929.

The program for this week's sessions includes another dinner dance at the Meadowbrook Country Club tomorrow night, at which the latest fall styles in coats, suits, millinery, shoes, furs and other women's accessories will be displayed by models; a water carnival at Forest Park Highlands on Tuesday night, and a visit to the prize fight to be held at the Municipal Auditorium on Wednesday night.

New officers and directors of the association will be elected Wednesday. L. K. Sharp of Checotah, Ok., is now president.

He was first employed by the Adams Express Co., a predecessor of the present firm, when the Union Station was at Twelfth and Poplar streets, Hurlbutt, a claim adjuster, began work for the company 39 years ago at Galesburg, Ill. He will be retired on pension next month.

CITY GARBAGE WORKER KILLED

Clodwell Baxter, Negro, in Truck Hit by Automobile.

Clodwell Baxter, 22-year-old Negro, 3117 Hickory street, an employe of the city garbage collection section, was killed at 6:30 o'clock yesterday morning, when a garbage truck in which he was riding was struck by an automobile on Anetta avenue near the intersection with McLaran avenue. Ora Thompson, driver of the truck, was uninjured.

According to the police, Baxter was seated on the floor of the drivers cab with his feet on the running board. Charles Uetrecht, a merchant, 8029 Church road, driver of the automobile which struck the truck, told police that although he was driving at a moderate rate of speed he was unable to avoid hitting the truck.

SHRINE IN CANADA DRAWS TRAVELERS

Pilgrims Have Been Visiting St. Anne de Beaupre for Two Centuries.

The annual trend of motor travel to Quebec, reaching its peak late in July and continuing through August and fall, is again bringing record crowds to the world-famous shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre, long known as the Lourdes of America.

Sick and well alike make the journey to this picturesque shrine. Tens of thousands of visitors come each year both to witness the miraculous cures reported by the infirm who, all other hope abandoned, seek the help of the good St. Anne, or to find relief from their own afflictions. Great piles of crutches, canes and other props left by the "cured" are evidence of restorative powers attributed to the shrine, where early in the history of Quebec the Breton sailors came and proposed a chapel as a thank-offering to their patron saint for saving them from a watery grave. And here, on the site of the present-day shrine, miracles were reported as early as 1665.

Two Centuries of Pilgrimages.

For more than 250 years people of every faith have been making pilgrimages to the shrine of Anne de Beaupre and ever accumulating crutches and relics of every sort form an impressive sight. Pilgrims making the stations of the cross and ascending the Scala Santa on their knees, absorbed in prayer, lend an air of piety and faith to the shrine. All along the surrounding countrysides are quiet little shops filled with tiny statues, rosaries, pictures and other articles of devotion and religious handicraft of the natives.

St. Anne de Beaupre is situated 22 miles east of Quebec, reached over Canadian highway No. 15, an excellent hard-paved road that winds through many of the Province's most fascinating old world scenes.

The old French city of Quebec is the ideal starting point for a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Anne. Despite its proximity to modern cities Quebec preserves its century-old French atmosphere in its many historic churches, its narrow, winding streets, quaint outdoor markets and the Citadel. Quebec also enjoys the unique distinction of being America's only walled city, once a great fortress and scene of fiery battles, but now more renowned for its peaceful charms, its quiet ways and hospitable habitants.

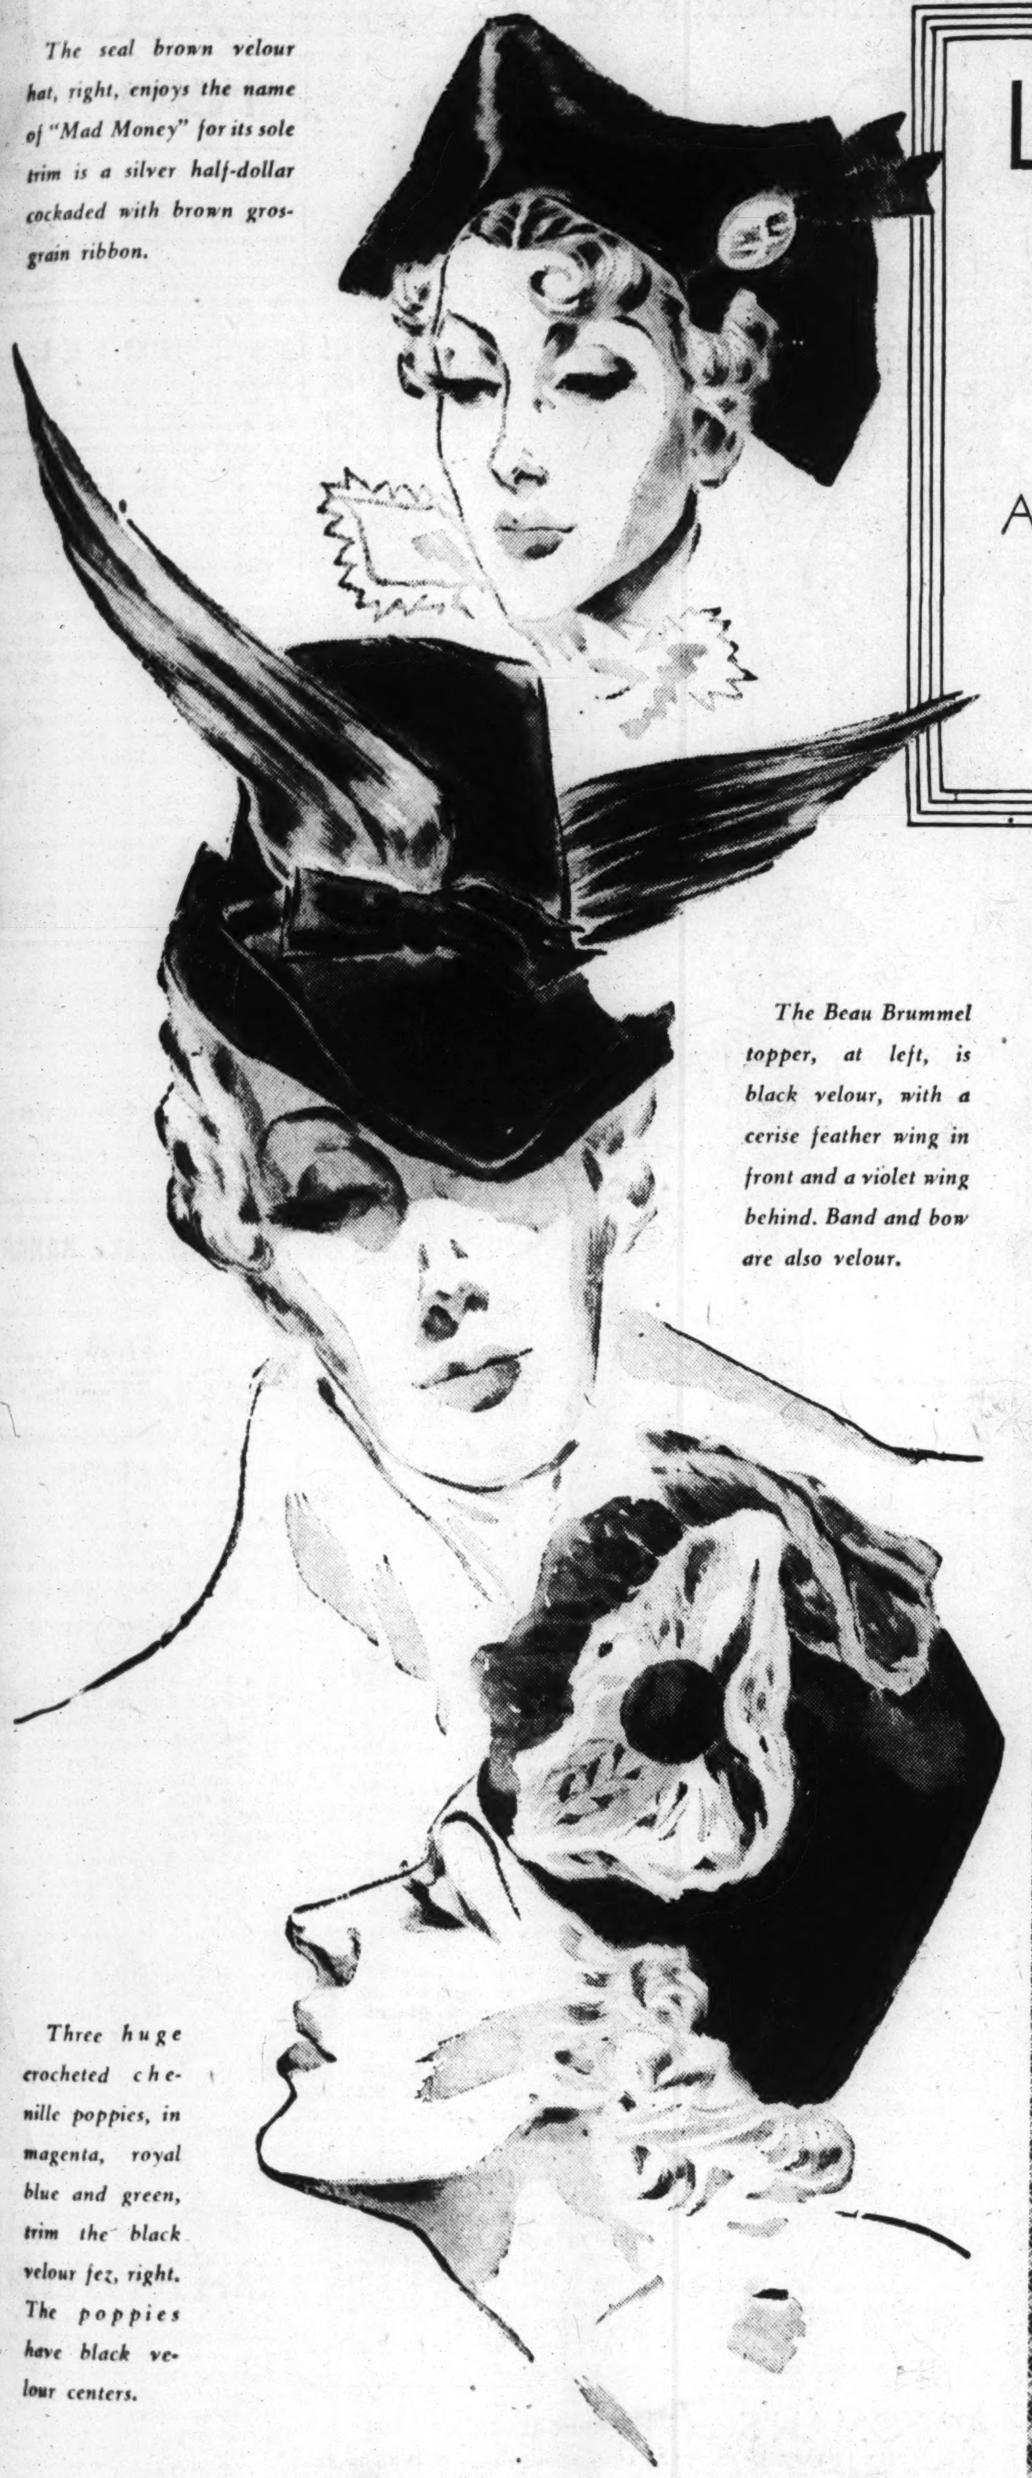
LOOKING ahead at HATS

Autumn and Winter Fashions Are Paraded Before the Eyes of St. Louis Women

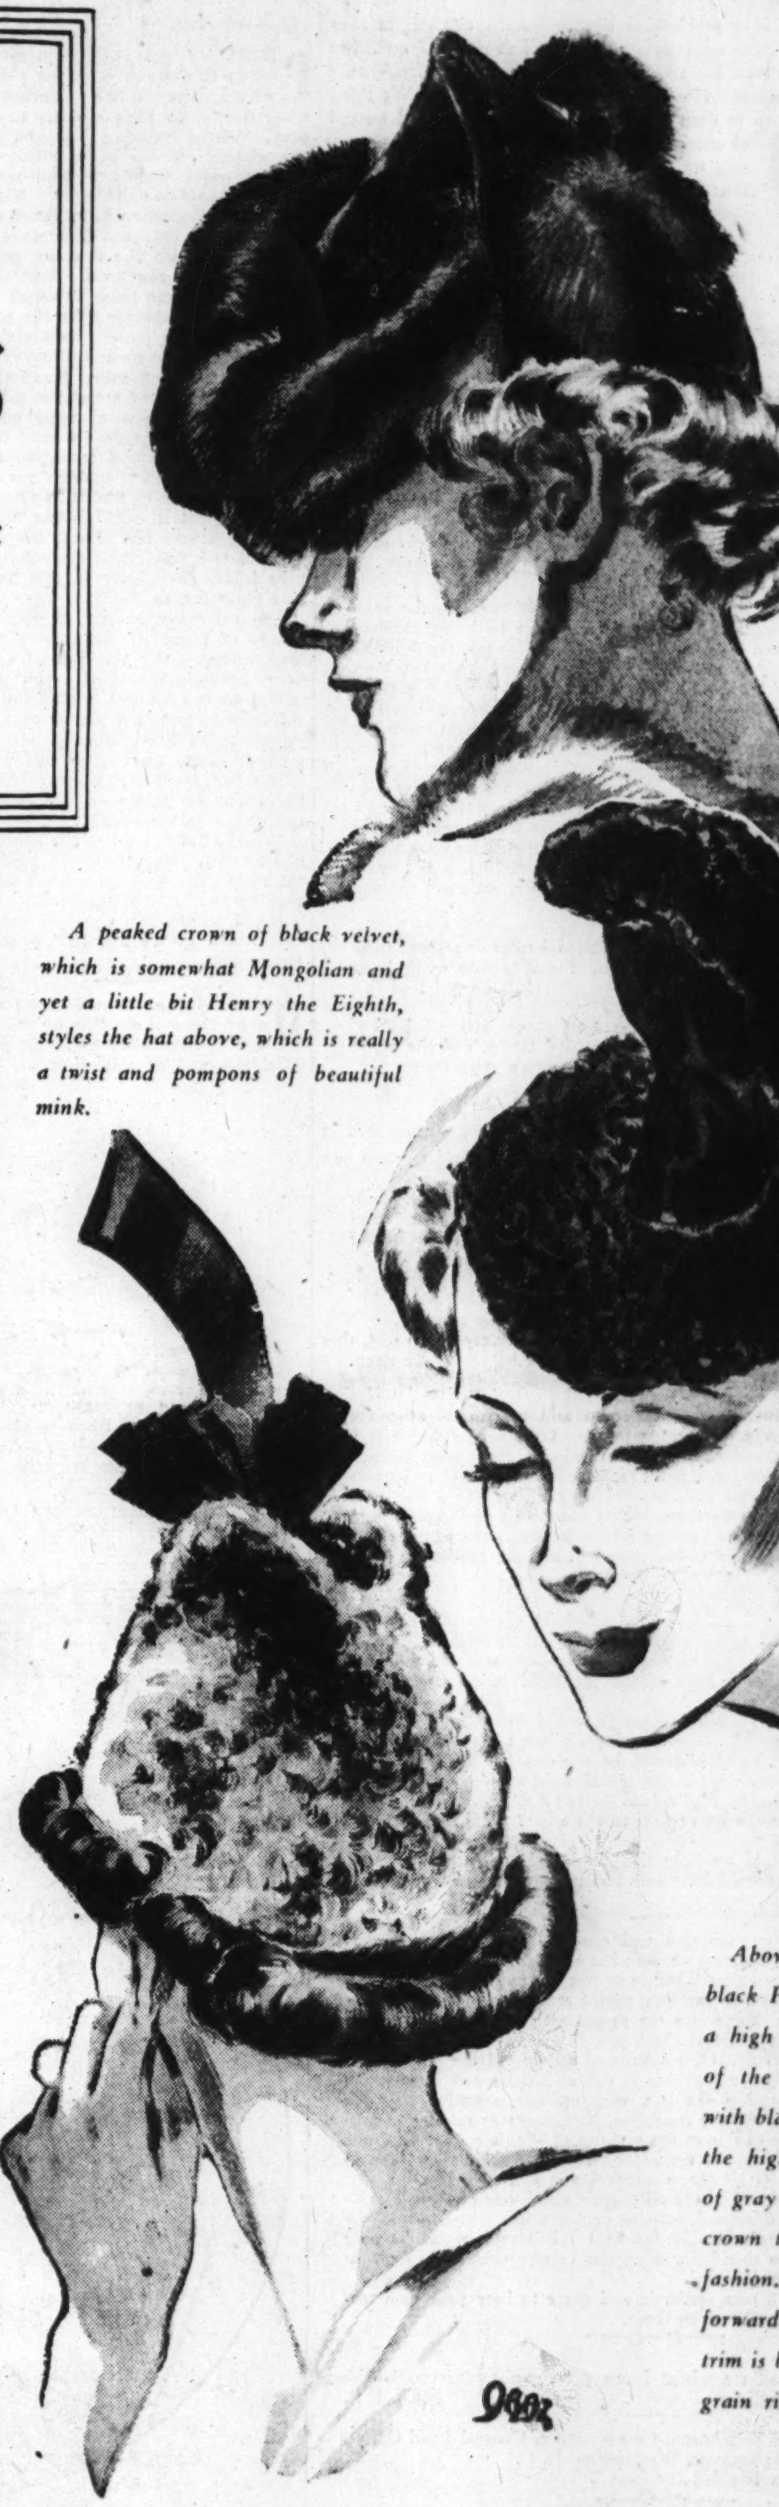
By PRUNELLA WOOD



The seal brown velour hat, right, enjoys the name of "Mad Money" for its sole trim is a silver half-dollar cockaded with brown grosgrain ribbon.

The Beau Brummel topper, at left, is black velour, with a cerise feather wing in front and a violet wing behind. Band and bow are also velour.

Three huge crocheted chenille poppies, in magenta, royal blue and green, trim the black velour fez, right. The poppies have black velour centers.



A peaked crown of black velvet, which is somewhat Mongolian and yet a little bit Henry the Eighth, styles the hat above, which is really a twist and pompons of beautiful mink.

Stepping OUT to MOVIE PREMIERES

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 8.

THIS has been a busy week for the first nighters and the dresser uppers. Four premieres in one evening with two more following kept us all on the move. These grand openings—frequently of very minor pictures—provide the best opportunity the stars have for doing a little personal advertising in their best bibs and tuckers, and this week the best bibs and the best tuckers were run rather ragged.

The chief dress event of the season, the opening of "Anthony Adverse," should have been described last Sunday, but the interview with Norma Shearer interfered. It was such a gorgeous affair from a clothes standpoint, however, that I am going back a bit and tell something about it. You see, for several years, on account of depressions and one thing or another, these premieres, as distinguished from the less costumed previews, have been allowed to slip. Now they are back in greater glory than ever before and with more frequency. Three or four a year used to be considered rather good. Now we are getting that many a week, and if the stars' clothes hold out, goodness knows how many we will be having this winter.

For the really big ones now the scene has shifted from the Boulevard to the Carthay Circle Theater, conducted by our old friends the Skouras Brothers of St. Louis. The Carthay is an outlying house, but it has a tremendous advantage from a spectacular standpoint. The theater sits back several hundred feet from the main street on a private parkway, and when the arriving stars alight from their glittering cars they must walk, sables and minks and diamonds and everything, the "Last Mile." What a sight it is for the assembled multitude. And to make it a little easier, and also, to provide something new in the way of publicity, the producers of "Anthony Adverse" had lined this passage way with two immense grandstands in which the seats were all free. Not places to view the picture, you know, but places from which the notables of filmdom might be looked over.

It sounds silly, no doubt, but with the performance scheduled to begin at 8:30 in the evening—which meant that the stars would start arriving a half hour or so later—the grandstands were filled to overflowing soon after breakfast. It was something like a crowd assembling for a world's series game at Sportsman's Park and the surrounding streets were all roped off and closed to traffic at noon, with boys doing a great business selling soap boxes, broken down chairs and sandwiches. When at last the stars began straggling in, the weary crowd went simply wild with excitement and mounted police were unable to keep them within bounds.

Unbelievable? Yes, but true nevertheless.

"ANTHONY ADVERSE" was a big book; this was a big affair and so, too, there were many big dinner parties both before and after the performance, and persons began to arrive in groups. Among the first of these I noticed was one formed by Mervyn LeRoy, the director of the film, and his wife, the former Doris Warner and their guests, Irving Thalberg and his wife, Norma Shearer; Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Goddard and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Penner. Mrs. LeRoy wore a dress of sheer white lame of Grecian design, and the sparkling Paulette looked quite a different person from the tattered street gamin she impersonated recently in Charlie's last picture, being regally gowned in gold lame trimmed in Russian sable and wearing a full length sable wrap. Miss Shearer was in deep blue crepe combined with orchid and enveloped in a Juliette cape of the rich blue velvet,

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK - - - - - BY ALICE HUGHES

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.

REMEMBER how all our girls, a decade ago, wanted to rush off to Hollywood and be Gloria Swansons? The prettiest lass on every block in the land lay awake nights thinking of the day when she would face the whirring camera in the arms of Eugene O'Brien or Rudolph Valentino!

The talkies did much to smash that dream to bits—and now it is the radio. Spending much time prowling about the headquarters of the two great broadcasting chains, I learn astonishing things. For instance, ether execs tell me that the supply of available talent already exceeds the demand in a ratio of 000 to 1—yet hundreds of young hopefuls pour into the New York offices weekly, begging or demanding that they be heard! One national chain alone has 5000 names in its files, all judged competent for air performance—and less than one per cent of these will get even one chance to face a live mike!

And the big radio outfits try their hardest to hear everyone. The two largest listen to about 8000 applicants a year, and still they cannot keep abreast of the rushing tide! The great majroity of the movies, radio people say, come to their auditions long before they are really ready. They do not realize that vocal defects are amplified tenfold by the mike, and that even a good voice when heard in concert may sound far off pitch on the air.

Yet nothing daunts them—every time I visit a bustling studio I see scores of pretty, eager-eyed girls burning to do their respective stuff on the bounding air-waves. Poor, brave, ambitious kids! It used to be Hollywood boulevard, now it is Radio City, but the same bright dreams are dreamed!

FEW PEOPLE realize how many New York working women loathe the stone canyons that confine them during the business day—and how frantically they plot escape from it all to quiet places where there are grass and tall trees!

Several of my girl friends have succeeded, and in modest places in the nearby country find the peace and quietness the slave-driving city denies! I think of Mrs. Bertram Taylor, once of Indianapolis, who bought a small piece of ground above the lordly Hudson, and bit by bit made a liveable home out of an old barn on the land. Every night she goes to it for sanctuary, and her life is happier and richer than it has been for years. Louise Bonney, expert on modern design and housing, reclaimed an old field-stone house in nearby Jersey, and from a modest salary has made a home against the future. Near her, at Nashanic, 67-year-old Laura Merrill lives alone on a big farm, the haunt of young refugees from the baking town at week-ends. Live Alone and Like It, is their proud slogan—and they do

ONE of the least New Yorkish girls who cross my trail often is Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of the President—the tall, pretty blonde who only misses real beauty by her unusual height. She wears bright colors, unlike most of the local maidens. Lunching the other day at the Algonquin, she wore a melon-pink sweater and skirt and a black hat, and her costume drew more attention than the fact that she is F. D. R.'s daughter. Anna has an office in Rockefeller Center, where she works at something literary. . . .

I note a Cat Beauty Parlor on a side street just off Broadway in the Screaming Forties. There our feline friends (of the four-legged variety, of course), are manicured and dry-cleaned and their patrician fur is brushed, shined and even scented! . . . Perils of Life in the Metropolis . . . Mrs. Ida Cohen is aroused by the howls of her husband, David, who has been sleeping on the fire escape (a good old New York custom in some circles) to escape the heat. She finds that a thoughtless neighbor on a floor above has dumped a pot of scalding water out the window, parboiling poor Mr. Cohen . . .

Best-selling novels fade into the flop status when set against the famous Fanny Farmer's cook book, which has sold 1,700,000 copies since 1986, when it was first published. The 856-page volume still moves off the counters at the rate of 45,000 a year! . . . I note that Signor Mussolini ignored his forty-third birthday not long ago. Gosh, that has a familiar ring! Do you suppose Il Duce, too, is fudging a couple of years?

MODEST explosions along the Fashion Front: If you had any notion of tossing out last season's Tyrolean duds, restrain yourself! They're going to be good again this fall, probably. "White Horse Inn," colorful spectacle from London, which is to open in Radio City soon, is certain to keep hot the interest in bright-colored Alpine clothes.

Another style that never lets go is the knitting race, which shows no sign of abatement. Realizing this, the yarn people have devised new and beautiful styles for us. Remember when all knitted clothes looked somehow a bit on the dowdy side? No more. Now they are shaped and fitted smartly, and in simple, young-looking styles. My only kick is the increasing complexity of the stitches themselves. I confess with practically no shame that most of them have me whipped!

I SUPPOSE every town in the world has one girl all the rest yearn to look like, and even try to copy. Even this maelstrom has had one for the last few years in the slender blonde person of Mrs. Allan A. Ryan Jr., whose face is madonna-like in its placidity, and who wears her corn-colored hair parted in the middle and drawn tightly to each temple. Dozens of would-be Janet Ryans roam the fashionable cocktail lounges! News arrives of her impending legal separation, and her name is being linked with that of New York's most famous man-about-town of this generation, the debonair William Rhinelander Stewart, scion of two famed local families, and who Fifth avenue traffic. Now, in San Francisco, she has the lead in "Reflected Glory," by George Kelly. It should head East later. Everybody is pulling for the clever girl. And I hear that Hollywood's How-lives alone in a 13-room duplex overlooking the East River!

MY OPINION

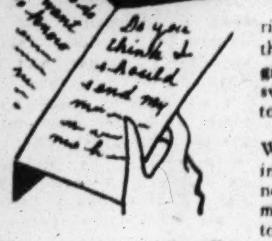
Martha Carr

Dear Martha Carr:

IT IS MORE and more of a problem to rear and teach children as they grow older and to make them understand. And I am at my wits' end. My oldest seems to think we treat her terribly. Like the rest of the family, she is supposed to help keep the house clean as each has her part to do. We think she should help to cook, learn to darn her hose and sew a little. But, instead of getting her work done, she reads after getting up after everybody is through with breakfast; this without a "Good morning," but with such a long face. I cannot bear to look at it. These are what I call her high school manners.



and I do so want to know
Do you think I should send my ...

We try, when our children do their work right, to reward them with spending money and the little one for her grades in school. We have given them every advantage—music, dancing, swimming, books, country life, and what I hope to accomplish, home training.

My husband and I get along wonderfully. We have a nice home and I tell my daughter to invite her friends and play games; but she does not seem to care for many. For myself, I lost my mother, and my stepmother was not willing to show me. This daughter is very fond of art and paints beautifully. Can you tell me where I can send her for free art lessons?

Mrs. Carr, am I old-fashioned in my viewpoints, or have I the right of way?

AT-A-LOSS MOTHER.

Your viewpoint is right and a substantial foundation for the rearing of any young woman. It is more than foolish to bring children up to think this altogether a play-world; that they have no responsibility to be useful and to be grateful. But, I wonder if you have not been overindulgent as this girl grew into womanhood; giving her too much time to play and not teaching her to work with you while you carried so much on your shoulders? Children who do not know what teamwork and group work is, in growing up, are difficult to impress later on. This girl should be taught that good sportsmanship in her home work means that she takes on her own share and does not push it off and do it in a slovenly manner; nor expect someone else to do it for her.

It is all very well to reward young people for their work, but not to make them feel this is the only incentive. A trip to camp or to a boarding school or some social service work, might teach this girl something about teamwork and discipline, which, evidently, she cares nothing about.

If she is a genius and has the artistic temperament, it may be impossible to make her conform to your conventional rules or reason; these people are sometimes a law unto themselves. But it is wise to find out whether it is temper or temperament she possesses. Let the girl find out, for herself, about are lessons.

Probably you will get information about art groups at the School of Fine Arts of Washington University, The Artists' Guild, and the office of the Board of Education or the Catholic Women's Association.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● I should like your advice on a problem which I have not been able to solve myself. I am going to have a birthday party Aug. 11. And I would like to know some games to play. There will be four boys and four girls. Their ages are from 14 to 16. What kind of prize shall I give? G. H. E.

If you will hurry and write me, sending self-addressed, stamped envelope, I will mail you games and suggestions for prizes; but I have not the space to print games, as a rule, in the column.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

I am a girl 13 years of age and exceedingly fat for my age. Now Mrs. Carr, I would like for you to give me some exercises or a very cheap diet, that would likely get results soon. Thanking you in advance. Fat Thirteen.

The very best exercise I can suggest is, the exercise of will-power which will control the number of ice-cream sodas, the pieces of chocolate and limit the all-day suckers you indulge in. Of course I know if I were to give you a few exercises which would take off these extra pounds (which do not matter a bit for a girl 13), in a few days, and make you sylphlike, but not limit your consumption of goodies, you'd like it a whole lot. But this cannot be done. You must limit your sweets and pastries, and if you will write sending self-addressed, stamped envelope I will mail you some exercices (which you will not do, probably.)

—o—o—

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● My problem is an invalid child. I have asked the opinion of several well-known persons and they all advise an institution. But it seems a hard thing to do. A few years ago, a friend of mine had a problem of this kind and I have often thought she should have placed the child in an institution; the minister advised it.

When the doctor first pronounced my little girl incurable, I looked into one or two of these homes and was so discouraged that I gave it up. But now I have heard of another. This child will be 6 years old in September and her sister is not quite 2 years older. She has thought of her sister as a baby, but is now beginning to realize that something is all wrong. If we place this child in an institution how can we explain to the other? Will she, in time forget her sister?

The main question is, if we keep this child at home, how will it affect the normal child's life? Again, I have so much to do that I cannot do for the little invalid what should be done. D. D. C.

I deeply sympathize with you and can understand the sorrow it must be for a parent to have ever before her a little afflicted child. I believe you, alone, can determine whether or not it would be best to place the child in an institution. Sometimes people make those decisions hurriedly for others, because it seems the easiest way out. But, again, we must remember that the afflicted child, too, has her rights to home and the affections of her family. Of course, you should tell the normal one as best you can about the misfortunes of her afflicted sister; I think she will understand, and, unless she is a very nervous, sensitive one, her ilfe may not be affected by the condition. For, however much you may wish to shield the older one from the realities of life, it cannot be done; your tenderness in making her understand and in teaching her how to accept the misfortunte is all the protection you can give her.

But, on the other hand, if the older little girl is one of those highly-keyed, nervous, easily depressed natures (not just merely selfish in demanding that things run smoothly for her) I believe it woud be only fair, and your duty, to shield her from the consquences of being constantly with the abnormal one.

Either decision will take fortitude and grace to bear your own sorrow and I hope you may be given these.

My dear Mrs. Carr:

● Would you please tell me where I can get complete information about homesteading in Alaska? MRS. J. E.

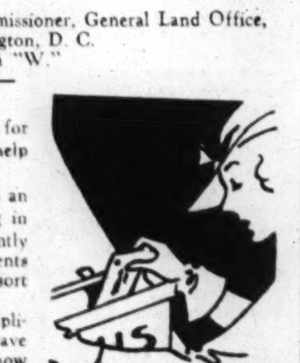
Write to Mr. Fred E. Johnson, Commissioner, General Land Office, U. S. Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C.

This will answer a like inquiry from "W."

—o—o—

Dear Mrs. Carr:

My problem will perhaps prove unusual for you to solve, but hope you may be able to help me.



The one ambition in my life is to sing with an orchestra. I am 18 years of age. Have sang in a church choir over two years and just recently started solo work. I have received compliments wherever I have sung, so am positive this sort of career is worth working for.

Please, Mrs. Carr, do not think these compliments have gone to my head; instead they have given me encouragement. The question is how shall I make myself known to orchestra leaders or in other words how can I come in contact with them so that I can have a place in the sun? Perhaps some of your readers can offer advice which I can assure you will be greatly appreciated. Please excuse the typewritten letter. S. K.

If you know any musicians, or have other friends, through whom you can procure a letter of introduction to any of the orchestra leaders, that is the best way to get a hearing. If you have no such connections, then all you can do is go to some well-known teacher here and try to get a voice test; probably you will have to pay for this, then ask for a written statement from him, which you can present to orchestra leaders in person or through their secretaries.

It is necessary now, with most orchestra leaders, to have some kind of credentials, for the reason that they have not always the time to give to trying out every musician who asks it.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

THEY'RE Going for PARLOR GAMES

"Knock, Knock," one of latest which makes Dad realize home is not what it once was.

BY VIRGINIA IRWIN

PERHAPS you can remember when the parlor was the place where the family gathered after dinner to listen to the mama play, "We're Tenting Tonight" on the wheezy old organ, or indulge in a nice, quiet and innocuous game of Old Maid or Authors. Those were the days when papa could call one certain chair his own and nobody mussed up the evening paper until the old gentleman had read it from the first page through the want ads. At exactly 8:30, the papa laid down his paper, pushed his glasses down his nose and surveyed the goings on, musing meanwhile on the days when he and the mama were building up this happy home. At 8:45 the venerable old soul took off his specs, folded them up and put them in his inside pocket, mounted the stairs, and with a happy sigh resigned himself to the feathers. That was the signal for calling off the festivities and 15 minutes later, everybody in the house was tiptoeing to the hay.

Generally speaking this was the tempo of night life in most American homes until the most unpopular amendment that was ever added to the United States Constitution was put into effect and the young folks hung a crepe on the parlor door, used the Old Maid cards for bookmarks and moved the scene of action to the nearest roadhouse or speakeasy.

The old folks held down the easy chairs in the parlor, groaned "What's the younger generation coming to?" and home became just a place where you went to change clothes to go to another whoopee emporium.

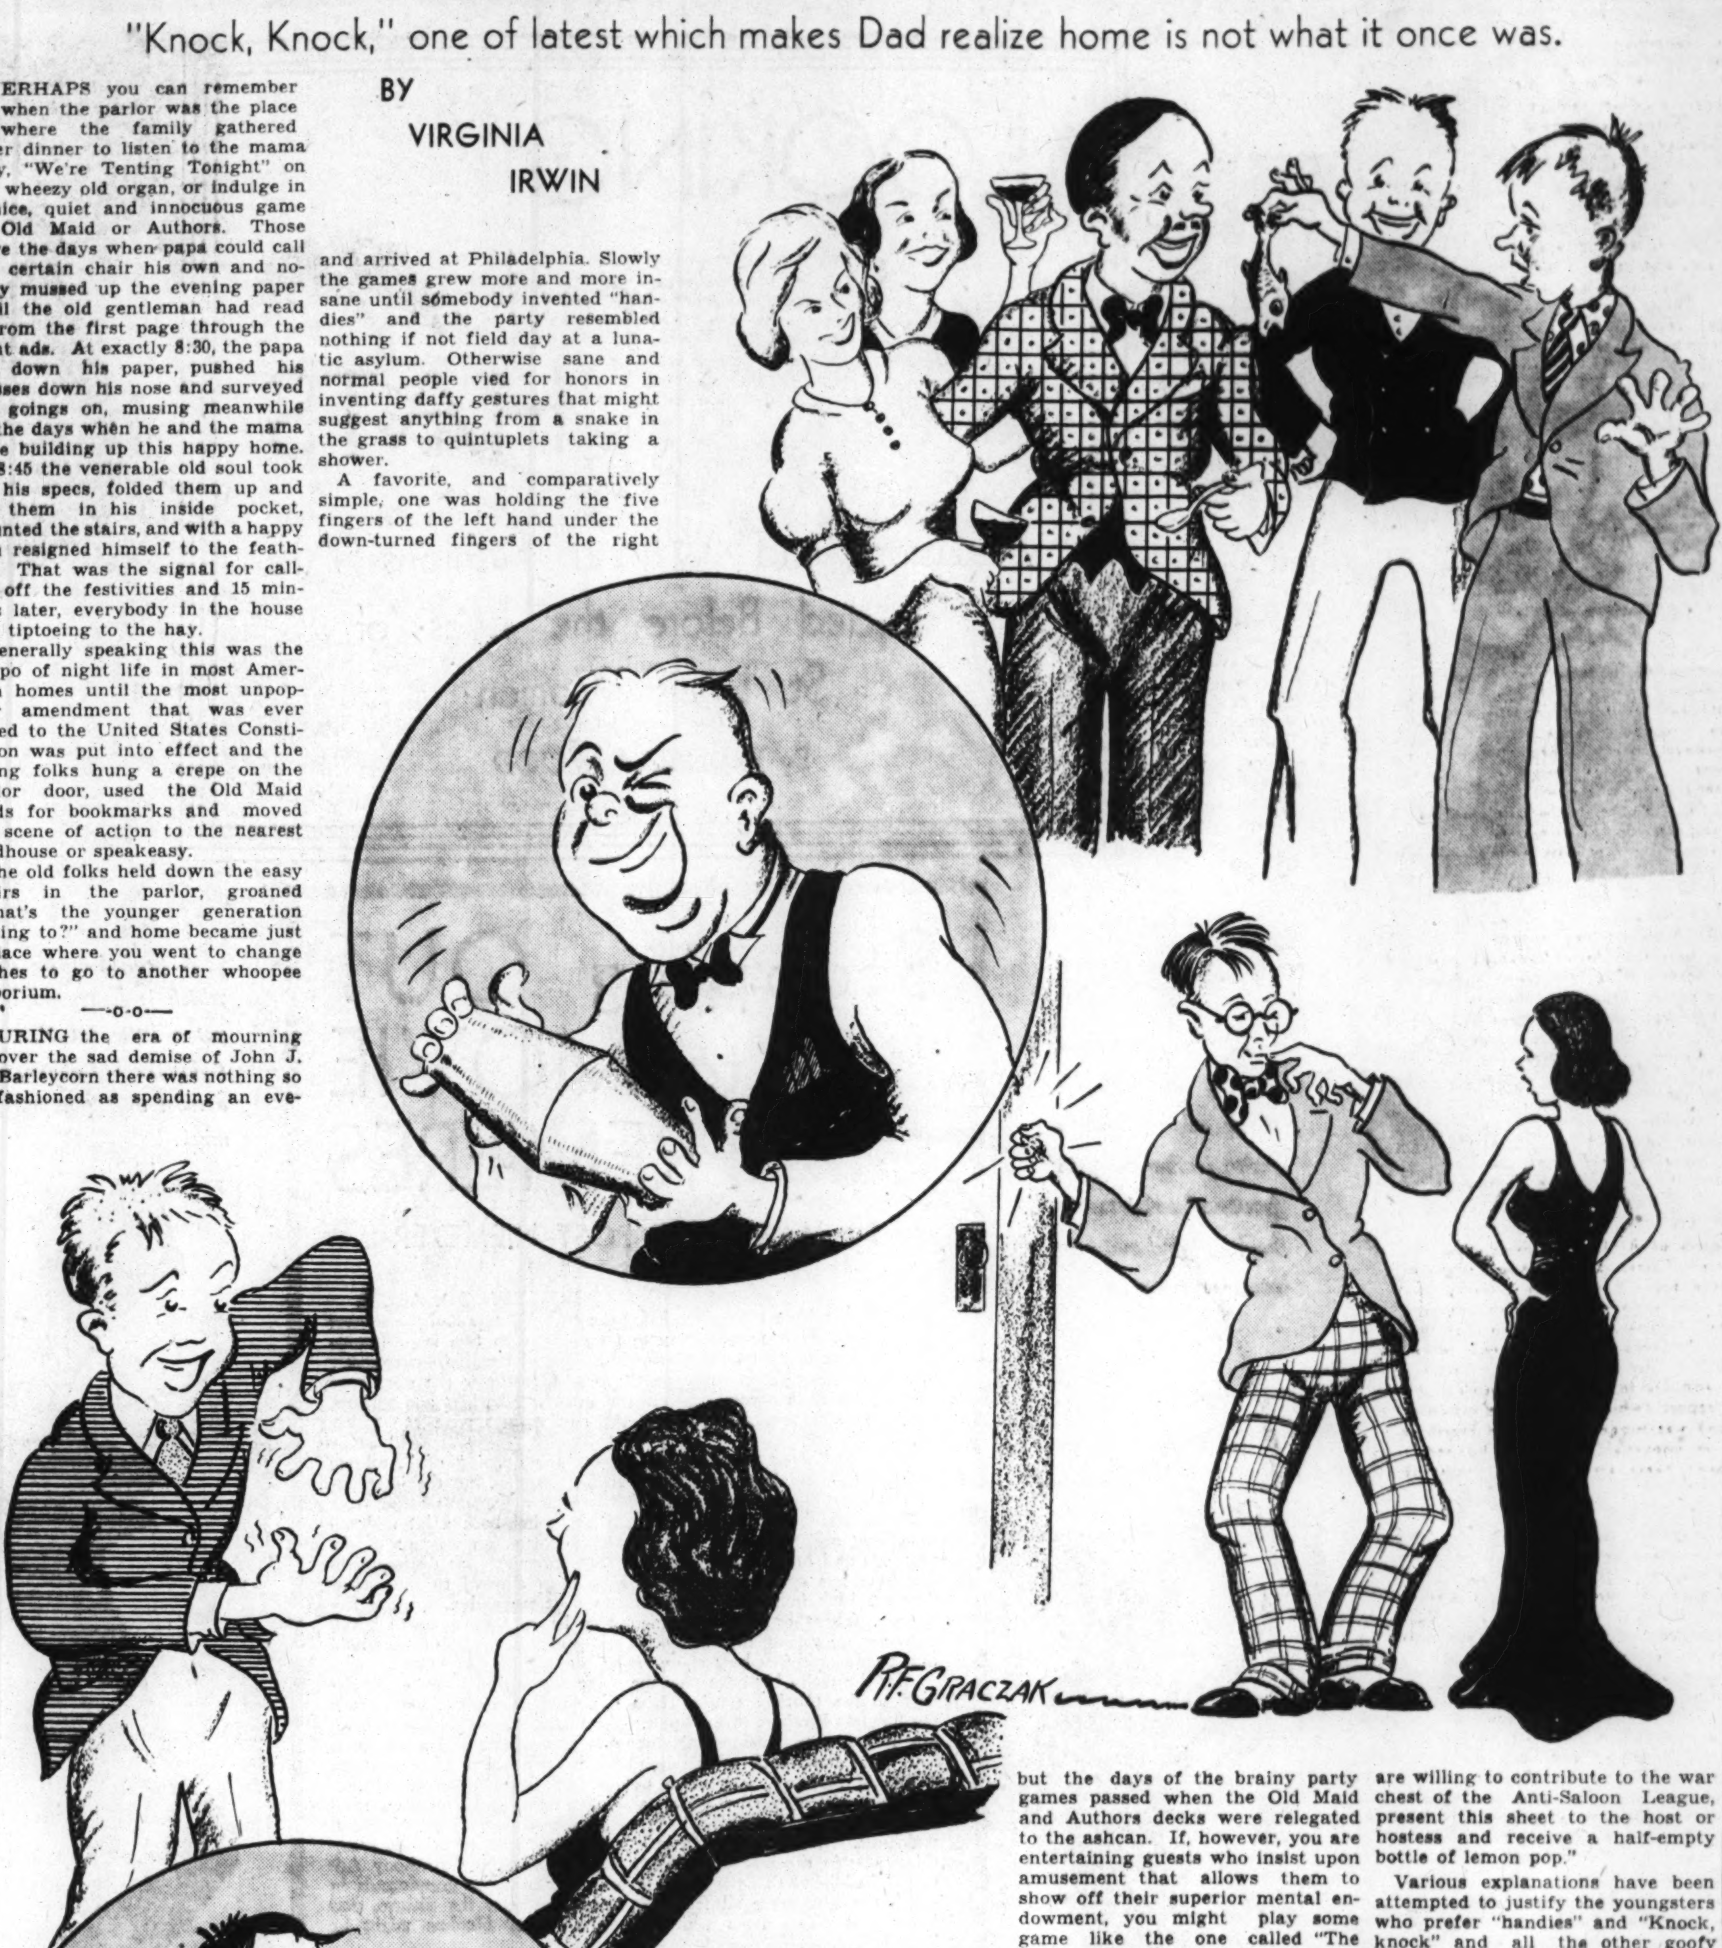
DURING the era of mourning over the sad demise of John J. Barleycorn there was nothing so old-fashioned as spending an evening at home, but when John was exhumed by virtue of the repeal amendment to our Constitution, the parlor once more came into its own. Where once it was considered only right and fitting that everybody attend the all-night wakes held at blind pigs in honor of the dead hero, by December, 1933, the procedure had changed and everybody was celebrating his return from the grave in their own front rooms. Every host began to pride himself on his ability to mix drinks and every hostess began collecting games that could be played with not too much wear and tear on either the parlor or the guests' gray matter.

At first there were jig-saw puzzles and intelligence tests. Then there were personality quizzes—where you answered a lot of apparently irrelevant questions and discovered whether you should get married or go in for raising bees. Anagrams was another favorite where you unscrambled something like "Lipsoanaidni" and got Indianapolis, or dissected "Iillhhaadepp" and then wiggling all 10 digits at once. The answer was "Rain falling, grass growing." Another consisted of raising the left hand somewhat on the order of a Nazi salute ;running the right hand from salute, running the left arm up to and over the fingers of the left hand, and then letting the right hand drop. The answer to that was, "Building up for an awful let down." Another baffler was merely getting up off your chair and asking, "What's this?" while standing perfectly still. The solution for that one was: "Sitting Bull on a vacation."

and arrived at Philadelphia. Slowly the games grew more and more insane until somebody invented "handies" and the party resembled nothing if not field day at a lunatic asylum. Otherwise sane and normal people vied for honors in inventing daffy gestures that might suggest anything from a snake in the grass to quintuplets taking a shower.

A favorite, and comparatively simple, one was holding the five fingers of the left hand under the down-turned fingers of the right



Just why the game of "handies" should have enjoyed such a run is hard to explain, but the fact remains that "handies" had more devotees than any parlor game of the age.

Now threatening the popularity of "handies" is another daffy game called "Knock, Knock." The only requirements are that nobody in the party object to being suspected of being feeble-minded.

"Knock, knock," says some member of the party. Another asks, "Who's there?"

"Tarzan."

"Tarzan who?"

"Tarzan Stripes Forever."

Now begin again. "Knock, knock," says someone. Another challenges, "Who's there?"

"Bill."

"Bill who?"

"Bill Collector."

THIS craze for crazy amusement has prompted the game manufacturers to offer all sorts of slightly goofy suggestions guaranteed to turn any party into a riot. One called "Liquid Lyrics" can be played two ways. If you want a comparatively quiet party each guest is supplied with a paper on which is written a line from each of 15 or 16 songs. His job is to add the line that comes after each given line in each song. First prize for high score is a full drink, second prize a half a drink, and third prize two tablespoonfuls of what ever liquid the host is providing. Lowest score guest must eat, as a penalty, a handful of salted peanuts, an anchovy, a smoked herring of a teaspoon of peanut butter.

"But it may be that you are not so keen about quiet," the manufacturers generously suggest. "Perhaps you have a grudge against the neighbors, perhaps you haven't any neighbors, or perhaps you just like to make a noise; then let the host or hostess read the lines one at a time to the guests one at a time. The guest to whom the line is read must sing this line, together with the one which follows it in the song."

Any guest who complies with the rules is entitled to the best drink the house affords; but anyone refusing to warble "I don't want any Wurzberger," "Just a wee deoch and doris," or whatever song falls his lot, must eat a gob of peanut butter on a dry cracker.

Of course there's nothing very intellectual about such pursuits, but the days of the brainy party games passed when the Old Maid and Authors decks were relegated to the ashcan. If, however, you are entertaining guests who insist upon amusement that allows them to show off their superior mental endowment, you might play some game like the one called "The Liquor Problem."

In this relatively sane game each guest starts wtih the number 18 written on a piece of paper and the hostess then gives such instructions as: "If you consider a tomato juice cocktail superior to an Old Fashioned as an appetizer, tear up this sheet: if not, multiply by the number of states which rejected the repeal amendment up to Nov. 15, 1933." Or, "If you think Haig & Haig is a golf team, you are excused from class. If not, divide by the number of cocktails you could get in the Good Old Days for 25 cents when they were sold two for a quarter."

After several such exercises in multiplication, subtraction and long division, the final instructions are read: "If the result you now have equals the number of dollars you are willing to contribute to the war chest of the Anti-Saloon League, present this sheet to the host or hostess and receive a half-empty bottle of lemon pop."

Various explanations have been attempted to justify the youngsters who prefer "handies" and "Knock, knock" and all the other goofy games to those quiet, elevating, and harmless pastimes of yesteryears. The trend toward daffy amusement has been blamed variously on the Democratic administration, repeal, the depression, decay of youthful mentality and the funny papers, but whatever the cause the old folks think it's pretty sad that the old parlor has been turned into a madhouse.

They wouldn't mind if just one of the games was as sensible as "Authors," but to watch somebody imitating "Sitting Bull on a vacation" or eating a smoked herring because he couldn't sing some silly song, is just plain crazy.

"It doesn't make sense," say the graybeards.

"And that's why it's fun," answer the party-goers of 1936.

"I guess he must love me!" she said.

A small wooden breadboard should be kept near your sink, or on your kitchen table, on which to place your pots and pans. This will prevent scarring or scorching, your sink, or table.

Feather Turbans

The woman who likes to be the first to indorse a daring millinery fashion should get herself one of those startling feather turbans to start the fall season. They are made of coque feathers arranged in swirl formation to look as much like a sleek headdress as possible. The designers have gone so far as to arrange a part and to pull the feathers forward over the ears somewhat similar to a wind-blown bob.

To complete a striking ensemble there are collars, corsages muffs and other novel costume trimmings made of matching feathers. Coppery tones are advocated but there's no reason why glistening black or even blond shades should not be used.

These feather fashions are designed for wear with cocktail and dinner dresses, the sleek turbans showing off to best advantage under electric lights.

If you are cutting up fruit like oranges or grapefruit, for a salad, save some of the juice and use it in place of vinegar in your fench dressing. It is especially good on fruit or vegetable salads.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

STAGE MANAGER ZEKE COLVAN of the Municipal Opera abdicated the chair in our favor the other night. We mean the chair he traditionally occupies in the wings on opening nights. There we sat and watched "The Connecticut Yankee"—planted in a corner way down stage in an entrance that's used exclusively for spying.

Gil Lamb came to spy beside us for a minute, and broke the rules by smoking. He tells the authorities that Sir Galahad needs a cigarette for nonchalance on stage. Gil's shoes happened to come untied and he went through a regular routine fixing them up.

Policemen came and went in our box, and Harriet Hoctor joined us after her airplane dance. She had removed the toe shoes with rubber tips, that caused her to skid ever so slightly on the wet stage, and was wearing high-heeled black patent leather pumps. You ought to see her warm up before she goes on. She was leaping around corners and down runways like a jack-rabbit, finally mincing off on her toes to the dressing-rooms.

Ruby Mercer has to warm up, too, but she lets Duke Robbins do it for her with a massage of her throat and shoulder muscles. Ruby lost a line in a close-up scene with Eddie Garr, and, as he said afterward, "Threw them right up in the air." They picked it up in a second, and the audience, if they noticed at all, probably gave the actors credit for a good job of ad-libbing.

It certainly upset Assistant Stage Manager Eddie Saulpaugh who was sitting next to us. He had the script in his hand, but wasn't supposed to act as prompter. There isn't a real prompter on the premises. But when it happened, he ducked out, trailing a mild oath, to see if he could "throw" them a line.

THERE WERE minor incidents all through the show. Eddie Garr cut his thumb working black magic with the collapsible cane. He sucked it to keep it from bleeding while he was on the stage. And John Cherry had to be removed to the hospital for what amateurs diagnosed as acute indigestion. Someone recalled what he had eaten for dinner. An understudy took over the few lines Cherry had to say.

Actual performances seem to have a sobering effect on the ladies and gentlemen of the ensemble. They were very business-like waiting for cues in the wings. They had to punch a time-clock on the rehearsal stage every night at 7:30. Then there's nothing to do for a while but sit around and play draw poker or pingpong. Mary, one of the wardrobe mistresses, had a birthday the evening we were there, so they presented her with a fancy cake, and hung out of the dressing rooms to sing "Happy Birthday to You."

The first curtain call is at 7:45. It rings as long and as loud as a fire drill alarm in a girls' dormitory on a Sunday morning in winter. There's another call at five minutes before 8 and then a five-minute-to-the-curtain warning.

A good deal of soda pop and ice cream is consumed during the intermission and a good many cigarettes smoked. Dorothy Vernon tried to talk Audrey Christie into having one with her, but the comedienne declined in her best King Arthur dialect: "Nay, I fain would begin mine diet this very night." She's taking only orange juice and milk, hoping to lose the seven pounds she has gained in St. Louis.

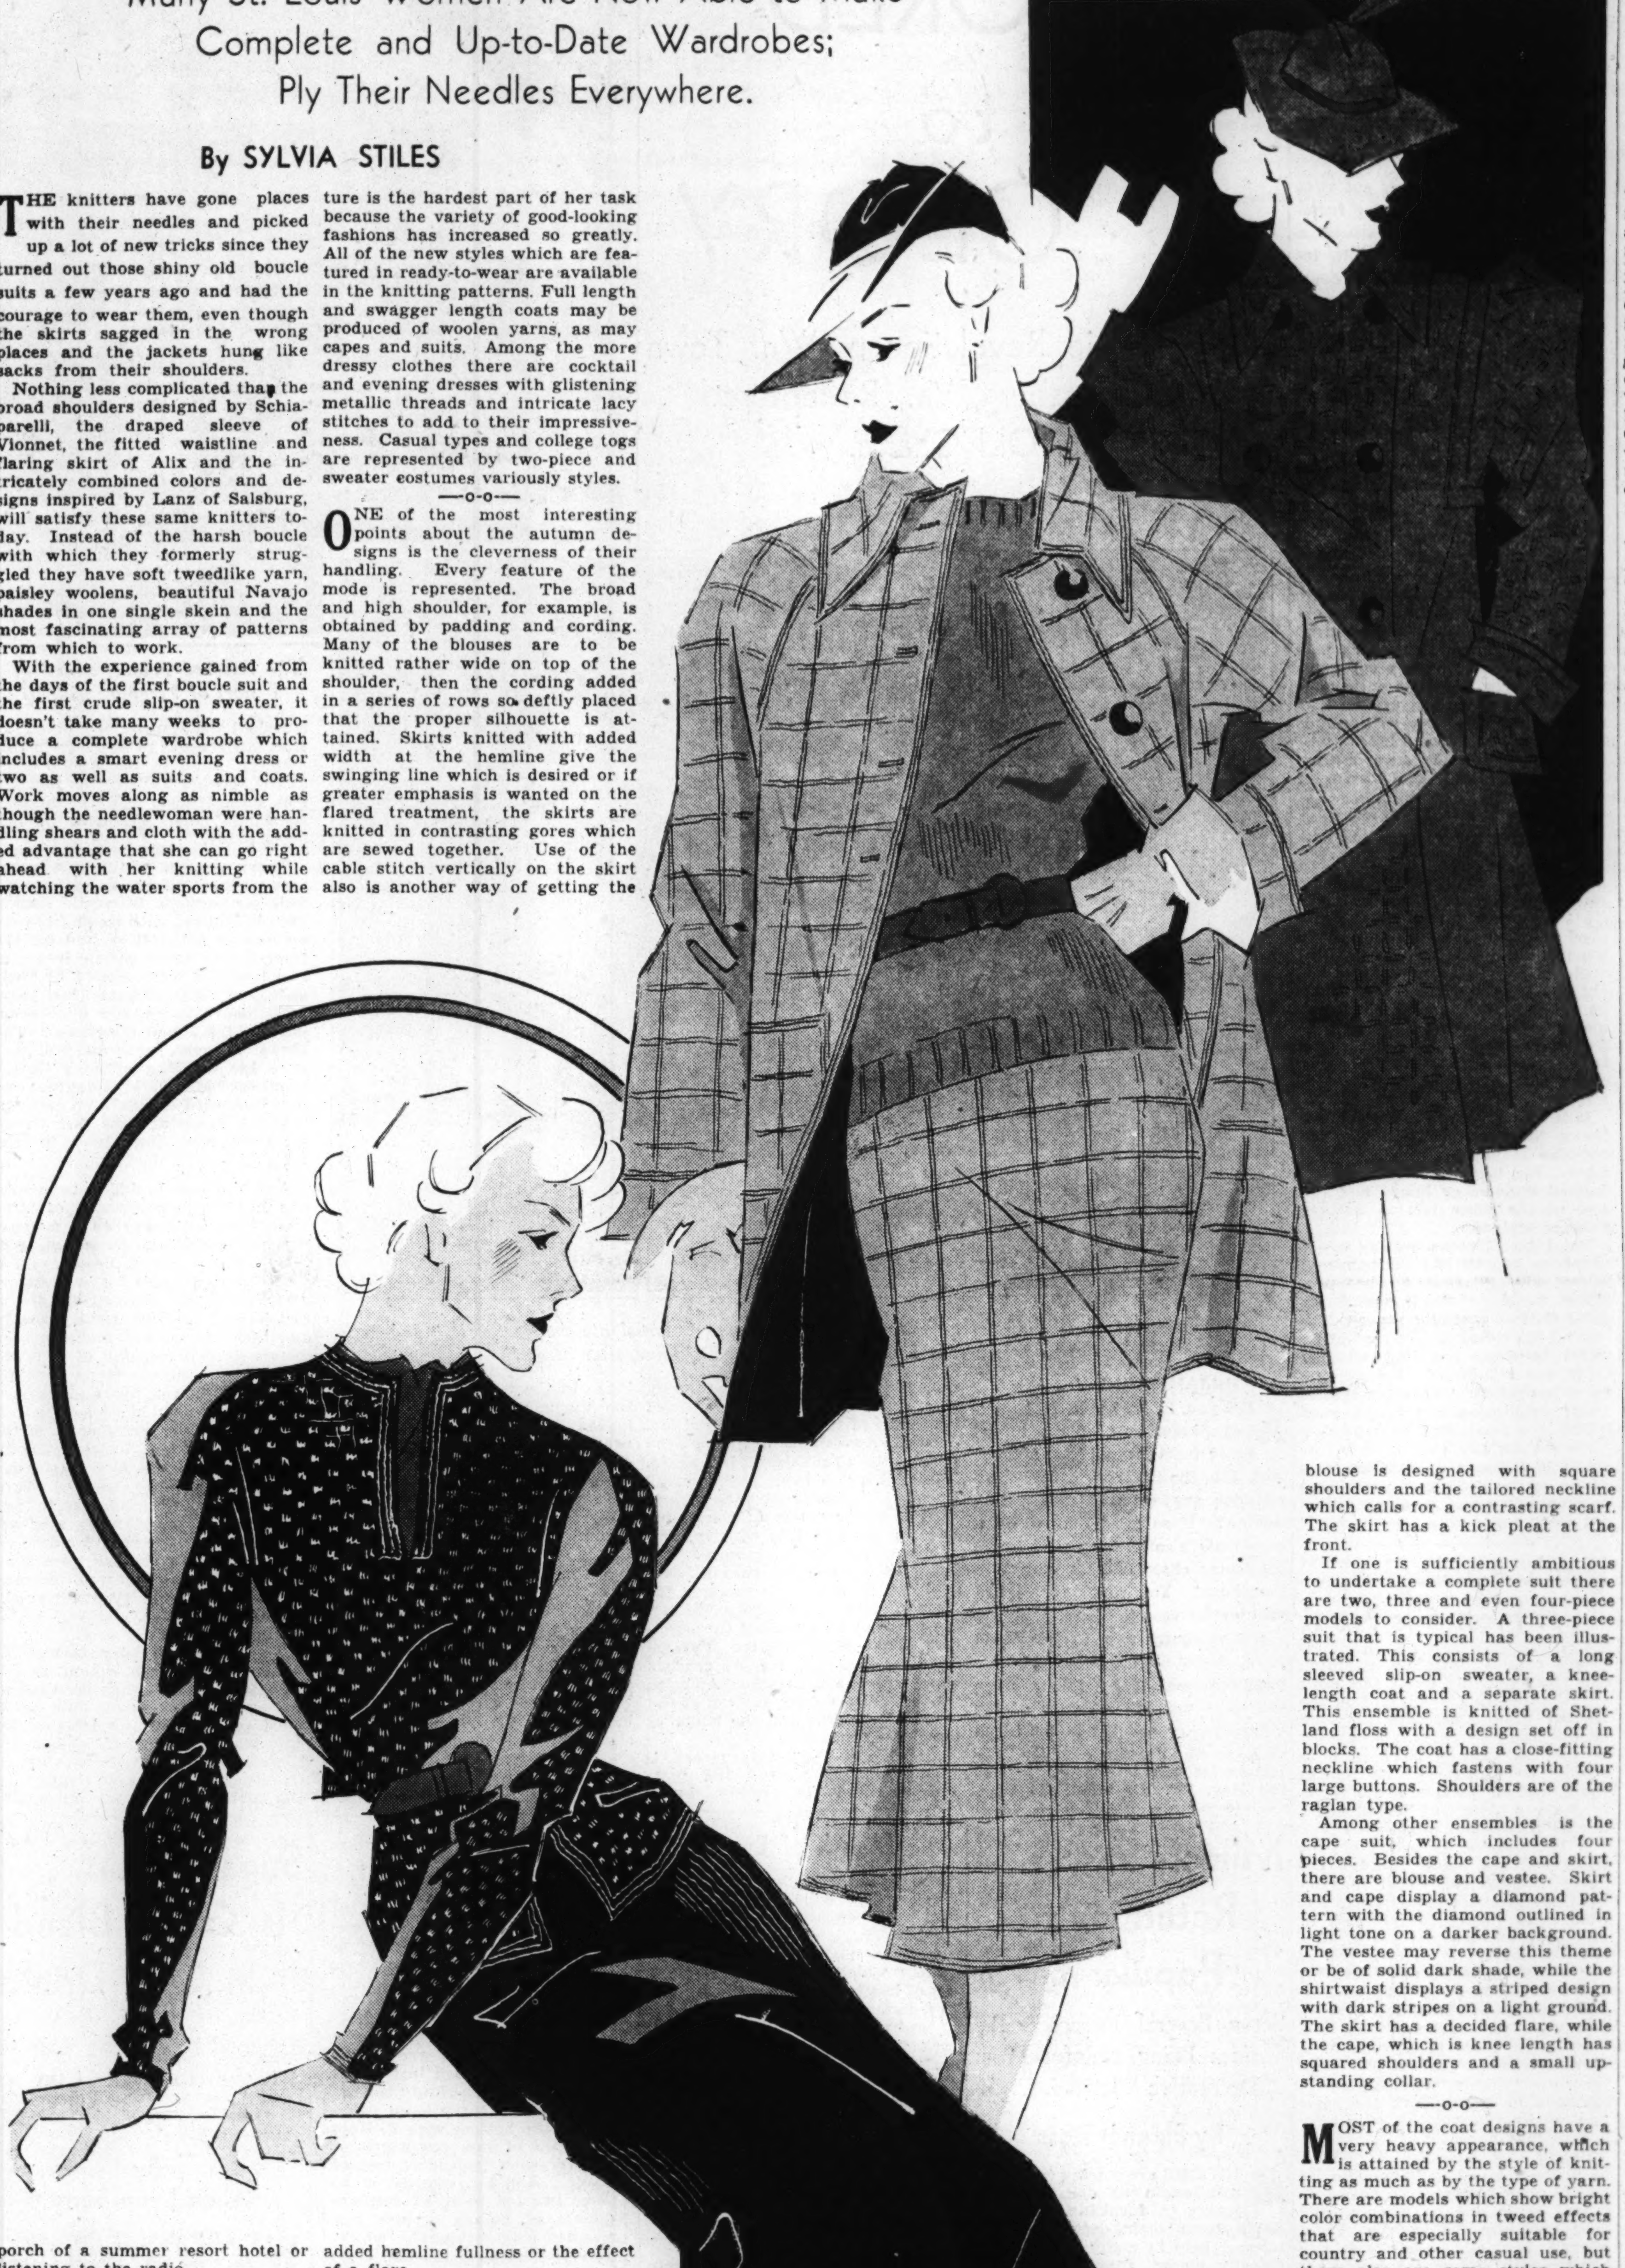
CLOSE-UP of ST. LOUIS FASHIONS

PICKING Up New Knitting TRICKS

Many St. Louis Women Are Now Able to Make Complete and Up-to-Date Wardrobes; Ply Their Needles Everywhere.

By SYLVIA STILES



THE knitters have gone places with their needles and picked up a lot of new tricks since they turned out those shiny old boucle suits a few years ago and had the courage to wear them, even though the skirts sagged in the wrong places and the jackets hung like sacks from their shoulders.

Nothing less complicated than the broad shoulders designed by Schiaparelli, the draped sleeve of Vionnet, the fitted waistline and flaring skirt of Alix and the intricately combined colors and designs inspired by Lanz of Salsburg, will satisfy these same knitters today. Instead of the harsh boucle with which they formerly struggled they have soft tweedlike yarn, paisley woolens, beautiful Navajo shades in one single skein and the most fascinating array of patterns from which to work.

With the experience gained from the days of the first boucle suit and the first crude slip-on sweater, it doesn't take many weeks to produce a complete wardrobe which includes a smart evening dress or two as well as suits and coats. Work moves along as nimble as though the needlewoman were handling shears and cloth with the added advantage that she can go right ahead with her knitting while watching the water sports from the porch of a summer resort hotel or listening to the radio.

Nothing can stop the present-day knitter. Once she gets set to create herself a new costume she never wavers from her purpose. She may be a sports fan and go to see a big league ball game, but her knitting goes with her. She may be a regular attendant at the Municipal Opera but she gets there early to finish a row or two before the program starts, and since she can proceed almost as well in the dark as she can in the light, the needles may keep right on clicking while the prima donna reaches for her highest notes or the comedian carries on some side-splitting chatter.

AUGUST is the month when the knitter achieves the most. It's vacation time and to her this means knitting time. Also, the new designs have arrived and there are many tempting suggestions for the coming season's apparel which she is ambitious to attempt. By working fast and sometimes furiously she can have a new ensemble ready for September wearing.

What to choose as her first venture is the hardest part of her task because the variety of good-looking fashions has increased so greatly. All of the new styles which are featured in ready-to-wear are available in the knitting patterns. Full length and swagger length coats may be produced of woolen yarns, as may capes and suits. Among the more dressy clothes there are cocktail and evening dresses with glistening metallic threads and intricate lacy stitches to add to their impressiveness. Casual types and college togs are represented by two-piece and sweater costumes variously styles.

ONE of the most interesting points about the autumn designs is the cleverness of their handling. Every feature of the mode is represented. The broad and high shoulder, for example, is obtained by padding and cording. Many of the blouses are to be knitted rather wide on top of the shoulder, then the cording added in a series of rows so deftly placed that the proper silhouette is attained. Skirts knitted with added width at the hemline give the swinging line which is desired or if greater emphasis is wanted on the flared treatment, the skirts are knitted in contrasting gores which are sewed together. Use of the cable stitch vertically on the skirt also is another way of getting the added hemline fullness or the effect of a flare.

The two-piece theme is pronounced in the autumn collections and perhaps serves best of all of the new knitting ideas to show off the colors and yarns to best advantage. The tendency is to have an overblouse of one color and the skirt of another, one tone carrying through the two garments. A mixture of navy and lime yarn fashions the overblouse of one attractive frock while the vestee and the skirt are of the solid navy. Navy scarf, belt and sleeve trimming add to the effectiveness of the combination.

Another striking two-piece costume is made by using a plaid skirt with a plain overblouse trimmed with the plaid. Instructions are given to knit the plaid design or to embroider it after the skirt is made. The embroidered touch, by the way, is one which gives a professional aspect to many of the hand-knitted things for autumn. Flowers are embroidered all over a solid colored blouse or jacket to contrast with the skirt or a sweater may have an embroidered border in a gay floral design.

The two-piece frock which is illustrated at the left in the group indicates some features of the knitted daytime mode and some excellent possibilities for color combinations as well as the alliance of different yarns. It is made of cashmere sport yarn and paisley tweed, two very popular yarns for fall and winter. The long-sleeved blouse is designed with square shoulders and the tailored neckline which calls for a contrasting scarf. The skirt has a kick pleat at the front.

If one is sufficiently ambitious to undertake a complete suit there are two, three and even four-piece models to consider. A three-piece suit that is typical has been illustrated. This consists of a long sleeved slip-on sweater, a knee-length coat and a separate skirt. This ensemble is knitted of Shetland floss with a design set off in blocks. The coat has a close-fitting neckline which fastens with four large buttons. Shoulders are of the raglan type.

Among other ensembles is the cape suit, which includes four pieces. Besides the cape and skirt, there are blouse and vestee. Skirt and cape display a diamond pattern with the diamond outlined in light tone on a darker background. The vestee may reverse this theme or be of solid dark shade, while the shirtwaist displays a striped design with dark stripes on a light ground. The skirt has a decided flare, while the cape, which is knee length has squared shoulders and a small upstanding collar.

MOST of the coat designs have a very heavy appearance, which is attained by the style of knitting as much as by the type of yarn. There are models which show bright color combinations in tweed effects that are especially suitable for country and other casual use, but there also are some styles which have been adapted to town needs. The coat which is illustrated strikes a happy medium, as it is sufficiently tailored for wear on the street, but when worn with a bright knitted dress becomes an equally attractive country wrap. It is created in the reefer type which continues to be in vogue for general wear. The nubby appearance is due to the stitch and to the combination of boucle and quite heavy wool yarn. The shoulders are noteworthy, as both width and raised armhole have been achieved. Some may like this coat in the three-quarter length, which is considered smarter than the full and more practical length.

Other coat styles include the swagger and boxy types, usually with close-fitting necklines or flat collars which fasten rather high. The plaid theme which has been mentioned as novel for frocks is stressed also for coats, but is more difficult to attain owing to the heavier yarns which are used.

Sweater fashions, always of most interest to college girls, show equally as many innovations for fall as do the other hand-knitted clothes.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.

MORE than ever before since just after the war, according to spies, London is the world capital for folk who get about. Paris, as a result of uncertainty and the new Government, is like Asbury Park on a rainy Sunday, and the Ritz Bar, the Crillon and the George V, so long the happy hunting grounds of names who make news, are peopled largely by the ghosts of the opulent '20s. But London, like Marion Davies in the "New Faces" sketch, never looked lovelier, and Stanley Sackett, the Chesterfield of Fifty-eighth street, writes that not even Armistice night could hold a hand-dipped candle to the run-of-the-mine evening now in the right places.

Dwight Fiske is ordering his winter wardrobe with his dinner jackets numbered one through seven for every night in the week, for all the world like old-time straight razors. Lily White has built him some sports shoes of marron strips of leather woven in a diagonal pattern and topped (hold on to your toupees, ma frens) with chromium buckles. He and Mr. Sacket bought a witty and wicked wedding present for the Hon. Davy Tennant, but wouldn't say what it was.

The King of Spain pops in and out of Claridge's every three minutes, for all the world like a Western Union messenger boy, and the Metropole, at Brighton, once run by Manhattan's own Max Herring, is still the best restaurant in the South of England.

The San Marco is the night club of the moment and the Savoy bar fairly crawls with such boulevard chivalry as Tom Wanamaker, Sonny Griswold, Wright Ludington, Ted Husing and his wife, Margo Flick Hoffman, Prince Rospigliosi and Delman, the costliest of shoe designers in Gotham. The review of the season is "Spread It Around," and you can tell just how many guests (never fewer than 40) Laura Corrigan had for dinner the night before by the number of behindhand smiles she gets as she passes through her hotel lobby.

Never, according to our advices, has there been such gilded uproar, such ringing of old platinum doorbells, such elegant place-going and glad tumult. The revival boom began in England a year before the first ripples of it invaded these stern and bankrupt shores, so maybe we get some good times soon. Howsat sound, sailor?

NOW and then some legal outcropping harks back to the wistful days of the great foolishness, with its attendant intricate provisions to render heinous any association with beverage alcohol, and there are times when we could wish the waiter would appear with the setups each tagged, "The use of this mineral water to make highballs is a Federal offense and the management begs its patrons to refrain from violation of the law." Over in Jersey there are various provisions for the service of certain liquors only "with meals" and a pretty time Frederick Burnett, the State Liquor Commissioner, is having defining a "meal."

Old-timers will recall when spirits could be served in a Sabbath Boston only to the accompaniment of "a meal" and the licensed victuallers of the town (they are still listed as that in the municipal records) were both ingenious and witty in their construction of the letter. Hard-boiled eggs, of course, lasted from year to year, became vintage, in fact, and patrons of the Vendome could say with pride: "That's the very egg I used for Sunday lunch back in '81; see where I marked it with the date and my initials!"

The famous rolls at Parker's in School street, showed an inclination to disintegrate after six or eight months' service, no matter how hard they were baked, but there were some ham steaks made of a composition material which were practically indestructible.

The ultimate triumph of a mechanical civilization, however, appeared in Quebec Province a few years since, when a beer-with-food-only-on-Sunday regulation was passed. It was the Goodyear india rubber chicken sandwich. They had about them a positive quality of immortality. Please, Mr. Mulrooney, can't we have such an imbecile rule in New York? Just for fun? Huh?

NEWS has just reached this department of the details of one of the flossiest weddings of the earlier summer. It took place up at Scarborough, and because of the exalted status of the principals and the fabulous proportions of the collection of presents they received the precincts of the bride's house fairly swarmed with the gendarmerie.

There were detectives in morning coats behind the shrubs on the lawn; liveried house footmen showed glimpses of badges on their striped waistcoats; every other guest seemed to bulge at the hip pocket; uniformed officers thronged the driveway and there was a bodyguard for each usher and every bridesmaid. The service itself had

The House You Live In

by Josephine Walter

RECENTLY I received a letter setting forth many of the problems to be met within the average small apartment and requesting solutions for some of the vexing questions that naturally arise. Realizing that apartment-hunting time is almost upon us, I felt it might be helpful to devote this entire column this week to suggestions for handling the situations set forth in this letter and some others as well.

The first question is one which I have heard over and over again from apartment house dwellers — "can anything be done with a small living room to keep it from looking cramped and over done?" Yes indeed, there are a hundred and one little subterfuges for increasing the apparent size of a room and giving it a feeling of spaciousness.

Of course, one of the primary solutions to this problem is to keep the furnishings in scale. This is fairly easy where pieces are to be purchased with the particular room in mind; where old furniture must be utilized it is often possible to cut it down or, with different fabrics, make it seem lighter in scale. A love seat substituted for a large couch and small scale wing chairs and those with open arms used in place of big lounge chairs will give virtually the same amount of seating space and yet not take up quite as much room.

Fortunately, the type of furniture in vogue at the moment is ideally suited to the small apartment. Eighteenth century English styles are being widely featured at the present time in a complete range of prices and, although sturdily constructed and entirely liveable, there is a certain delicacy and refinement of line in this style that particularly fits it for the small room.

—o-o—

● IN ADDITION, many of the modern pieces seem to have been designed with the small apartment especially in mind. Not long ago I mentioned in this column a number of pieces designed on the "Combination Grouping Plan." These pieces, all executed in the same woods and along the same lines, may be put together in various combinations according to the individual requirements of the purchaser. In this way a desk, a chest, and several bookcases may all be placed together on one wall, giving the effect of having been specially built into the space, where formerly each piece would have required a separate wall space.

A GREAT DEAL may be done with color schemes, too, in giving the illusion of space to a small interior. There are two schools of thought on this problem and each has certain things in its favor. The first, and one that is very popular at present, is to use a monotone effect in decorating a room of this type. It is certainly true that in a room where walls and draperies are all of one tone a certain feeling of spaciousness is created and if the upholstered pieces are done in gradations of this background color the blended effect is charming. If this method is to be employed, it is wise to use off-whites, grays, browns and rather neutral tones as the basic color note.

—o-o—

The other school feels that a daring color scheme distracts one's attention from the smallness of the quarters and provides interest for an otherwise undistinguished room. If this method is to be employed, it is wise to select some interesting fabric, preferably a chintz, and build the entire color scheme around the tones to be found in this material. Two, or at the most, three colors will provide enough contrast in even the largest of rooms. And always remember that in matching tones, nearly right will not do; if you look long enough you will always find the perfect piece of material.

—o-o—

● About the subject of color, many people feel that, especially in small apartments, rooms that open into one another must be done with walls, rugs and draperies exactly alike. It is usually true that there should be a spirit of harmony in adjacent rooms but this can frequently be accomplished more effectively by reversing the color schemes in the two rooms.

—o-o—

THERE ARE, in addition, many little tricks whereby a small and uninteresting room may be made more distinguished. The effectiveness and charm to be gained from adding a dado to the room are out of all proportion to the slight cost involved in tacking a simple molding around the wall. Then, too, a little portable mantel-piece, which could readily be constructed by any carpenter or which may now be purchased ready-made, would provide an excellent focal point around which to group furniture.

In one charming little apartment that I saw recently, a useless in-a-door bed had been removed and the resulting space converted into a charming little combination bookcase and writing desk.

—o-o—

Thank you, Mrs. C. A. M. for providing me with the inspiration for this column. In return, if you will send me your address, I shall be very happy to answer some of the specific problems which I was unable to deal with here.

Amateurs Can Add Color to Old Furniture

Paint Brush May Be Used to Advantage in Your Own Home.

IT is a nice idea to try out your artistic talents by painting furniture. No doubt this does seem a prosaic task for the artistically inclined, but the results, if well done, are usually provocative of glowing pride.

Many a charmingly-furnished summer cottage owes its appeal to the wielder of the paint brush. Shops make a specialty of well-made furniture designed for either inside or outside use. There are all sorts of styles just waiting the ministrations of a well-applied paint brush.

If you are a beginner, it would be well, of course, to start operations on simple, inexpensive pieces, or perhaps by repainting an old piece. The paint manufacturers have made things as easy as possible and offer failure-proof rules and directions, together with color charts and written instructions that include not only the painting of new pieces but notes on how to prepare old pieces for repainting. Then, too, many manufacturers maintain trained representatives at large stores to help customers solve their problems.

UNFINISHED PIECES should be sandpapered before painting in order to assure a smooth finish. If a good job is desired, it is best to put two coats of paint over the first coat. If the final coat is an enamel paint, then the primary coat may be flat paint in the same shade. A nice alternative for outdoor or garden type pieces made of knotty pine is to leave the natural surface and finish with a coat of wax or varnish.

It is interesting to work out different finishes and sometimes to combine stained and painted surfaces. We have seen chests with painted handles or knobs and the rest of the piece left in natural color or stained.

Metal furniture as well as wooden pieces can be had for painting. When painting outdoor furniture, either metal or wood, ask for a paint that is specially prepared to combat the elements. In repainting metal furniture see that all rust spots are eliminated before the paint is applied. There are special metal priming paints to be used before the final coat is applied.

More than anything in this fascinating business of painting furniture is the delight of combining various colors and creating different color schemes.

Don't Apologize, If Home Is Neat

WE cannot imagine anything more pathetic or at the same time, more revealing, than the woman who apologizes for her home. She deprecates it because it is old-fashioned, or because it is shabby or because of its limited space, and all the time she is merely giving a picture of herself and a mighty unpleasant picture it is.

A real woman is proud of the home she has made through the years. Maybe the times haven't been too prosperous and there has been little chance to refurnish or refurbish through the years. But the real woman loves each one of her household goods and takes joy and pride in keeping them as neat and clean as possible, even if years and wear have taken their toll. Very often there is a warmth, a glow, a mellowness about old, worn furniture that is sweeter, more symbolic of home, than the color and spick-and-span look of a newly-furnished house.

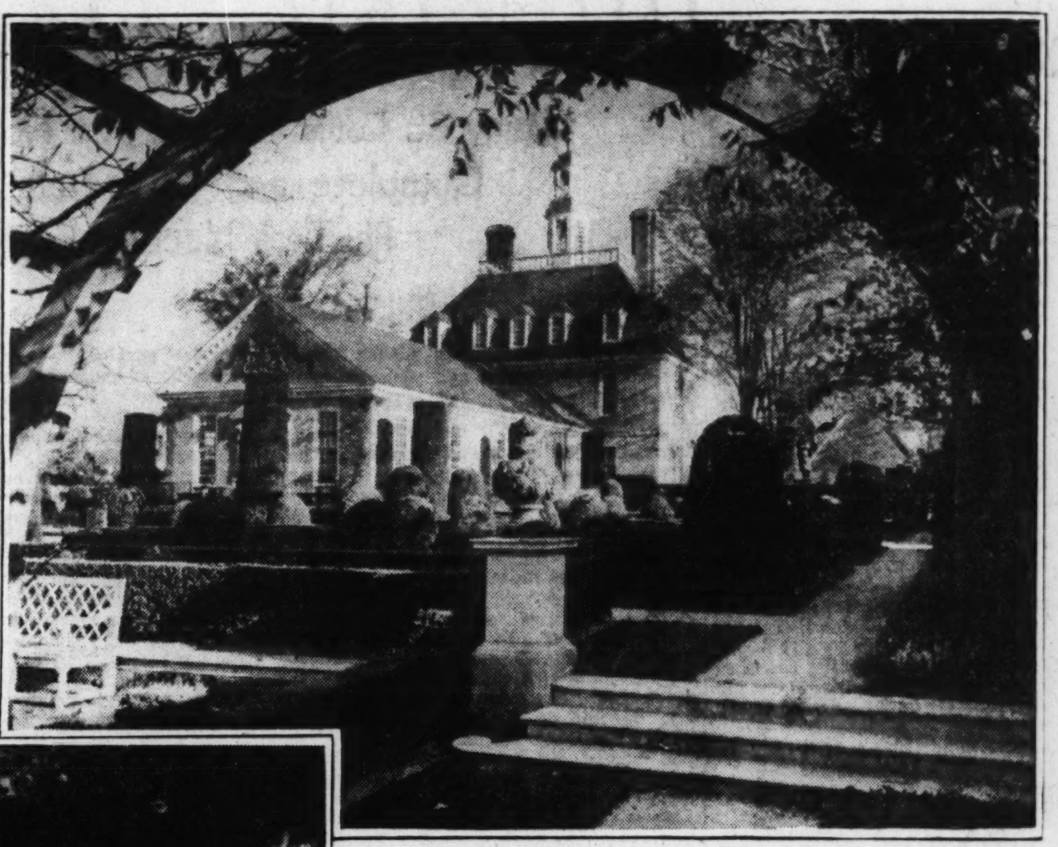
Rooms that show that they have been lived in—that have seen a family grow to maturity—make up a real home and no woman need ever apologize for such a background. It should be her pride and her strength. Of course, we do not mean that furniture, however old and shabby, should show signs of neglect. Upholstery should be as clean as possible. No one should ever tolerate broken springs in sofas or chairs, or rickety legs in tables. These aren't signs of age, they are just evidence of neglect and indifference, the sort of things for which a woman should apologize.

There is no need to apologize for a neatly-kept house even if it is old and shabby. When we come to see friends we come to see them, not their furniture or appointments. A bright smile, words of warm welcome, and pleasant conversation are the things that make a visit a delight. We know of more than one captain of industry who finds happiness with old friends in the simplicity of a plain house where a comfy old leather chair and a roaring fire spell home.

Keep flowers out of drafts, even in warm weather, if you will have them last. Put them in the refrigerator at night if possible, and give them plenty of room to breathe fresh air.

RESTORED to GLORY

How Historic Revolutionary War Town of Williamsburg, Va., Recaptured its Old Charm.



The restored Palace, which originally housed the Colonial Governors of Virginia, with its very beautiful boxwood garden.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Aug 8.

ARE you, in St. Louis, still making last-minute plans to get away from it all for a time? And does the itinerary of your possible journey lead in this general direction? If so (and this with a vacationist's enthusiasm for his own particular choice) don't miss Williamsburg! You could well spend your entire vacation here.

Williamsburg was a sleepy old town, replete with many historic buildings, which had fallen upon evil days until the dreams of the village pastor and the Midas touch of a great financier combined to restore its former glories. It was the Rev. Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, rector of Bruton Parish Church, who, steeped in the beauties and traditions of the town, inspired Mr. John D. Rockefeller Jr., with the possibilities of making it live again.

But why this town particularly? Because, incorporated as a city in 1722, it is truly one of the most historic spots in this country, and has provided a background for many of the stirring scenes connected with America's struggle for freedom and independence. Even the name of its principal thoroughfare—Duke of Gloucester street—indicates that its origin reaches back into the time when America was a British colony, instead of the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

At the end of this street is unquestionably one of the most historic and interesting buildings in the town—the Capitol of the Virginia colony where Washington first became a political figure, and where Patrick Henry addressed his famous "Give me liberty or give me death" speech to the House of Burgesses. And not far away is the Palace, where the Colonial Governors, sent by the Crown, lived in royal splendor.

THE College of William and Mary, named for the English rulers in whose time it was built, is not only the second oldest school of higher learning in the United States, but is also the only building in this country to be designed by the famous English architect, Sir Christopher Wren. In addition, it was here that George Wythe, the teacher of Jefferson, Marshall and Monroe, conducted the first law courses to be given in this country. And in the Apollo room at the Raleigh Tavern was founded Phi Beta Kappa, still the highest scholastic honor bestowed by colleges today.

There are, in addition, a great many other places of historic as well as artistic interest. Burton Parish Church, with its churchyard serving as a burial ground for the forebears of many people who still reside in the town settled by their ancestors, still flaunts the royal arms above the chairs once occupied by the Royal Governors. The Maupin House, now an inn, was once the dwelling of John Custis, relative of Martha Washington; and the Ludwell-Paradise House, the Tilledge House and the Galt House all bear names important to the early history of the town.

And just how and by what methods has the renaissance of this town been accomplished? A vast corps of architects, engineers, interior decorators and landscape architects, as well as historians and members of old families, steeped in the lore of the two, were gathered together and worked many months before even a spadeful of dirt was turned or a single stone touched. Just how thoroughly and authentically the work has been done is indicated by the fact that all of the silver used at the Raleigh Tavern was reproduced from a single teaspoon excavated on the site. Walls were scraped to get down to the original colors, old newspaper advertisements were read for descriptions of fabrics, bricks were fired from native clay and no effort was spared to make every detail as authentic as possible.

Today Williamsburg seems like an enchanted town, which, in Rip Van Winkle style, has been asleep for several generations and, awakened once again, is starting life just where it left off. Along the Duke of Gloucester street, with its efficient, modern road flanked by old, cobblestone gutters and quaint brick walks, have been built a row of buildings, architecturally correct for the atmosphere of the town and housing, including above all things modern chain stores. Tiny shingles proclaim the type of business conducted in each store and the unhurried shopper may rest between purchases on seats built around the larger trees along the street.

All of the old buildings of the town have been restored and reconstructed, and the modern structures have been torn down. Owners of historic houses have not only had their houses restored to their former beauty, but have had them inconspicuously but efficiently equipped with modern heating, lighting, refrigeration and other conveniences. And all at the expense of Mr. Rockefeller; their only duty being to keep up the interiors as they have always done.

NO mention has yet been made of the very beautiful and authentic old gardens which are to be seen on every hand. Miles of old boxwood have been gathered from other parts of Virginia and the Carolinas to be transplanted in correct patterns in the gardens of Williamsburg. And all of the flowers are those that were familiar to the ladies of Colonial times. These gardens in themselves are worth a visit to this town, which is a voice out of the past.

In viewing this city, however, the visitor should not look upon it merely as an archeological study of the past, but as a living, vital spot which might well serve as a pattern for those places beginning to realize the need for town planning. It is truly little short of amazing, when one stops to think, that an entire town has been renovated, remodeled and restored through the efforts of one man. Surely, all of America owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Rockefeller for his vision and generosity in providing all who choose to visit with an opportunity of envisioning life as it was lived in the early days of our country.

Mirrors Are Returning to Popular Favor

Serve Several Purposes, Besides Being Helpful From Decorative Viewpoint.

By Eleanor Ross

MIRRORS are coming into their own again as delightful adjuncts to furnishing a room. Aside from their decorative use, mirrors help in many ways. Strategically placed, they help to increase the size of a room, decrease a corridor or hall that is too long, or reflect light and color where there is none.

Of course, the architectural use of mirrors is no innovation for the modern interior. One has only to recall the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles to be aware of this. That tremendously-long hall with its walls of glass must surely remain one of the most satisfying interiors ever built. Then there are recorded accounts of rooms completely lined with mirrors created for various great ladies of another era. Not only were there mirror-lined rooms, but furniture made of mirrors was no novelty in those days either.

Today we are fortunate for we have simple furniture of smart modern design, made of mirror glass, plain or colored. As for mirrors, we can have designs created by great artists and craftsmen of the past as well as lovely designs made by contemporary designers.

The main thing to remember is where the mirror is going before you buy it. Just buying mirrors without discrimination, because there is a sale or because you like the looks of the article, won't help any when it comes to placing it.

IF YOU ARE looking for a mirror for a bedroom or dressing room, you will be delighted with one that has a delicate pink tone, a real beauty. Like the blue or green or copper mirror, this tone is obtained by adding coloring matter to the glass while it is being made. We saw a whole panel of this pinkish mirror glass used for a bedroom and the effect was charming. At least one mirrored wall is found in ever so many dressing rooms and it looks splendid, especially if the dressing room is small.

Those who crave period designs will find that every type of mirror and frame has been reproduced faithfully. There are classically simple frames of the Biedermeier type, or formal Adams frames. There are some lovely Chinese Chippendale frames and Queen Anne lacquered frames with hooded tops. For the formal drawing room there are girandole mirrors and for the modern room there are some particularly lovely designs by that master craftsman in glass, Laliqu.

Month of Bugs

August is the big bug month, with every insect on the place eating like mad before the cold weather starts. There are three types of attack on plants. First, chewing insects which actually take bites out of leaves and stems. Treat them to a dusting or spraying of arsenate of lead or paris green. Second, attack from sucking insects, which suck the plant juices but leave the fiber. Contact sprays of nicotine, missible oils will close their pores and prevent the small bugs from breathing. Third, mildew and black spot on plants is a fungus growth, and can best be treated with a dust or spray of bordeaux mixture or flowers of sulphur.

Clear Garden Pools

● THE GREEN scum in garden pools in summer comes to plague us in spite of scientraffic findings against it. There are a few rules which do help, however, to bring back the pristine clarity of the pool. Put sand on the surface of the soil in which lilies and other aquatics are planted in the water; sprinkle it in slowly so that the sand will carry loose particles to the bottom with it. Keep the ratio of one scavenger or fish for each two cubic feet of water. Another remedy is to place two teaspoons of permanganate of potash or one teaspoon of copper sulphate, whichever you have, in a small cloth bag and tie to the end of a stick. Drag this sack through the water until the chemicals become discolored. Keep it away from the water plants, but don't worry about the fish, it will not harm them.

Garden Equipment

Does your garden equipment include a file or sharpening stone? They are very useful to have for putting a knife edge on spades, hoes, shears, lawn trimmers and other tools. It is particularly important for feminine hands to use sharp tools; weeding and cultivating will go much faster and will be done more thoroughly with razor edged hoes and shovels. After the day's work is done, scrape all dirt off and preserve the metal surface with a little crankcase oil.

A blue garden might be contrasted with a few yellow beds of gold alyssum, yellow iris, cloth of gold nemisia, yellow snapdragons, and yellow and bronze viola cornuta.

Sugar Syrup Is Good Blend In Cool Drinks

Prepared by Boiling Cup of Sugar to Half Cup of Water.

By Alice Lynn Barry.

WE ARE right in the midst of the good old summer time, which means that we are right in the midst of preparing oceans of long, cool drinks for family and guests. The wise hostess always has a batch of sugar syrup on hand, for this is the best way of adding sweetness to a drink, since it blends at once.

Sugar syrup is easily prepared by boiling one cup of sugar to half cup of water for five minutes. Make plenty and keep it on hand in a covered jar in the refrigerator. Fruit juices left over from canned fruits can be saved and used in the same way.

Of all the hot-weather beverages, iced coffee is perhaps first favorite. (Do I hear loud snorts of dissent from the confirmed iced-tea drinkers?) Iced coffee topped with whipped cream is hard to beat, though, but it must be made properly. Freshly made, hot coffee poured into a long glass filled with ice, then topped with whipped cream or with one large scoop of vanilla or coffee ice cream added to each drink and then whipped by stirring—that's the ticket. The ice cream notion is a new idea, and a grand one. Try it, come the next scorcher and see!

ORANGE JULEP is a perfectly grand drink, cool, refreshing and nourishing. Mix one quart orange juice, one cup sugar, juice of six limes and one-half cup minced mint. Place on ice for one hour. Half fill glasses with ice, add prepared juice and charged water, and garnish with mint sprigs.

Lime punch is a most refreshing drink and is easily made. Dissolve one package lime-flavored gelatin in one cup boiling water and add juice of three lemons and two cups iced water. Pour over ice in glasses.

Cold drinks often furnish an excellent way of serving nourishing food to an invalid or convalescent. So here we have a potion guaranteed to be a real builder-upper, and delicious to boot. Chill one pint of good, fresh cream and one-half cup fresh milk. Mix the milk, one-half cup sweet cider, one-half teaspoon vanilla and one-half cup sugar in a mixing bowl. Beat the cream lightly then add, then beat the mixture again. Sprinkle a little nutmeg on top and serve.

For a super orange juice drink, chill one-quarter cup cold water, juice of an orange, one tablespoon sugar, lemon juice and an egg white. Place in shaker and shake until evenly blended. Serve immediately. A few grains of salt may be added if desired.

New Combination

There is a new combination of peat moss and chicken manure on the market these days which seems to be the most efficient fertilizer found so far. It has all the good points of both products and cancels out the bad. The most important factor is that it has a high nitrogen content in a form that the earth can hold easily in all weather before absorbing.

From the Ground Up

by Amy Lu Schmitz

SIR HUMPHREY REPTON, the eighteenth century philosopher-gardener, was always reluctant to make great changes in a landscape grade. "The highest praise," he held, "for this expensive and arduous task is that the ground looks when finished as if art had never interfered." The changes he did make, however, were so accurately conceived that a minimum of labor resulted in the greatest possible effects. Our irregular St. Louis terrain presents a problem in grading with each newly built house—a problem that requires more care and thought than is usually bestowed on it by hurried builders or casual landscapers. It is, of course, old familiar ground for the architectural brotherhood.

Well graded surfaces can, among other things, make a piece of ground look larger than it actually is, or a house seem to stand higher or lower than it really does; it can provide dry basements against all odds; or preserve fine old trees which are so essential to the finished landscaping of a house. And the new grade lines, when completed, present problems in landscaping far more interesting than those found on a perfectly level, flat piece of ground.

DIFFERENT levels in a garden can be the basis for various interesting treatments, and even a rather small mound of earth can be banked and planted to give height to a boundary line.

The first general principle of grading that will be important to you is the small plateau of ground on which the new house will rest—the pedestal for your edifice. From this slightly elevated position the house will have the dignity and importance due it. Foundation planting will accentuate this dominance, but the grading must certainly form the base.

This immediately brings up problems of houses lower than the street level. The site for such a house should be selected as far back on the lot as the building line permits. The ground around the house should have a downward slope to a point one-third the total distance to the street, and from there should have a long upward curve to the street. This will seem to lift the house up and apparently put it on the same level as the street.

A HOUSE TOO far above the street level will seem more securely set on its base if the lawn is allowed to come right up to the foundation walls in places, and not have the planting drawn up too snugly all around it. The high homes will also have the problem of terraces to solve—terraces that will probably be covered with grass. The angle of slope should not, if possible, be less than one foot down for each three feet out. This will form a bank that will easily hold and grow grass that can be cut without too much acrobatic skill.

The convex curve of the downward slope should be as soft as the angle permits, and, with no break in the line, should form a slight concave line at the bottom. This treatment will result in the merging of steep grades into gentle slopes that will cut the height of the property.

MANY HOMES are on level land that can well make use of a feeling of distance from the street if it is to be had. A slight concave surface or gradual depression in the lawn one-third to one-fourth of the total distance will give an appearance of greater distance than either a perfectly level lawn or one with a convex swell to the surface. These concave surfaces may need some drain tiling to prevent water standing, but if the lawn is well made and the sub-soil porous, these slopes should be too gentle to cause trouble.

There is a practical advantage to the slope of the soil (both top and sub-soil) away from a house that should not be overlooked. Wet weather finds many new houses with damp or even wet basements, which could be avoided with the proper pitch of soil away from the foundation walls. If only the surface soil, however, slopes properly and the sub-soil pitches toward the house, water will percolate toward the foundation walls as if drain tile were laid for the purpose. Care should be taken that both the hard packed clay sub-soil and the top soil slope away from the walls at an angle of at least two inches down for each foot out.

House Exposure

Have you wondered about the best exposure for a house in relation to the sun? Well, a southeast facade seems to bear up the best in all weather. There is no long, cold blank north wall with its attendant difficulty for growing plants, nor is there a direct glare from either east or west, and it affords the greatest amount of southern exposure possible.

Food and Drink

Mixed Menus For Frequent Dinner Guests

These Rules Will Help in Preparing Varied Meals in Warm Weather.

IF YOU have guests whom you invite frequently, the following recipes will help a lot in preparing different dinners during the summer:

Puffed Crackers

Split common crackers in half and soak in ice water five minutes. Drain thoroughly, place on baking pan and dot one-half tablespoon butter over each cracked half. Bake in a very hot oven of 500 degrees F. for 15 minutes or until puffed and brown.

Tongue in Grapejuice

Three and one-half to four pounds smoked tongue.

Boiling water.

One and one-half cupful bottled grapejuice.

One and one-half cupful water.

Place the tongue in a covered kettle with boiling water to cover and simmer three and one-half hours or until tender. Remove the kettle from the heat and let the tongue stand in the liquor until cool. Then remove the skin and the fat from the tongue and place the tongue in a covered baking dish. Add the grapejuice and water; cover and cook in a moderate oven of 350 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Turn the tongue once at the end of 25 minutes. Serves six. Serve without the sauce, but the sauce may be kept for reheating the tongue. Fresh tongue may be prepared in the same way.

Bean Puree

Two 10½ ounce cans condensed bean soup.

Three-quarter cupful bottled milk or three-eighths cupful evaporated milk and three-eighths cupful water.

Combine the soup and enough of the milk to make of the consistency of creamy mashed potatoes. Heat in a double boiler. Or place in one and one-half quart casserole and bake in a hot oven of 400 degrees F. for 25 minutes. Serve as a vegetable in sauce dishes. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.

Baked Apple Halves With Black Currant Jam

Core and cut washed, firm apples in halves. Bake in the usual way. Just before serving place a spoonful of black currant jam in the center of each half.

Braised Endive

Six heads endive.

One cup canned consomme.

Two tablespoons melted butter or margarine.

Wash the endive, and remove the outer leaves. Cut each head in half lengthwise, and arrange in a shallow, covered baking dish. Pour the stock over them, cover and bake in a moderate oven of 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Uncover, add the butter and bake uncovered 30 minutes longer. Remove the endive from the stock and serve. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe.

Peach Lime Sponge

One package lime flavored gelatin dessert.

Two cups warm or boiling water.

Three tablespoons lemon juice.

Two cups diced fresh or canned peaches.

Granulated sugar.

Dissolve the gelatin dessert in the warm or boiling water, depending upon the manufacturer's directions. Add the lemon juice and cool until beginning to set, then beat with a hand beater or an electric beater at high speed until frothy. Fold in the peaches which, if fresh, have been sprinkled with sugar to taste, and turn into a one-quart ring or fancy mold. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe, measuring out one-half of the package of gelatin dessert.

Travel Tweeds

TRAVEL TWEEDS are as colorful as ever with many long, wide, dashing capes to add variety to the picture. We liked such a cape done in bluish-gray tweed with a shadow plaid in purple. This has a big collar of natural lynx, made with a deep point in back. A suit of green and brown club-check tweed has a baum-marten stole trimming that is attached in back so that the skins in front can be manipulated in various ways or detached and worn with other things.

WHAT SHALL IT BE?

Something Practical and Economical for Your Next Bridge Luncheon or Sunday Night Supper—That Means Salads.

By MARIE L. CASTEEN

NO, I'm not going to give you rules for making salads or tell you how to keep your salad greens crisp. I'm sure your problem is not "how to do it?" but "what shall it be?" What to serve that is practical and economical but not commonplace? Something for your bridge luncheon next Thursday or for Sunday night supper?

The recipes that follow were selected to answer the question, "What shall it be?" They are for the woman who makes advance planning a part of her summer regime and who is the envy of her friends because she serves such delightful meals with seemingly so little effort.

The first recipe is for a fruit salad that is just a little bit different from other fruit salads. Fresh mint and gingerale are usually associated with the ice tinkling in tall frosted glasses, a refreshing beverage served in the cool shade of garden or veranda. But they will convey the same sense of coolness and refreshment when used in combination with fruits for a salad.

A delightful luncheon menu can be built around this salad. For the first course serve either a hot or cold clear soup (many people prefer hot soup on the warmest summer day). With the salad as main course, serve piping hot biscuits or cornbread, pass a nice assortment of cheese attractively arranged on your favorite cheese tray, and last but not least, your beverage, hot or cold.

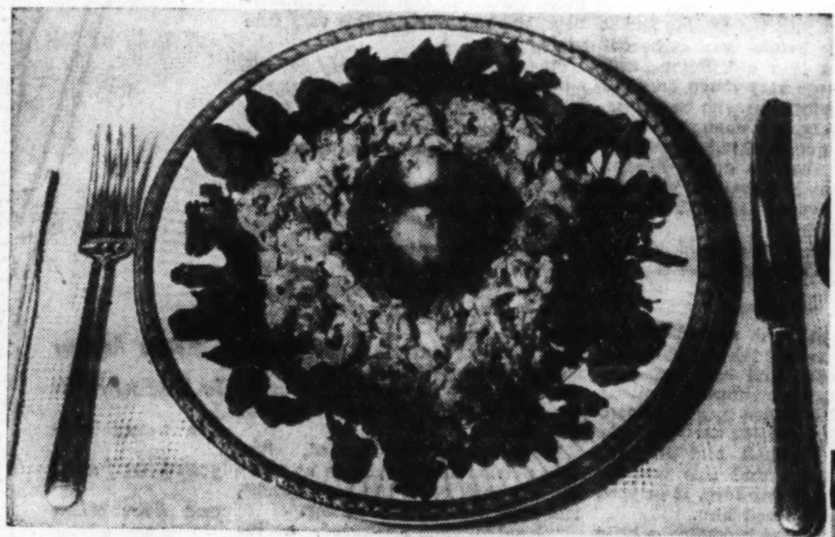
Minted Fruit-Marshmallow Salad

One cup fresh pineapple, diced
One cup bananas, sliced
One cup oranges or peaches, cut up
One cup cantaloupe, diced
One cup marshmallows, quartered
Two tablespoons powdered sugar
Two cups gingerale
Three-fourths cup lemon juice
One-half bunch mint, minced
Lettuce
Cantaloupe balls
Mint sprigs.

Lightly combine pineapple, bananas, oranges or peaches, cantaloupe and marshmallows with sugar. Mix gingerale and lemon juice and pour over fruits. Chill about two hours in refrigerator. To serve, drain off gingerale, lightly mix mint into fruits and serve on lettuce, garnished with cantaloupe balls and sprigs of mint. This recipe yields eight portions.

The remaining gingerale mixture will be delicious to pour over fruit cocktail or it can be added to a fruit punch.

What to do with those odds and ends of vegetables? This is a Monday-morning riddle for many a housewife. Here's a salad recipe that will take care of a few. It is not necessary to use all the vegetables mentioned in the recipe; in fact, lima beans, chicory and relish make a delicious combination. If chicory is not available, substitute tender, crisp spinach leaves. Could you ask for a more adaptable recipe? Canned vegetables are equally good in this salad.



Orange cheese mold can be served as an accompaniment or as an unusually good dinner salad.

Macaroni and crabflake make a main-course salad dish.

Vegetable-Chicory-Relish Salad

One cup peas, cooked
One cup carrots, cooked and diced
One cup string beans, cut julienne and cooked
One cup cauliflower flowerets, cooked
One cup lima beans, cooked
Salt
Dash of pepper
One-half cup pickle relish
One-fourth cup olive oil
One-half cup vinegar
One-half teaspoon onion juice
Two cups crisp chicory, broken into one and one-half inch pieces
Lettuce.

Season peas, carrots, string beans, cauliflower and lima beans with salt and pepper to taste and pickle relish. Mix lightly and chill. Combine olive oil, vinegar and onion juice and pour over vegetables. Allow to chill until serving time. Then add chicory. Serve on lettuce. This recipe yields six to eight portions.

The macaroni in the next main-course salad has a two-point advantage. It makes the salad less expensive to prepare and adds a new touch when combined with crabmeat.

Macaroni and Crabflake Salad

One and one-half cups crabmeat, shredded
One and one-half cups elbow macaroni, cooked and seasoned
One cup celery, diced
Two tablespoons green pepper, finely chopped
One tablespoon pimiento, minced
Two teaspoons sweet pickle, minced
One-half teaspoon salt
Few drops tabasco sauce
One-fourth cup mayonnaise
Lettuce.

Combine ingredients lightly in order given. Serve chilled in crisp lettuce cups or pack into mold of desired shape and unmold on lettuce. This recipe yields four portions.

In the next recipe, the salad dressing plays the star role in the salad. Don't be stingy when you serve it. A generous spoonful to each salad is required.

Ripe Olive and Fruit Salad

One-half cup mayonnaise
One-half cup whipping cream
Few drops lemon juice
One-eighth teaspoon salt
Dash of tabasco sauce
One-half cup ripe olives, thinly sliced
One cup bananas, sliced
Two cups peaches, sliced
One cup sweet cherries, halved and pitted
One tablespoon granulated sugar
Lettuce.

Blend mayonnaise with cream which has been whipped until it begins to thicken and hold its shape. Add lemon juice, salt and tabasco sauce, then drained olives. Combine fruits with sugar and place on bed of lettuce. Serve dressing on top of salad. This recipe yields four to six portions.

Hot frankfurter rings make a tasty addition to the age-old corn relish salad. This would make a delicious picnic salad. Prepare the corn salad at home and saute the frankfurter rings over an open fire.

Stuffed Tomato Salad

Four medium-sized tomatoes
Two cups yellow corn, cooked
One cup celery, diced
One-fourth cup green pepper, minced
Two tablespoons pimiento, minced
One teaspoon salt
Two tablespoons olive oil
One-fourth cup vinegar
One-half teaspoon onion juice
Two frankfurters
One tablespoon butter
Lettuce.

Skin tomatoes and place in refrigerator to chill. Combine corn, celery, green pepper and pimiento with salt. Let stand for several hours in combined olive oil, vinegar and onion juice. Boil frankfurters, skin and cut in thin slices.

Just before serving salad, saute frankfurter slices in butter. Cut tomatoes into four sections, leaving them attached at the bottom. Spread sections apart. Place each tomato on bed of lettuce, fill centers with corn salad and finish each with a generous spoonful of hot frankfurter rings. This recipe yields four portions.

The remaining salad recipes can be used on salad plate combinations. Several can be served on the relish tray and one or two will make attractive dinner salads. The first recipe is a gelatin salad and can be used in any of the three ways mentioned.

Tarragon Cheese Mold

Two tablespoons gelatin
One-half cup cold water
One-fourth cup taragon vinegar
Two cups cottage cheese
Two teaspoons salt
One tablespoon granulated sugar
Few grains cayenne
One cup pineapple, diced
One cup cucumber, diced
One-fourth cup green pepper, finely chopped.

Soften gelatin in cold water, heat over hot water to dissolve and add tarragon vinegar. Beat cottage cheese until smooth. Blend in seasonings and gelatin. Place in refrigerator until it begins to thicken. Drain off juice from pineapple, cucumber and green pepper before adding to mixture. Chill either in one quart mold or individual molds. This recipe yields eight to 10 portions.

This salad makes a nice accompaniment to chicken salad or an attractive dinner salad.

Orange Cheese Mold Salad

Two tablespoons gelatin
One-half cup cold water
One-half cup sweet pickle vinegar
One-half cup granulated sugar
One-fourth teaspoon salt
One cup orange juice
One-half cup lemon juice
One (3-ounce) package cream cheese
Cream.

Soften gelatin in cold water. Heat to boiling the sweet pickle juice, sugar, salt and gelatin, stirring until gelatin is dissolved. Remove from heat and cool to lukewarm. Add fruit juices. Strain and place in refrigerator. Mold 12 cheese balls from cream cheese and paprika combined with enough cream to moisten. When orange gelatin has started to thicken, place two cheese balls in bottom of each individual mold and pour gelatin over them. Chill. This recipe yields six portions.

A salad similar to this one was served to me in a well-known tea room in a Mid-Western city. New potatoes in cream were passed and several olives were on the salad plate.

Chicken Aspic Salad

One (1½ ounces) package prepared aspic gelatin
One cup boiling water
One-half cup chicken, cooked and diced
One cup boiling tomato juice
One-half teaspoon granulated sugar
Few grains cayenne
Lettuce or watercress.

Dissolve one-half package of the aspic in the boiling water. Chill until it begins to thicken, then add chicken. Dissolve remaining aspic in boiling tomato juice, add sugar and cayenne and chill until it begins to thicken. Fill individual molds one-half full with tomato aspic and chill until fairly stiff. Fill molds with the chicken aspic. Chill thoroughly. Serve on lettuce or watercress. This recipe yields four portions.

Grandmother's Slaw

One cup milk
One and one-half teaspoons flour
One-half teaspoon salt
One-half tablespoon dry mustard
Two tablespoons granulated sugar
One-fourth cup vinegar
One tablespoon butter
One egg
One medium-sized head cabbage, shredded.

Scald milk. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add to milk. Cook thoroughly about 10 minutes in top of double boiler. Stir frequently. Add vinegar and butter. Beat egg and add to mixture. Pour over shredded cabbage and place in refrigerator to chill. This recipe yields one cup of dressing and about six portions of salad.

Molded Chopped Egg

Four hard-cooked eggs, chopped
Salt
One-fourth teaspoon pepper
One-fourth cup butter, melted

Blend chopped eggs with seasoning to taste and butter. Grease individual molds heavily, then fill with egg mixture and press firmly into mold. Cover with wax paper and chill. This recipe yields four small molds. This makes a pleasing garnish for many salads.

Let these salads make your summer more pleasant for you. Nothing tastes better to a hot and tired family that has lost interest in food. They will transform tiresome necessity of eating into a delightful indulgence.

Sift together the flour, soda and salt, and add to the sugar mixture alternately with milk and vanilla. Turn into two greased 8-inch layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees F. for 25-30 minutes. Fill the cooled layers with date-nut filling, made as follows: Cut up the dates, add the water, and simmer until very soft, adding more water if needed and stirring occasionally. Add one-fourth cup sugar and bring to a boil. Cool. Add nutmeats. Frost top of cake with caramel frosting.

Wipe off your greasy pots and pans, and soiled dishes, with a heavy paper napkin, before placing in the dishpan. You won't use as much dish water, and your pan and sink will be cleaner.

STAMPS · Styles for Men · DOGS

OFF the LEASH

by H. F. Owen

THIS week we will teach our dog another trick that requires little exertion or patience, that of taking food from one hand and refusing to accept it from the other.

You may sit down or stand up, as it will take only a few minutes to teach him this trick, but you should, of course, practice each day and never feed him from the hand you have taught him to avoid.

We will, for example, have him refuse food from our right hand, but instantly allow him to eat the same piece of food when we place it in our left hand. Have several pieces of food that he relishes handy so that you may replace the pieces that he eats. Call your dog to you and pick up a piece of the food in each hand. Offer him the piece you have in your left hand in a natural way. Of course, he will eat it.

Now offer him the one in your right hand, but holding the meat securely, hit him quickly but lightly on the nose with your right hand, saying, "No, don't touch it." As soon as he backs away or seems to understand that he is not to take it quickly place the food in your left hand and offer it to him, saying, "All right," and allow him to eat it.

Repeat this two or three times, always offering the food from your left hand first and allowing him to eat it. Show him that he must not touch the food when you offer it to him from your right hand. Dogs are very observing and in a very short time he will back away, refusing to even look at the food offered him unless it is in the left hand.

After you are sure that he has learned this hold both hands out with food in each hand. He will invariably take the food that is in the left hand. If he offers to take the other food correct him instantly.

● ALTHOUGH THE English setter has been used and known as a trained bird dog in England for more than 400 years, it was not until about 1884 that his popularity began in this country. Some of the first imported into this country were bred by a Mr. Llewellin and were later crossed with new blood from England, which resulted in producing dogs that were capable of winning field trials in both the United States and Canada. This strain of English setter is called Llewellin.

The English setter is considered the most popular of the setters because of his undisputed usefulness and his intelligence which, together with his wonderful disposition, make him an ideal field dog as well as a companion in the home. He requires a great deal of exercise, being an outdoor dog. He is more at home in the country than in the city.

His head should be long, his skull being fairly wide, and his muzzle should be of a width to harmonize with the skull and be straight from his eye to his nose, and should appear square. His ears are set well back on his head, carried close, fairly long, and the hair should be silky. His chest should be deep and not too wide and his neck long and arched. The back should slope downward from the shoulders and be of medium length, with some arch but not roached or sway-backed.

He should be fairly heavy boned and have hard, solid muscles, and his toes should be well covered with hair. His tail should be carried horizontal, not too long, and have straight, silky feathering. He should be graceful in his movements at all times and be alert and energetic. In color it is preferable that his body be flecked all over instead of having heavy patches of color. In height the male should stand about 23 to 25 inches at the shoulder and weigh from 55 to 75 pounds, while the female should stand from 22 to 24 inches and weigh from 60 to 65 pounds.

● THROUGH NO fault of ancestry nor lack of brains the Gordon setter is the least known of the bird-dog family of America. Originating in Scotland, he was popular with the wealthy and royal sportsmen of that country. In more recent years there have been many specimens imported from Norway, Sweden and Denmark.

Differing in color from other setters, his coat is shiny black, with tan markings over the eyes, on the sides of the face, the throat, and on legs. He is a much heavier and more stockily built dog than the Irish or the English, having a broad head with a large round skull and a large broad nose with wide nostrils. His eyes are dark and sparkling and his ears large, with long silky hair. The lower part of his body and his legs should also be abundantly covered with hair.

The Gordon setter is a very affectionate dog and loves the companionship of his master. He needs this companionship and although there have been Gordon setters doing well in field trials against other setters and pointers, the Gordon is not a kennel dog. His ancestry cannot be questioned and if properly trained and given the personal attention of his master, there seems to be no reason why he should not some day come into his own and occupy the corner in the bird-dog world that his intelligence and quality deserve.

CITIFIED -o- A Short Story by JACK LAIT

HE lay there, on the hillside. It was midsummer and his dream was beside him.

Peter (always a wholesome name) was a farmer's son. But he was also a junior at one of the big-time universities and was no stranger in the Big Burg. He, like Ellyn, was on his vacation, but he was home.

His father, a canny man who had long foreseen the precarious future of a subsistence on the sales of milk and hay, had turned his ancestral acres into a rural playground and rest retreat for the rich. His silo he had converted into a novelty tier of circular suites; what had once been the oat field was now a golf course; the old barn was a theater wired for sound; what had been for generations the "parlor" in the main building was now a polished dance floor; the old cellar was now a storage for rare wines and cordials.

Peter's father was decidedly "in the chips." Miami and Havana knew him. Peter was his only child.

Ellyn, I must admit, for the complete want of a keener description which would be recognizable to our American audience, was a "typical society girl."

A long, swift social season followed by the low vitality period of spring, had turned her eyes toward the lure of relaxation. And on her second day she had met Peter, who dined with the guests and was treated like a visitor rather than a host.

Peter avidly linked up with Ellyn in the daily and evening pastimes. He was an expert at them all, and so was she. Ellyn liked the young fellow and found him far less boresome than the more sophisticated men who were loafing from strenuous desk jobs or wearing out well-earned hangovers. That he was in love with her, however, never suggested itself until he had awkwardly spoken his piece.

They were riding together down wooded paths, side by side, when he said:

—o-o—

"YOU know, some of the chaps at school no older than I am, are married. Ever so many others are engaged. I never thought well of the idea of a man going in for such delightful entanglements when he still has ahead of him a flock of calculus, Greek, relativity and the rest of what it takes to sign capital letters behind his name."

"I quite agree with you," chuckled Ellyn.

"But I was talking in the past tense. In the last few days—more specifically, since you came here—I have begun to understand why those other fellows beat the gun . . . it's just as simple as this: they fell in love, and found that more important than all other considerations tugging the other way."

He turned to see whether Ellyn had drawn the full import of his words. She certainly had. She was looking into his eyes and her expression was one of considerable surprise, punctuated with a question mark. She said nothing. So he gulped and started again:

"It cannot be new to you that you inspire such thoughts in men . . . as for me, this is my first experience, and I think it would be very sporting of you if you sort of helped me along."

Ellyn shook her head and shoulders as though to get set.

"I will admit," she jockeyed, "if this is a proposal, it is not my first. But it is my first on horseback. I have never promised to be a sister to anyone in a saddle, so let's sit down somewhere and go into this matter."

They went into the matter and it was an hour before they came out of it. When they did, Peter knew that Ellyn was very much engaged to a fine young man who had class, money, family, an engaging presence and a good-looking figure.

He knew that he didn't have a hobo's chance and that his youthful dream had evaporated with a complete awakening.

There was not much said as they rode back. There wasn't much left to say.

—o-o—

IT WAS the last day of Ellyn's visit. Peter had taken her verdict with finality and had never reopened his unfortunate proposal. But he had crowded in every possible minute to be near her and to be miserable. He had told her the truth in saying that this was his first adventure into love. It gripped him and bewildered him.

To Ellyn, it was becoming a little agonizing. What he never again whispered with his lips, he kept shouting with his eyes. It seemed a shame, because he was really a likeable boy and almost any girl should have been flattered and excited in her place.

They both knew for hours and hours through the days that they were stalling through a lot of silly twaddle about books and theaters and politics when they were both continously aware that only one topic was in Peter's thoughts. And to Ellyn it was rather a relief to feel that she would soon be free of the haunting consciousness that, in all innocence and more than fairness, she was hurting this very fine young man.

"By tomorrow," Peter sighed, "I suppose you'll be all citified again and the memory of the old farm will be laid in mental lavender with other dull, forgotten fragments of the past."

"Not so soon as that, Peter. I do not believe that I could remember anything all my life. But you will not be forgotten overnight."

Peter blinked. It was the first reference since what was to have been the last, to the main event, and he said:

"I absolve you from all obligations of ever thinking of me again. All I ask in return is that you grant me the privilege of thinking about you forever."

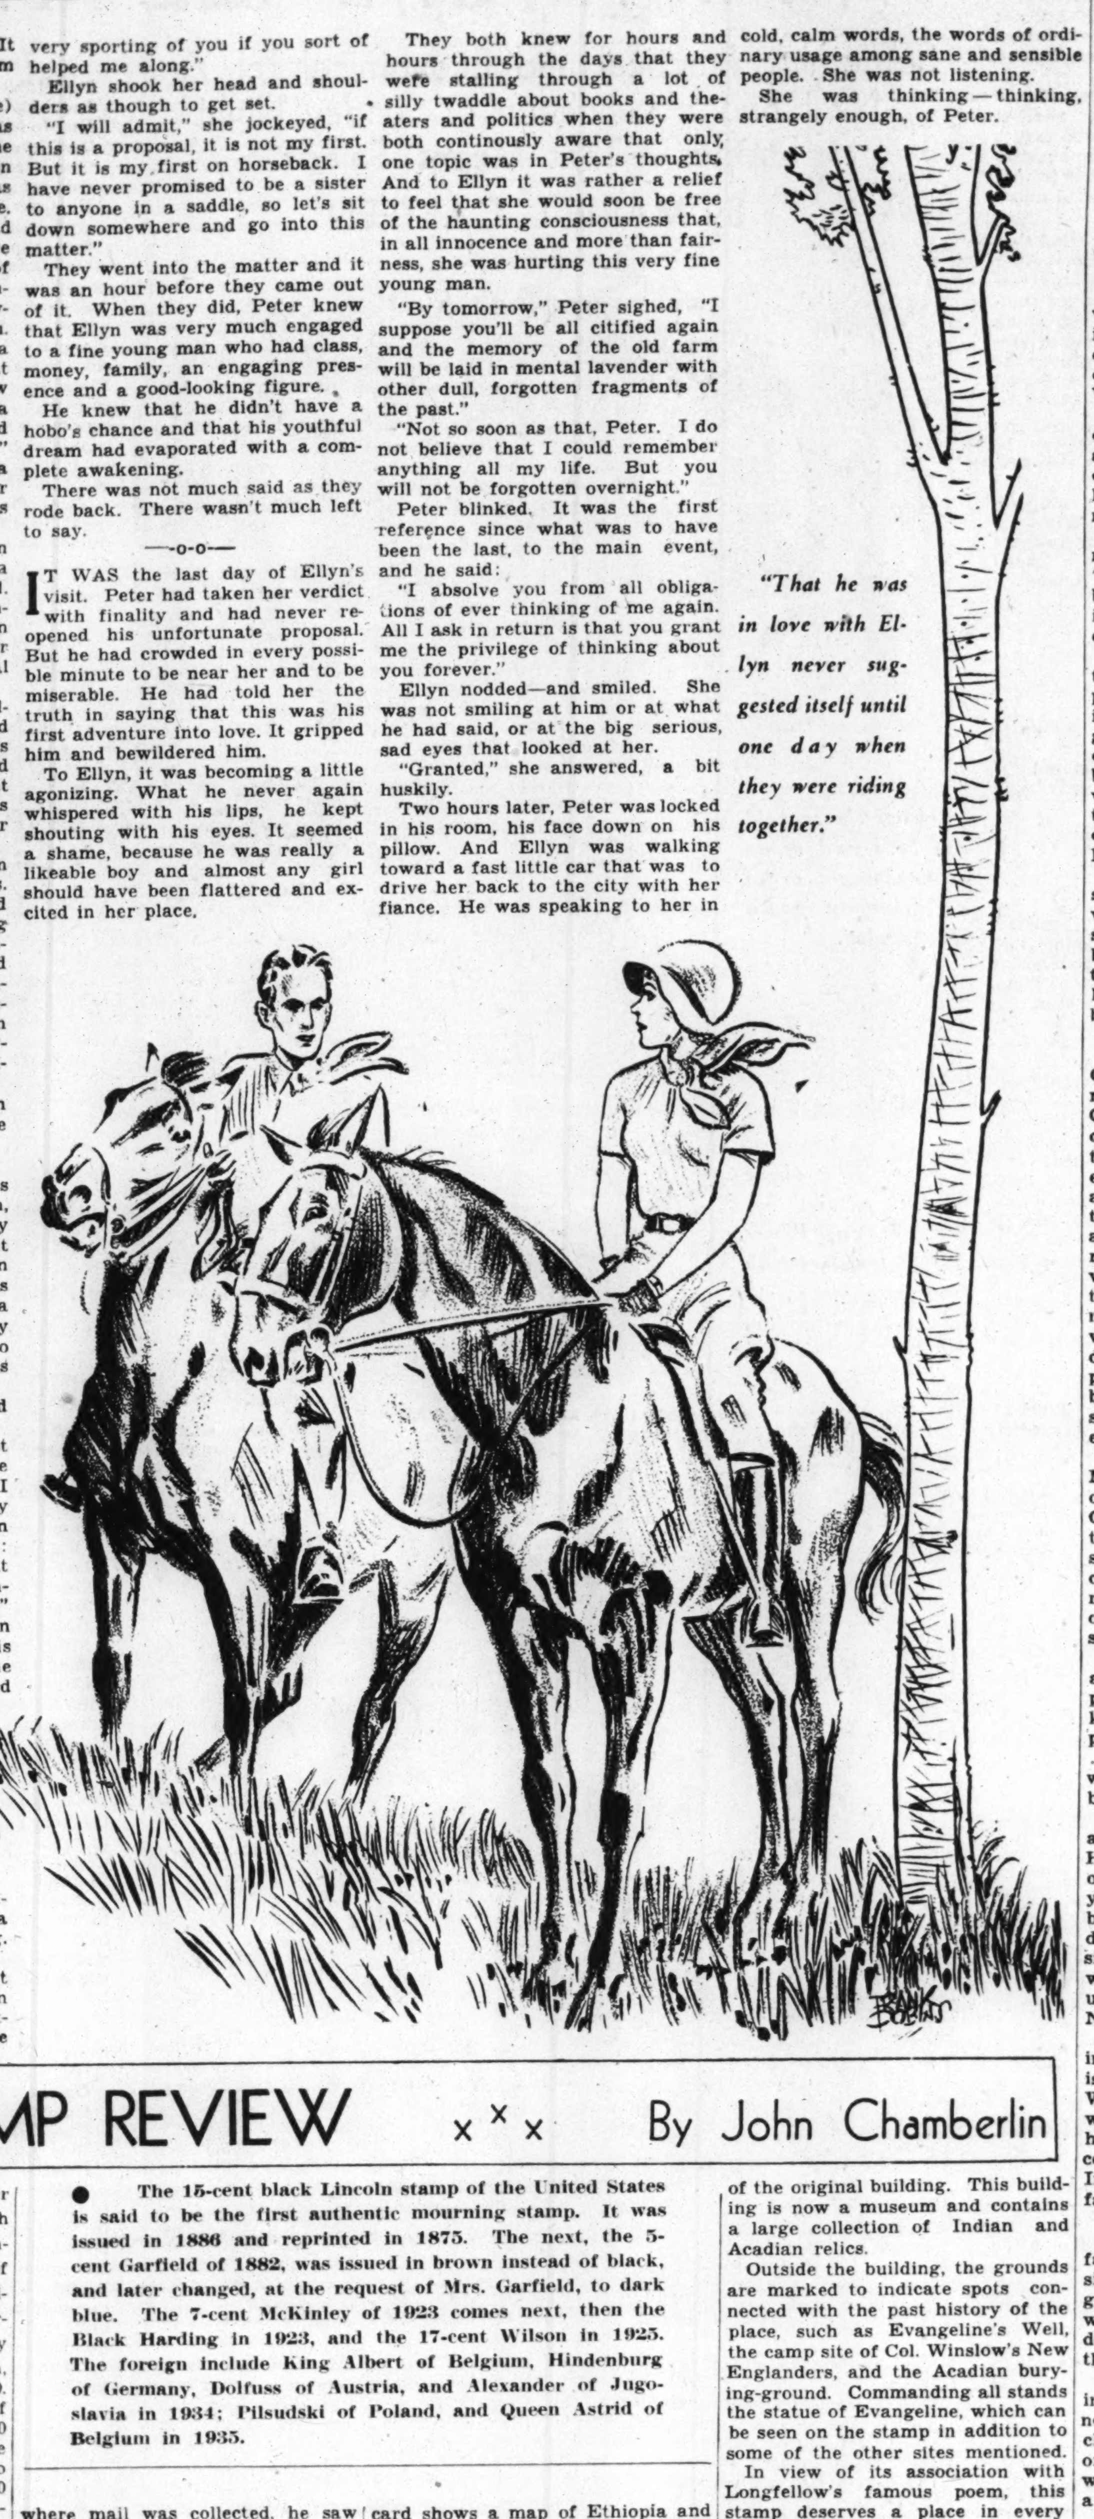
Ellyn nodded—and smiled. She was not smiling at him or at what he had said, or at the big serious, sad eyes that looked at her.

"Granted," she answered, a bit huskily.

Two hours later, Peter was locked in his room, his face down on his pillow. And Ellyn was walking toward a fast little car that was to drive her back to the city with her fiance. He was speaking to her in cold, calm words, the words of ordinary usage among sane and sensible people. She was not listening.

She was thinking—thinking, strangely enough, of Peter.

"That he was in love with Ellyn never suggested itself until one day when they were riding together."



THE STAMP REVIEW ˣˣˣ By John Chamberlin

● The 15-cent black Lincoln stamp of the United States is said to be the first authentic mourning stamp. It was issued in 1886 and reprinted in 1875. The next, the 5-cent Garfield of 1882, was issued in brown instead of black, and later changed, at the request of Mrs. Garfield, to dark blue. The 7-cent McKinley of 1923 comes next, then the Black Harding in 1923, and the 17-cent Wilson in 1925. The foreign include King Albert of Belgium, Hindenburg of Germany, Dolfuss of Austria, and Alexander of Jugoslavia in 1934; Pilsudski of Poland, and Queen Astrid of Belgium in 1935.

MAURITIUS, famous for her "Postoffice" issue, is a British Island colony lying in the Indian Ocean about 550 miles east of the Island of Madagascar. Mauritius was first discovered by the Portuguese in the sixteenth century and was later settled by the Dutch, who finally abandoned it in 1710. The French next took possession of it, calling it Ile de France. In 1810 the British gained control of the island and it was formally ceded to them in 1814. Mauritius is 720 square miles in area, and the population about 350,000, much of it Hindu.

Mauritius was one of the earliest countries to issue postage stamps, and was the first of the British colonies to adopt Rowland Hill's "Penny Post." In 1846 the postal system for the island was organized and rates fixed for inland and overseas mail; it being definitely stated that stamps were to be issued, prepayment of postage on letters leaving the colony being made compulsory.

Stamps were ordered prepared, and the job of engraving was given to a watchmaker of Port Louis, one J. Barnard, who engraved on a calling-card plate, the two required values—the one penny and the two penny. During the making of the plates, frequent consultations were held with the Governor of the colony, concerning the design, during which time the engraver was having difficulty with his eyes.

The story goes that Bernard was finishing the plates at night and could not remember the words to go at the side. He went out for a walk, and passing the building where mail was collected, he saw the new sign, Post Office. He rushed home and inserted the missing words, which should have been Post Paid, and started printing the stamps. What the Governor said to Bernard when he discovered the error is not of record.

The Governor wished to destroy the plates and stamps, but his wife insisted on using them on invitations to the forthcoming Governor's ball, and the early covers of the rare "Post Office" are known on envelopes enclosing invitations to that ball. The stamps stayed in use until new plates were made with the correct Post Paid on the stamp two years later.

Mauritius is one of the most interesting of the British Colonies, but it is a country only for the very wealthy collector to attempt completeness. Part of the lot gathered together by the late Arthur Hind, realized over $160,000 in 1934, a record for a collection of any country.

Italy issued a special postcard for use by soldiers in Ethiopia. The left half of the front of the card shows a map of Ethiopia and adjacent countries. Above this is a spread eagle with the inscription "Africa Orientale." The right front is left blank for the message. On the right back is space for the address, and on the left is space for the soldier's name, rank, and similar data. Across the top are the words "Cartolina Postale per le Forze Armate Africa Orientale" (Postal card for the armed forces of East Africa). This is flanked left by the royal coat of arms, and on the right by "Esente de Tassa per l'Italia E sue Colonie" (Exempted from tax for Italy and her colonies). The cancellation is a double lined military postmark.

THE church on the Evangeline stamp, Canada type A63, is not what is known as the "old church" locally, this description being applied to the Scotch Covenanters' Church built in 1808, but is actually the Acadian Memorial Church built in 1922.

The Memorial Church stands on the same site formerly occupied by St. Charles' Church and is a replica of the original building. This building is now a museum and contains a large collection of Indian and Acadian relics.

Outside the building, the grounds are marked to indicate spots connected with the past history of the place, such as Evangeline's Well, the camp site of Col. Winslow's New Englanders, and the Acadian burying-ground. Commanding all stands the statue of Evangeline, which can be seen on the stamp in addition to some of the other sites mentioned.

In view of its association with Longfellow's famous poem, this stamp deserves a place in every "literature" collection.

STAMPS with thick gum that will not soak off the paper except by long immersion in hot water may be freed of the gum by adding a very small amount of white vinegar to the hot water. Remove the stamp and if some remains soak the stamp some more until the gum disappears. Then place the stamp in cold water to restore its freshness and the stiffness of the paper.

Large quantities of stamps require lots of water. Use a large container to hold the stamps and water. After soaking sufficiently, stir the mass gently and then pour off the water. Add fresh water and again stir gently to rinse out the remaining dissolving musilage. Remove the stamps and spread thinly over doubled newspapers to dry, making sure that the stamps are all face down, to prevent any remaining gum from sticking to the newspaper.

Stamps that have been pasted on colored paper should be separated from others and soaked separately, for the coloring matter many times discolors the stamps. Soak these stamps in running water. This will carry off the free coloring matter and not injure the stamps.

Some Women Still Live in Bygone Era

Have Never Left Their Rocking Chairs, Mentally, Says Columnist.

By Elsie Robinson

WOMEN sat around in "wrappers" when I was a youngster in the 80's and 90's. Wrappers were loose, flowing garments within whose shapeless folds ladies—even Nice Ones—relaxed their uncorseted acreage and Let The World Go By.

Such garments were obviously considered de trop, faux pas and a Bum Bet at weddings, funerals, church "sociables," and other public occasions where all proper-minded females donned enough dry goods to furnish a merchandise mart. But in private life, Mama 'n' The Girls took it as easy as a bunch of stranded whales, which, in contour and general action, they closely resembled.

Nor was this fashion confined to the wardrobe. Ladies wore wrappers mentally as well as physically in the 80's. Society expected a good wife or mother to be able to cook, sew, nurse the ailing and bring up the youngsters. After which she could, and usually did, retire to the veranda rocking chair, or go off 'n' have a Good Hard Cry.

Of politics and business, of the sin, suffering and strife in the world outside her hollyhock hedge, she was as ignorant as her own baby. The women of the nineteenth century used her hands and heart plenty. But she parked her brain in wrappers.

—o-o—

CAME THEN the Machine Age. Overnight, women ceased being mere domestic accessories, became CITIZENS—co-workers with and competitors of men—endowed with the dubious privileges of liberty and equality. And forthwith needed to acquire a brand-new bunch of virtues. No longer did it suffice for a lady to be charming, good-natured, generous, chaste. The new world now demanded qualities utterly alien to her old wrapper-and-rocking-chair existence — qualities which were once actually condemned as unwomanly . . . speed, promptness, accuracy, coolness, stability and the ability to deliver a swift and well-aimed wallop in emergency.

In short, with the Machine Age, Mama and The Girls had to snap out of their wrappers and Get Current pronto! Which many of them did. As evidenced by the swarms of alert youngsters who click past in the morning work rush . . . the disciplined brigades of older women who manage man-sized jobs in offices and factories.

BUT ALAS!—AND many an alack!—there's another side to the picture. For every woman who knows that the Wrapper Era has passed, there are many who don't . . . countless females who still waddle through life as manfully unbottoned as Dear Old Grandma.

Now, mind you, I've nothing against Grandma per se. I Knew Her When—and loved her. 'S'matter of fact, I'm her contemporary in years, and chair-rocked with the best of 'em in my own wrapper days. But those days have passed, sisters. And the performance which was Good Enough in 1886 is a Failure, Flop and Complete Pain-in-the-Neck in 1936.

There's no more tragic spectacle in our times than the female who is still trying to be a Dear Little Woman and nothing else but . . . who believes that a pretty face will hold her husband and a kind heart command respect from her children. Invariably such a wife or mother faces heartbreak.

CRUEL? PERHAPS. But how far would a plumber get who insisted on using the methods of his grandfather? And why should a woman worker expect any kinder deal if she refuses to march with the parade?

There's no excuse for wrappers in the Machine Age. There is neither time nor place for rocking-chair dawdlers, for citizens, male or female, who can't keep in touch with the tempo and transitions of a swiftly changing world.

A modern woman—a working girl, wife or mother—must be constantly in "fatigue uniform," mentally as well as physically. She must know what life's about and be ready to take her part on the firing line. She must, in short, live as the man lives, whose equal she claims to be, endure the discipline a man endures, face the same criticism and competition.

OR ELSE!—

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

Mrs. Dodge Sloane . . . always smartly dressed.

NO girl feels tip-topping unless her feet are nicely shod, legs encased in hosiery that has the vivid modern note. A smart and sassy hat, fresh gloves, pretty booties and the rest can pretty much go hang. They are the important details of dress.

Run-over heels, shoes that have lost shapelessness, put a girl completely out of form. We're too conscious and that affects posture, correct manner of walking, the whole set-up that is the feminine composition. There are women who spend almost as much money for shoes and hosiery as they spend for frocks. They appreciate the attractiveness of a pretty foot, neatly dressed.

Shoes and stockings this season are irresistible. Prices half what they were in those so-called glad days before the depression emptied purses. And what improvement! Remember the flesh and nude shades that made shanks look hulky? Terrible. Compare them to the lovely coppers and bronzes, delicate fawn shades that are flattering to legs. Hosiery colors have life and character. They do well by the sisters. Fabrics, too, have changed for the better, being at once sheer and durable. Yes, indeed, Genevieve, every day this world is getting to be a better place for a woman.

PRETTY, SLENDER ankles intrigue the public eye more than in the days of the knee-length kilt that made every woman look as if she bought her clothes in the juvenile section, was likely at any moment to appear in rompers. Skirt fullness and dropped hems are easy on feminine limbs. Though women's feet are no longer like little mouses that creep in and out—most of us having graduated from fours to sixes—they are so beautifully and sensibly dressed there can be no feeling of loss in the poor pinched hoofs of the past.

Wider toes, lower heels. Wonderful! Stumbling and tottering on spiked heels still go on, but the totterers have found out that they aren't up to fashion snuff. When they do, life will appear sunnier for them. The body will regain balance, the spinal column will be released from strain and tension, the pained look will disappear from brows.

new sand bar this weather. And there you are, stranded, usually without a compass. It happens most often, we've found, when you have had to park the car a smart piece from the opera and have forgotten to sprinkle crumbs to mark your trail. It's always a question whether to wait beside the lily pond for the rising sun to reveal the lost buggy or to push on home afoot. We didn't know, as we do now, that taxis stick around late for just that sort of rescue work. The cabbies will circle and re-circle the park, until they find your car for you. Sometimes it may be 1 o'clock before they make good on their guarantee, but that makes no difference as long as the meter continues to tick.

Vented Jacket Now Part Of Male Wardrob

Openings Either at Side Back—Six Inch Vent Town Suits.

By Esquire

THE vented jacket has won permanent place in the mas line wardrobe. For years it h been firmly established in Engla and now its acceptance here completely recognized. IN THE BIG VILLAGE

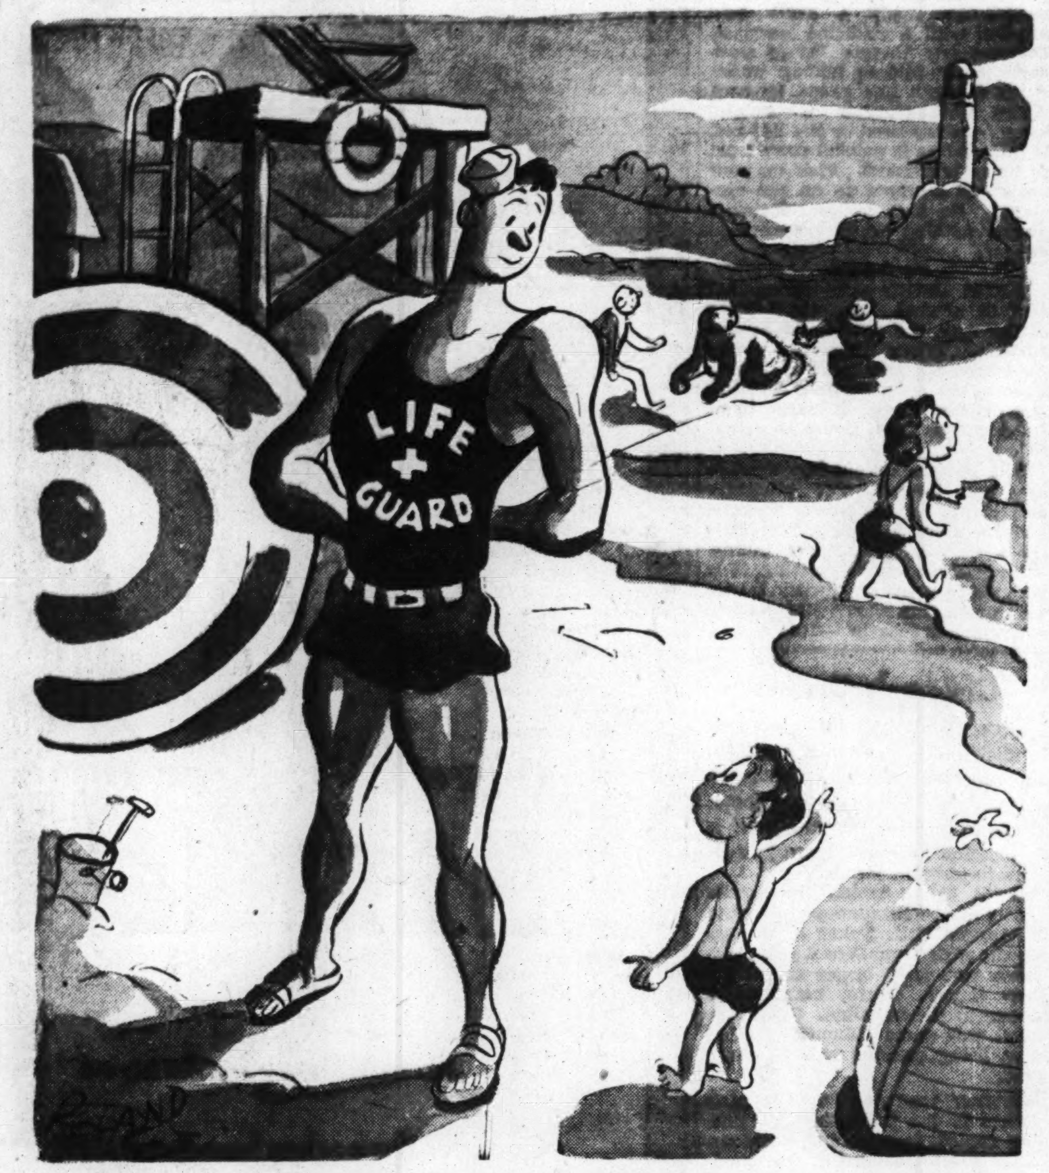
By Roland Coe



"When she hollers for help you let me go get her—but you keep an eye on me."

"Every Mother Should Have a Vacation"

"Let Grandma Keep the Children While You Take Well-Earned Rest."

MANY a mother of young children looks older than she will look 10 years from now. Hers is a tough job. On duty day and night, no time off. She is nurse, seamstress, cook, laundress and domestic cheer leader. If life once gets her on the run, ties her nervous system into hard knots, there will be a lot of beauty repair work to be done later on.

She must be the balance wheel in the domestic machine. When the papa comes home worried about business, sits down for a hearty growl, she has to pull him out of a ditch. The children's difficulties and problems will keep her in hot water continually if she hasn't herself well in hand. It's no fun to work like an old dray horse, look in the glass and find that one's petals are falling.

One solution is found in the habit of philosophizing. Why worry about today's irritations, she can ask herself, when tomorrow will bring along a new supply? After all, irritations are as bad as you think them, no worse. "Laugh 'em off" is an elegant slogan.

Another solution, the poor overworked dear must try to arrange a well organized life. Maybe she gets a good laugh out of that suggestion, remembers how many times a day she must pick up the baby's toys, remembers that papa doesn't always come home on time for dinner. Even so, a schedule is a help.

SHE MUST avoid extreme fatigue and tension. When she loses control things happen. She is the captain of the ship. Let her fly to bits and the air is vibrating with unrest and disturbances. She should snatch periods of relaxation whenever she can get them. When the baby has his nap she should do a flop even if the kitchen sink is full of dishes to be washed. A half hour rest will recharge her nerve batteries, set her on her feet again. She can go on carrying the hod up and down the ladder without wanting to bawl.

Some social life she must have, but late hours are bad. To trail into the house after midnight and to get up to take care of an early rising infant is a practice that is going to bring along a trail of beauty griefs. Sleep she must have.

THERE IS the matter of viewpoint, which is important. Many a woman is able to take care of half a dozen children, still find life zestful and full of fun. Others wear themselves out looking after one child, doing too much for the little spalpeen, getting him to expect constant attention. It is all a matter of getting the right start early.

A vacation once a year is due every young mother. Let grandma step in while you take a well-earned rest. She may not do things the same way, but the children will survive. Pile in to the old car, run off with the papa, don't worry. Take along a complete beauty kit and do a lot of rejuvenating. That much is due any woman who is faithful to her job.

Bananas and Milk Healthful For Breakfast

This Dish Will Vary the Monotony of Usual Morning Meal.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

UNIVERSAL custom, at least in this country, makes some sort of fruit obligatory at breakfast. In this country, but not so abroad. I was amused last year when in a fairly large sized French village, but one that is not used to American tourist trade. At quite a large hotel I ordered breakfast of oranges, eggs, toast and coffee. I got the coffee and toast right away. That is a regular complete French breakfast. But there was a great deal of jabbering and scurrying in the kitchen about the rest of the order. Then finally I got the eggs. But I waited for the oranges before beginning my meal. Time went on and on. Inquiry after inquiry was met with shrug after shrug. Finally, I found that they had had to send to the fruiterers for the oranges, and anyway they thought I wanted them for dessert, as they would serve them at any ordinary meal.

Well, custom sometimes makes our logic for us, but it does seem sensible to start out the day with a cool, refreshing fruit.

Oranges, grapefruit, melons or berries, depending on the time of year, take first choice with most of us. But we could well afford, considering their virtues as a food, to vary the monotony with bananas.

—o-o—

FIRST, BECAUSE bananas and milk are an almost completely balanced ration. Children who can be persuaded to drink milk alone with the greatest difficulty have been found to take it willingly when served with bananas.

The banana is thoroughly and completely digestible. It used to be said that they were not digestible, but this was only when they were eaten before they were ripe. They have, when matured, a good quantity of natural fruit sugars, vitamins and minerals.

They have an especial appeal to old people. As time goes on you will find that you begin to like better and better foods that do not require the use of teeth. Bananas need little chewing, and their nutritious and easily utilizable nutritional qualities make them suitable for the old as well as the young.

Like most fruits, bananas are put up by nature in a germ-proof package. They carry their own cellophane. Unlike apples, peaches and pears, this covering is not easily broken. The discolorations which so quickly form on the banana after it is sliced are not due to bacterial action or decay, but are a chemical change and can be prevented from forming by cutting the bananas directly into a solution of cream of tartar, corn syrup and water.

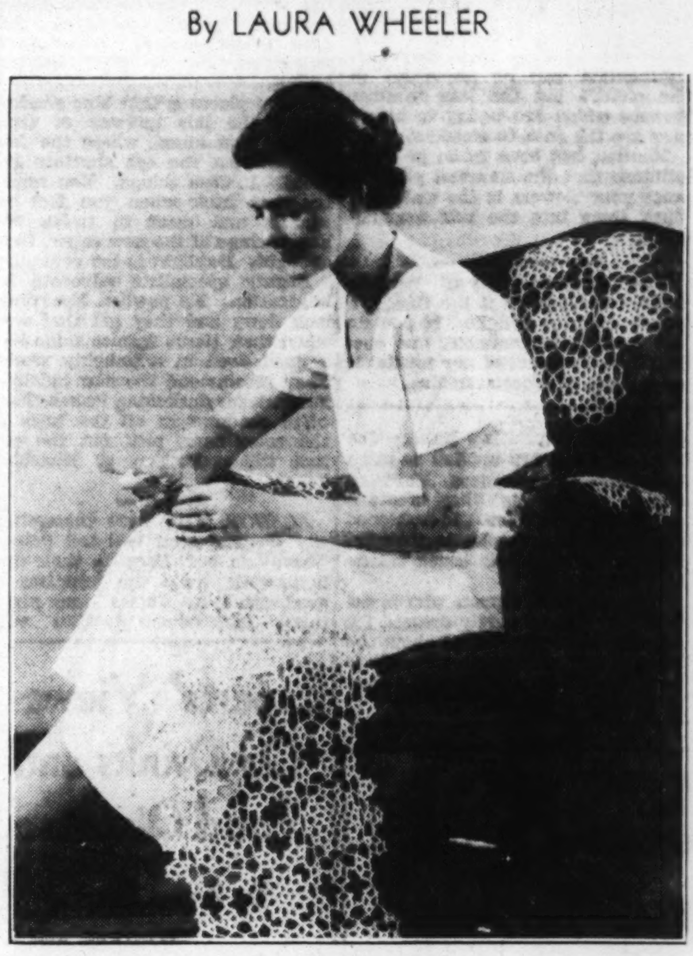
The formula for the solution is one and one-half teaspoons cream of tartar and three cups of tap water; stir thoroughly, let settle and pour off the clear solution, discarding the sediment. To the clear solution add two-thirds cup of corn syrup (white) and three cups more of cold tap water. Slice the bananas directly into this and remove them immediately with a perforated spoon. They will then keep two hours without discoloration.

The heavy skin of the banana allows those changes which occur in all fruits in the course of ripening to go on at a particularly advantageous pace. These changes are the formation of vegetable sugars. When bananas are green tipped they should be cooked, and then are really like a vegetable. For eating raw, they should be all yellow, flecked with brown spots. The best way to buy bananas is in the cluster in the green-tipped stage, and allow to ripen at home at room temperature.

When pile carpets are first put down they should be stretched and made to lie evenly. If a good quality underfelt is always used underneath the life of the carpet is greatly prolonged.

DESIGN FOR CROCHET

By LAURA WHEELER



HERE is the loveliness of tatting and the simplicity of crochet. It is a tatting design worked out in crochet, but even easier to do. These crocheted medallions make handsome scarfs, cloths, doilies and chair sets. As shown, the latter is composed only of the medallion's center rounds, joined together. Pattern 1265 contains complete directions for making the medallions shown; illustrations of them and of stitches used; material requirements.

Send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) for this pattern to St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Needlecraft Dept., 82 Eighth Avenue, New York, N. Y. Write plainly PATTERN NUMBER, your NAME and ADDRESS.

Flower Headdresses

Since fresh flower headdresses are in vogue and the wearer is lucky if they last the evening. Devotees of the fad are having foundation pieces made to which the flowers are fitted. These have a trellis-like arrangement with wired green stems attached so that the blossoms can be tucked in and varied to suit each costume. This way, the coiffure line is followed and the headdress always looks as though it belongs rather than being placed there by some prankish individual.

Coiffure Trends

Regardless of whether a girl wears a double or a single row of curls to finish her summer bob, the crown of her head has a very sleek appearance. A striking blonde dancing at a country club on a recent evening demonstrated this vogue of hairdressing. Her hair was parted rather high at the side and cut moderately short across the front so that it curled in an upward roll without looking windblown. A single row of upturned curls circled her head and the center section was brushed flat and held there by rounded gold combs.

Psychology Of Handling Youngsters

Children Need Strength of Mother's Spirit More Than Sustaining Hand.

By Angelo Patri

TWO-YEAR-OLD BILLY was trotting about the floor and he fell flat on his face. Before he could utter the yell that his deep breath got ready his mother called gaily, "Upsie, Billy. Thata boy. Upsia and so again."

Billy rolled over, eyed his mother doubtingly, winked back a tear, suppressed the yell, rolled over again, shoved himself upright and started off. He traveled a few yards and sat down abruptly. Once more he was ready to raise his voice in protest, and again his mother called cheerfully, "Upsie, Billy. Upsie and go again." Billy hauled himself up with the aid of a convenient table leg and started on his way once more.

"Goodness me, Anne, aren't you afraid he will hurt himself? If he were mine I'd be after him, picking him up and feeling his bones."

"It does scare me, but I try not to show it. I have sense enough to know that he won't break his bones by falling on the rugs. I want him to learn to get up by himself and go on again whenever he falls down. I don't want him to lie where he falls and cry for help as long as he can help himself."

—o-o—

"I SUPPOSE you are right, but I could never do it. I am far too sensitive and sympathetic for that. I just must comfort a crying child. Maybe I could get hardened to it, but I doubt it."

Good friends like that are what make mothers grim and gray. They feel they are being criticised, and they feel it painfully. The one comfort they get in life is in the thought that they are helping their children to stranger, happier ways of living by disciplining themselves to stand out of their way.

A child should not be helped when he can help himself. He should not be helped as long as he is able to help himself. That rule should be applied on all occasions of failure. "Upsie and go again," cheerily ringing in a child's ears is a far better way of helping him than, "Too bad, Baby. Naughty floor to hurt the Baby. There, there, mother will wipe the tears away. Don't cry, moma's darling."

"Upsie and go again," is the trumpet call to action, and action and overcoming are the child's way of growth.

BY AND BY the little ones grow big. They go out of home and away from their mothers. They fall down many times. Sometimes a hard lesson floors them and they turn imploring eyes toward their helpers. Give them just the grain of help they need, no more, and send them along on their own. Sometimes they have serious difficulties, face serious failures. Again, lend them only what assistance they must have, no more, and let them struggle to their feet again and go forward. "Upsie and go again."

The too ready hand, the too easy tears, go and stay together. Withhold the hand, and the tears are likely to dry themselves. But—and this is the essense of the thing—call cheerfully, "Upsie and go again." The children need the strength of your sustaining hand.

Sequin Jackets Latest Fashion

THE cleverest little sequin jackets have arrived in St. Louis to tantalize the girl who has determined not to spend any more money until autumn on her evening clothes. When she sees these she will be convinced that she can't go dancing another evening without a glittering array over her summer formal.

Two different styles of jackets are featured, one a fitted peplum type and the other a straight bolero. The peplum coat has a tricky draped sleeve which adds to its attractiveness. This draping is achieved by an elongated shoulder line which extends over the top of the arm and to which the sleeve is gathered. The peplum flares decidedly and has rounded corners at the front. The bolero jacket fits quite loosely and might be mistaken for a cape at first glance.

A variety of different colors may be obtained in these smart evening accessories. Especially lovely is an iridescent effect. There also is the new tone of brown which looks like burnished copper. Black and several pastel tints also are noted in the collections. All are shades which blend with autumn tones so the purchasers of a jacket may be able to wear it with winter formals as well as summer ones.

Between Seasons

FOR BETWEEN seasons wear, many women are choosing afternoon frocks of fine lace in dark blue or black, the sort of thing that will look good until late autumn. Usually these frocks are made on simple shirtmaker lines, the severity of the cut and styling offset by the delicate fabric and jeweled touches such as studs and belt buckles, or mesh or kidskin belts.

AS THIS PARTY entered the theater the dying applause suddenly rose again upon the arrival of Frederic March and his wife, Florence Eldredge. Mr. March is the Anthony of the picture. Both he and Mrs. March took part in another premiere a night or two later, the first showing of Hepburn's "Mary of Scotland," incidentally. On the "Adverse" occasion Mrs. March wore an original Chanel model of black net fashioned on Empire lines, the high waisted bodice being accentuated with a bow of raspberry grosgrain ribbon and her wrap was of silver fox. As the Marches and their guests, Gloria Swanson, Herbert Marshall and the Prince and Princess Von Lowenstein sat directly in front of me in the theater I was able to note that Miss Swanson wore a black crepe gown and over it a long flowing cape of flowered chiffon. Trust Gloria to get up something unusual.

JOAN BENNETT, always a great favorite with the fans, was greeted by thundering applause when she walked toward the entrance, a picture in gold beige and brown starched chiffon over brown taffeta. Anita Louise was ethereal in white chiffon, accordion pleated and a long, flowing cape of the same material near the hem with a wide stripe of gold. At each side of her head, entwined in her hair, was a tiny spray of valley lilies.

Olivia De Haviland, the leading woman character in the drama, looked as beautiful as she did on the screen which is saying quite a lot. She was dressed in her very first black dress. And very stunning it was, too; an original Mainbocher of black net over black satin and made in the empire style with an ermine wrap. And so I could go on for page after page for every one was there. But I might never get to the particular star in which you are interested and I had better just drop the "Anthony Adverse" affair, simply assuring you that it was all grand and glorious.

Why, Barbara Stanwyck, of course, wearing a suit of gray tweed and small gray turban. "Look," called Barbara, "see what we have in the back," and as the car jumped past me at the change of light I saw Joan Crawford and Franchot Cuddled cosily down in the rumble seat.

SAW ANN SHIRLEY lunching with John Howard in the Brown Derby in a navy wool tunic worn over a slim navy taffeta skirt. The taffeta was also used to form an exaggerated perky bow under her chin. The youthful star wore white accessories with this early fall dress, and when she wears it in a month or two with navy accessories, she'll have a brand-new outfit. And by the way, although in Owen Davis Jr.'s absence, Anne had been going about with John Howard, Alan Curtis, All-America Bill Shakespeare, and a few others; they're just good friends. Owen's back and still the tops.

Ginger Rogers was one of the first to wear the new color scheme, black with bright blue. She made the natives look twice when she went into the Beverly Hills Victor Hugo the other noon, wearing a short-sleeved black shirtmaker dress with a brilliant blue suede belt, blue suede pull-on gloves and a black Tyrolean hat—high-crowned with a long bright blue feather.

AND I SAW Louise Latimer bicycling out in Toluca Lake near my home the other day. I never saw anything more engaging than petite Lousie (who, as you may know, is the tiniest leading lady in films) wearing brief gray flannel shorts with a brown linen tailored blouse tucked into them. Louise told me that she got her shorts in the boys' department of a local department store. And as to the gray and brown combination, many of our stars are espousing it, although be careful! You have to have just the right shades of both or it's just too bad. But there's nothing smarter when it's done right.

TRAVIS BANTON is making a stunning costume for Gladys Swarthout to wear in "The Big Broadcast of 1937" and I was fortunate in having a peep at it while she was being fitted. The material is a very heavy metal cloth in gold and is finely embroidered with scenes from Persian legends. There are hunters on spirited charges riding after wild boars, rabbits scampering about, and lions and panthers engaged in mortal combat, hardly scenes to quiet the nerves of an opera singer. But they are done in such a subtle manner that unless you examine the material closely it just has a greenish gold appearance.

Blanton is making a jacket of this cloth, designed along Persian lines, snug fitting with long tight sleeves to be worn over a full skirt of changeable green gold taffeta. This material is imported from France and is, I believe $75 a yard. Anyway Miss Swarthout told me that when Joan Bennett saw it she gave a gasp of surprise and said, "Why, I have an evening bag made of that identical cloth and I paid $125 for it at Cartiers when I was in Paris."

Gladys tells me that she hopes to buy the costume from the studio for her own personal wardrobe upon the completion of the picture. "For," she said, "it would be perfect for concert work and I find dresses suitable for that very difficult to find." So you may see it in St. Louis one of these days.

SAW JEANNE MADDEN at dinner a night or so ago wearing a new fall outfit of a combination of blue wool and taffeta. The skirt and jacket blouse were of wool and there were wide bands of matching blue silk running from shoulder to cuff on the sleeves and a high wide ruff of the taffeta formed the collar. This ruff was made very fetching and feminine by having a solid row of small white flowers appliqued around its edges. With this smart outfit Miss Madden wore a saucer shaped hat with turned down brim with a double row of the white flowers around the edges.

DOLORES COSTELLO appeared on a recent broadcast program looking very young and beautiful in a frock of black crepe and black modified poke bonnet with a tiny black lace veil in front and her gleaming gold hair showing at the back. About the throat was a soft white lingerie collar caught with a handsome brooch of diamonds. A swagger coat of beige galayac and black pumps completed the costume.

BETTE DAVIS and her husband Harmon Nelson have recently returned from a short vacation spent at Catalina Island where they did a lot of fishing and sailing, but, having come home, they are devoting themselves to the more serious things of life, such as teaching their young Doberman Pincher to sing. Bette gave the pup to "Ham," as she calls her husband, for his birthday and they immediately discovered that the dog had vocal talents and started developing them. Recently, meeting them near their home, nothing would do but that I should go with them and witness a command performance. This is the way it went: Ham went to the piano and struck a note, the pup put his head on one side for a moment and listened and then as Ham struck it again more firmly the dog threw back his head and gave forth a sound of quite similar pitch. Ham was plainly elated and struck another note and the dog repeated the performance, matching the pitch again and even to a third one the pup responded. But beyond that point his education has not been completed. But Ham and Bette assure me that they are perfectly sure that with sufficient patience, on theirs or the dog's part, he would learn the entire scale. I did not like to appear rude, so I did not say anything about it but when my Scottie makes those noises we call it howling.

JEAN MUIR, who has been doing over her entire wardrobe, showed me some rather novel things in sportswear. One was a sheepskin swagger coat dyed a pale blue and not nearly as strange looking as it sounds, either, and another was a green trench coat made of a new velveteen material which is waterproof and fine for rainy days.

A NEW STYLE of earring was worn by Jean Harlow at a dinner dance at the Cafe LaMaz. Jean was in a gown of white chiffon which had a short cape edged with white fox. As she stopped at our table for a moment I noticed that she was wearing silver earrings that clipped well up on the ears and were in the shape of long slender leaves.

A PRINTED notice of Rubye de Remer, star of the silent film days, in connection with her appearance in Joan Crawford's "Gorgeous Hussy," brought a glimmer of recognition from one of the first fan clubs in the United States.

The Rubye de Remer Fan Club was one of the original so-called organizations formed during the days of the star's reign in past years. In honor of her appearance after a 10-year sojourn abroad, the members of the club have again assembled to pledge support to their former sponsor.

The Mary of Scotland influence is making itself manifest by the appearance of many gay Scotch plaids in trimmings and packets. Katharine Hepburn herself turned up Wednesday at the polo matches in a black wool skirt and a jacket of red and blue plaid, and a Scotch bonnet, streamers and all.

MORE MALE stars can be found sometimes in the kitchen of the Brown Derby instead of the main dining room lately, due to a wave of cookery as a pastime.

Such stalwarts as Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Roger Pryor, Paul Muni, Stuart Erwin, Henry Armeta Walter Huston, James Cagney and Jack LaRue, who pride themselves on culinary prowess spend many an hour in solemn conclave with the Derby chefs on sauces and timing.

THE ANTIQUE furniture Joan Bennett purchased in England last month, aged a great deal more on its voyage to the United States than all the previous years of its existence.

Miss Bennett opened the packing cases to find most of the antiques were broken in transit. Although an expert cabinet man was summoned the best he could do was add a few hundred years to its appearance, changing it from early Tudor to mid-Victorian.

Sports Coats For Fall Have Carefree Style

Town Coats, However, Are Distinctly Fitted and Dressy in Design.

FASHION authorities are making a desperate effort to keep sports coats in the country and let town coats have an urban territory all their own. Their latest move is to present two distinct styles of coats for autumn and winter wear, each so radically different from the other that there is no mistaking the occasion for each.

The sports coats or casual ones as they are often termed have a comfortable, carefree appearance while the town coats are distinctly fitted and dressy in their design. Straightline models which hang loosely from rather square shoulders are important for sportswear as are the very full swagger models which have a definite swing to the back and to the hemline. Materials are rough finished, some of them having a hairy surface, and the colors are unusual. Vivid tones blend with pastels in combinations which suggest wear with cashmere frocks, patterned hosiery and heavy footwear.

In direct contrast are the princesse lines of the town coats, their nipped-in waistlines, high moulded bust lines and flaring hems. The fur trimmings are applied as large collars, stoles or borders. Materials are so elegant that they create a velvet-like impression. Old-fashioned duvetyn, for example, is included as is a smooth fabric which resembles broadcloth.

Obviously the woman who is determined to be smartly dressed for autumn and isn't worried about the state of her clothes allowance is to be persuaded that she needs a complete coat wardrobe.

Flower Trimming

If you would be fashion-right in the flowers you wear for dress adornment, follow the seasons. Discard those white violets which were quite charming during the springtime and early summer, and substitute hydrangeas in their place. The white ones will be most dramatic for a black frock but the soft pink tone is stunning with blue or brown.

Dahlias are the flowers to wear if you want a splash of color to your evening frock. Nasturtiums are satisfactory, also, from a style viewpoint. Before long the chrysanthemum will be important in the picture but the late summer flowers which are trying to bloom now are the ones to consider.

Mention has been made in these columns that the smartest place to wear your flowers is the waistline. Tuck them into the belt nonchalantly.

Two tablespoonfuls of beer in welsh rarebit gives it the flavor in which epicures delight. If you do not have beer available, use one-fourth taespoonful of dry mustard; or a dash of worcestershire.

THE CHARM THAT LIES IN EYES

Garbo . . . does things with her eyes.

THE beauty specialists are concentrating on eye charm. Time was when the synthetic blush was the outstanding detail of the facial scenery. They squee-geed eyebrows got all the attention, posed in the spotlight. The blush that was dipped out of a jar has gone the way of all sweet foolishness, the ziggy eyebrows have straightened themselves out, fattened back to normal. So eyes are having an inning.

Garbo places a thin blue shadow across the lids midway of their width. You know, where the fold comes when the eye shutters are lifted. It does things. You might try that trick when you feel romantic and want to tweek the heartstrings of the new caller. Only at night. Daylight is too revealing.

Beauty specialists advocate lid lubrication. No powder. Eyes must look dewy and they get that way when their tissue frames shine like a good deed in a naughty world. They recommend the new indelible mascara for darkening lashes. They offer shadows in all the hues of the color card, pick out the one that will make you a ravishing beauty.

AS FOR THE eyes themselves, any medical man will tell you to "leave 'em be." They do their own housework, keep the premises in good condition unless you abuse them. And women do that very thing. Read in dim lights and all that. Very bad girls they are. Ought to know better.

Eyes are self-washing, self-lubricating and they have a pretty satisfactory protective system. On the inner side of the eyelids are a colony of tiny glands that secrete oil. At every wink oil is carried over the surface of the cornea, keeping the delicate tissues from drying. Tears serve a purpose other than that of making a husband miserable. They flood the eyes when dust has entered the optic premises. If a foreign particle still clings, is painful and troublesome, apply a boric acid solution with a medicine dropper. Dissolve one teaspoonful of powdered boric acid in boiling water, strain through fine gauze, let cool.

The boric solution is helpful when eyes are tired or the lids red. If inflamation is painful don't trust to home treatment. Pick up your heels and scamper to an eye specialist. No time to lose. Expense means nothing when eyes are in danger.

WHEN USING skin lotions that contain alcohol, keep them clear of the eyes, the fumes will be disturbing. When applying creams be extremely gentle when edging close to the eyes. Tissues are thin and delicate there. Massage tones them if it is light, wears them out if it is heavy.

Cold compresses are beneficial to eyes and tissues. Put glimmers and shines in the pretty lookers, help the flesh to remain firm. Better begin early on tissue toning. With friction and lubricating, it is possible to ward off turkey tracks which sometimes come all too early and which are never welcome.

Experts' Views On Drinks and Food Discussed

By Bruno Lessing

LONDON, Aug. 8.

THERE is the "Gourmet's Year," which my friend Buchanan-Taylor edits. A snappy little diary with a quotation about eats or drinks for every day in the year. I should have reviewed this on Jan. 1. But on January 1—let's see—oh, yes—I was dancing around a Christmas tree on board a Danish motorship, in the Pacific Ocean—off the Panama Canal—participating in the celebration of New Year's Day in the Danish fashion. And I didn't get this booklet until recently. But what's half a year in the realm of epicureanism?

"Good brandy is the living soul of good wine. It has left its body, but it liveth."—Andre L. Simon.

That quotation gives me a pain in the neck. I don't know who Andre L. Simon is, but if he is a brandy-drinker I'm sorry for him. Brandy has great medicinal value—if you're rescued from a watery grave or have been nearly frozen on the steppes of Siberia. But it is too strong to have a place in a sane menu. I know all about the allurement of its taste. The human stomach was not designed to absorb any drink containing 50 per cent alcohol.

"The chef-d'oeuvre was a dish of mutton and whole onions, stewed in honey. I repeat: stewed in honey. It was celestial."—Louis Golding.

I don't know who he is, either. And I heard him the first time. Never tasted this dish and have no ambition. Yet it may be good. Orientals cook lots of meats and vegetables in honey. I like a glob of honey for breakfast, even though it does get into my hair and over my shirt, but in combination with meats or vegetables it does not peep over my culinary horizon.

—o-o—

"AN EXCELLENT and well-arranged dinner is a most pleasing occurrence, and a great triumph of civilized life."—Sydney Smith.

Well, who in blazes ever said it wasn't?

"Sandwiches and beer, a humble feast, but delicious."—Knut Hamsun.

Up you go to the front row, Knut. But to deserve the laurel wreath and the gold medal you should have embroidered. There are sandwiches and sandwiches and there are beers and beers. In Copenhagen last year, at the end of a heavy dinner, they slipped me a sandwich—thin, fresh rye bread with caraway seeds, Danish butter and a sliver of leberwurst—and a glass of Tuborg beer. I just nibbled. As the poet Dryden wrote, "The force of nature could no further go." But the next day my lunch consisted of six of those sandwiches and three seidels of Tuborg.

"Before the word 'diet' has taken the place of the fine word 'food,' let me point out that there are rather more than 62,000 delicious foods on this earth."—J. B. Morton.

Is that all? Gosh! I thought there were a million. Maybe I'll have to fall back on a diet after all.

—o-o—

"LET'S GO out for a bite to eat and we'll talk it over. I'll stand treat."—Mark Hellinger.

That's sensible. No dogmatism or pre-arranged schedule. The sentence, "I'll stand treat," covers a multitude of sins. Listen, Mark. The other night Mrs. and I, having no appetite after a heavy lunch, talked it over for an hour. Then she took a chicken sandwich and I fell for a little Welsh rabbit. Great-issimo!

The quotations must be paired. "We had partridge, half of one for each of us."—Romer Wilson. "For 40 years I've eaten prunes."—William B. Seabrook.

Romer, will you do me a favor? Please shoot William.

Modesty, however, insists that I include one of the quotations from Brun Lessing in this collection. "A good herring is better than poor caviare." Now go ahead and do your wurst.

Chinchilla Toppers

A "topper" or brief coat of chinchilla cloth may not seem appealing on a hot August day but wait until the college girls start buying their campus wardrobes.

These toppers are regarded as the latest idea in campus clothes, and are to be featured in bright shades of red and blue. Some of these coats are quite boxy in appearance but the more spectacular ones have decidedly flared skirt sections and are belted quite tightly with very wide fabric belts. One style which is finger-tip length has deep graduated pleats at either side of the back, armholes that are so deep they reach to the waistline and a Queen Ann type of collar which is worn standing up at the back.

There are large pockets on all of these coats and these often are cut in novel shape. The three-cornered pocket which stands out from the coat is a favorite.

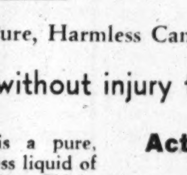
Children's Dresses

Little girls aren't to be outdone by their mothers when it comes to adopting the princesse silhouette. In fact, they have been wearing it for some time so all they need is a variation here and there to conform to autumn trends.

Gored skirts which flare quite widely at the hemline are attached to straight little yokes in dresses for the girls from 2 to 6 years old. Those who wear larger sizes have their flared skirts attached to blouses at the waistline. Coats also adopt this same silhouette, waistlines being slender and hemlines wide.

Another tendency in little girls clothes is the high shoulder line, also copied from adult fashions. Pleats are introduced at the shoulders to give a slightly puffed effect, the fullness extending upward as well as outward.

Wire paper clips can be used for holding together two sides of material while a long seam is being stitched. The clips save tacking and keep the seams from slipping.



Lovely Color
(Similar to Nature's Own)
For Your
Gray Hair

With Pure, Harmless Canute Water

20 years without injury to a single user

Canute Water is a pure, colorless and odorless liquid of wonderful properties. This crystal-clear fluid, when applied to gray, faded or streaked hair, will again make it appear youthful, lustrous and uniform in color.

Easy to Use

Because of its safety, cleanliness and dependability, you can use Canute Water alone, in the privacy of your own room. No previous experience is necessary. You simply wet the hair with it and allow to dry.

Speedy Action

It requires between one and three applications to re-color the hair to the proper shade. The treatment can be completed in a single day.

And when the hair has once been re-colored, a single treatment given only once a month, is sufficient to keep it that way. No more attention is necessary.

Results Amazing

Canute Water is neither sticky nor greasy. It leaves the hair clean and natural to the touch. There's not even a suggestion of "dye". Neither is it just a hair "darkener." Canute Water imparts a color similar to nature's very own.

Even your most intimate friends will be unable to distinguish the recolored hair from the natural. And the new color remains in the hair; permanent against sun, air, salt-water and shampooing.

Action Is Positive

No matter what has caused your grayness, Canute Water will positively overcome it. There are no exceptions.

Even if you have used some other hair coloring, it will be a revelation to you to see what Canute Water can do for your hair.

The time of day or the state of the weather makes no difference when using Canute Water. Apply it at your convenience. And since it does not alter the texture of your hair, you may curl, wave or set it—or get a permanent—as usual.

Inexpensive

Even a very modest purse can spare the trifling cost of keeping the hair lovely with Canute Water. A bottle contains enough for six average applications.

So, if you are still young—if you still care what others think—and if you are not quite ready to be classed with the "old folks" or the "has beens," get a bottle now. It will solve your problem so completely that you, yourself, will be astonished.

Victory for Either Side Means Only an Interlude in Spain

Europe Watches Struggle of Radicals and Conservatives Which Cannot End in Complete Success for Any Faction Without Much of Population Being Exterminated.

By ALBIN E. JOHNSON.
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

AFTER five years of procrastination and indecision Spain's revolution has really gotten under way. The claims of the extremist republicans, who, back in 1931 said that there was no such thing as a "bloodless" revolution, and who argued that the reactionary opposition had to be wiped out before a modern democratic state could be established, are being justified. Spain—like France, Russia and Germany before her, was no more able to pass from an absolutist monarchy to a liberal republican regime without a blood purge than were her predecessors. The fight is to the finish and Spain's streets resemble the bloody bull rings of her national fiestas. Thousands of lives have already been sacrificed. The writer predicts that Spain will be Europe's next Communist republic, albeit a dictatorship or even a temporary return of the monarchy may appear in the process.

Regardless of how the present strife is liquidated Spain's political travail is just beginning. Perhaps today might be called the second chapter because the Asturian Uprising of October, 1934, when Gil Robles and his clericals ruthlessly shot down Catalonian workers, Andalusian peasants and Asturian miners, was the first. The third chapter is in the making, and one of brutal executions, reprisals and political assassinations will follow in the months to come. But neither the Right nor the Left will be able—or willing—to absolutely stamp out all opposition at this time. The nation is too evenly divided just now to wipe out either the reactionaries or the radicals, or even the Communists or Anarcho-Syndicalists. That would necessitate extermination of a large per cent of the population, in one way or another.

Other Nations Interested.

The struggle in Spain today is dual. It is a fight of political factions and a clash of social forces. As a political fight it has only domestic or national significance; as a clash of social and spiritual forces it may easily have international repercussions. Socialist France, Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, Communist Russia and the dictator-saddled Portugal are interested in the outcome. Even Great Britain is not unaffected for her citizens have large financial status in Spain and the British Foreign Office includes Spain in its Mediterranean calculations.

In the immediate future either Fascism or democracy will be triumphant. But that will be an interlude. A victory for the Leftists would be longer-lived; it would provide a breathing spell and the Socialists might sway their Communist and Anarchist allies in the process of creating a Soviet regime in Iberia. The Left Republicans also might stay the hand of the Red executioner, although the Rightists—the Clericals, Monarchists and Fascists—have laid themselves open to reprisals by their merciless tactics both recently and in the Asturian outbreak when they shot down thousands of workers, peasants and Socialists. The masses of Spain will not soon forget the importation of Moroccans and Foreign Legionaires and class hatreds will burn in the country for years and years to come.

If the Reactionaries win the hope of Spain for a transitional regime—a transition from pale-blue republicanism to red Communism—will be gone. A Fascist reign of terror perhaps will result with terrible consequences for the innocent bystanders, who suffer most in civil warfare. If the Republicans—who constitute the minorities in both the Leftist and Rightist groups—could only get together they would form a middle-of-the-road majority, but they are pathetically like the Kerensky "Kadets" in the Russian revolution. They are being crushed between the two extremes.

Old and New Spain.

The struggle of forces—which is spiritual as well as economic and social—centers around Old Spain and New Spain. For centuries the country had been crushed by the land-owners, Church, industrialists and aristocracy. Millions of peasants, illiterate and downtrodden, lived worse than serfs under a pseudo-feudalism. The workers in the large cities and seaports, and in the mining regions, likewise were wage-slaves of the Spanish and foreign capitalists. After their brief taste of political liberty, and their glimpse at the Utopia promised them by the Republic and the Communist propagandists, they will not quietly submit to enchainment. They have

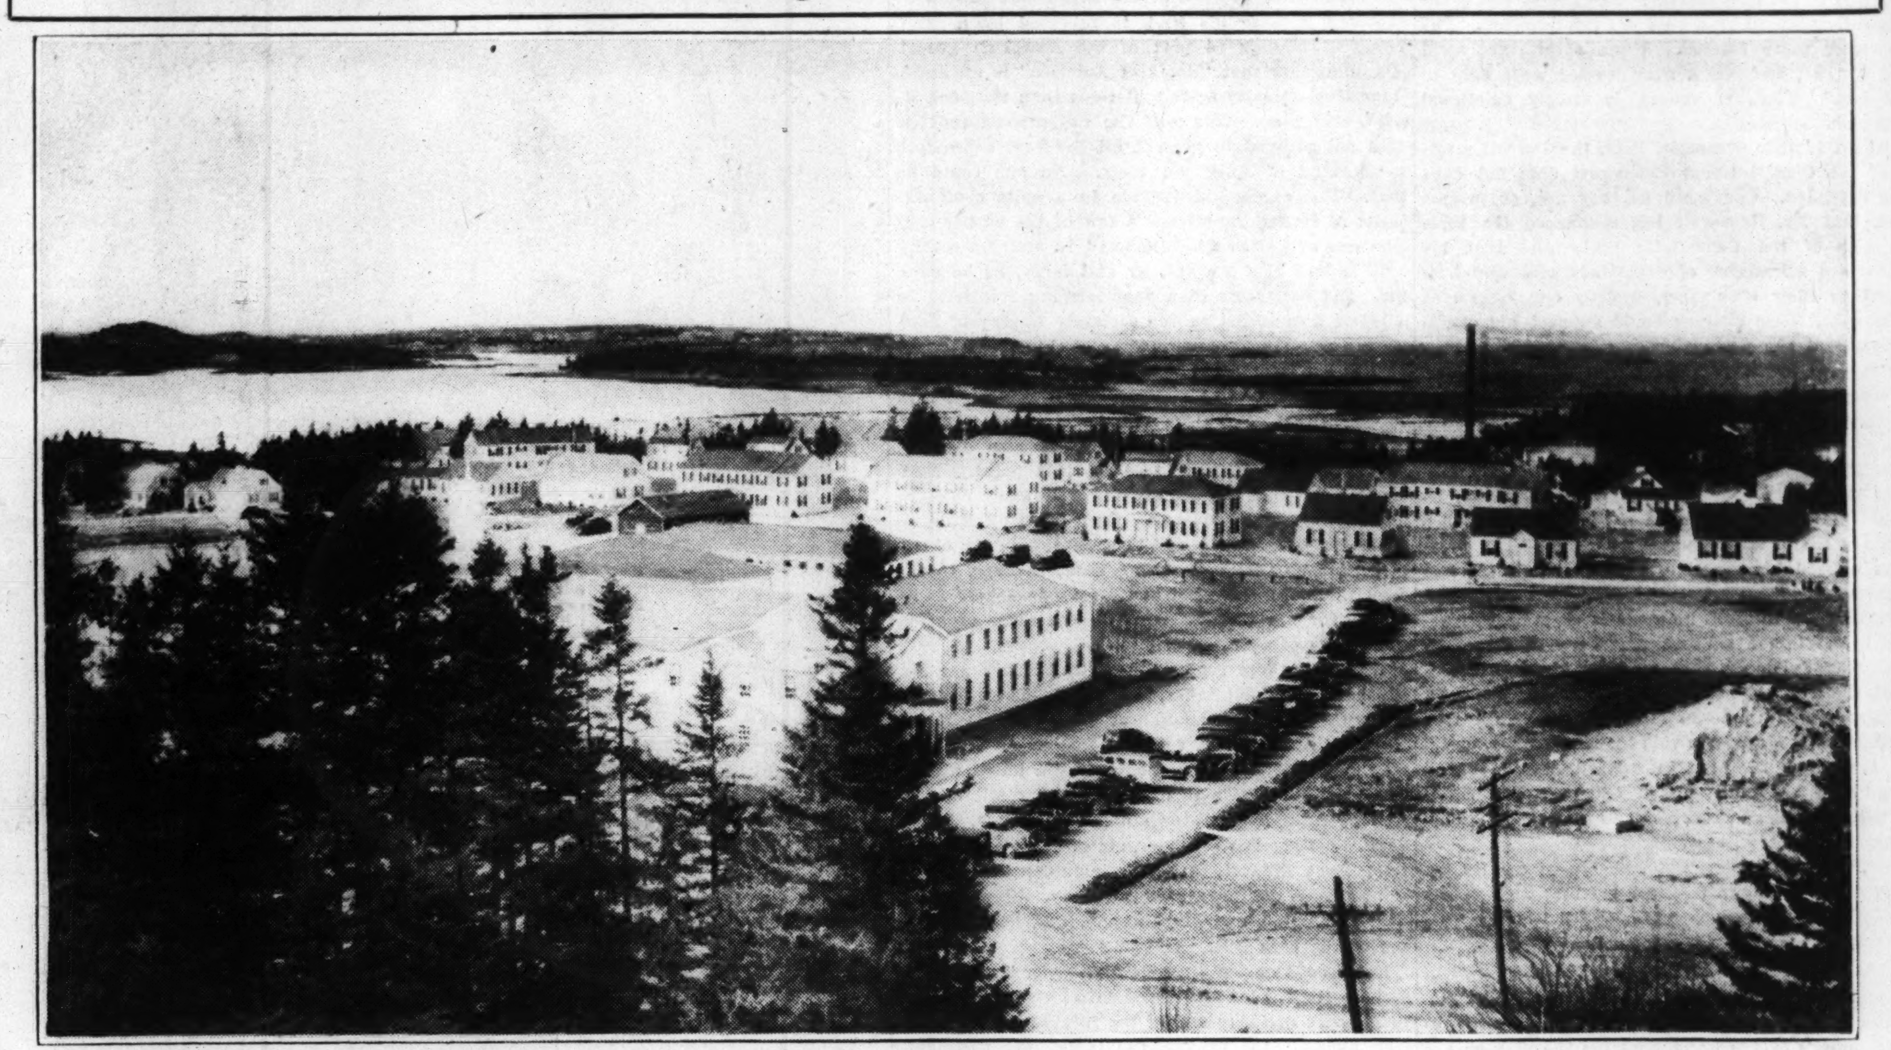
Government's Model Village at Quoddy, Now Being Depopulated



Quoddy, Maine's Tidal Power Dream, Fades as Army Engineers Move Out

Great Hydro-Electric Project May Be Resumed, But Not Even Roosevelt Can Say When—Meanwhile, $7,000,000 Government Investment Lies Idle.

By MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PASSAMAQUODDY VILLAGE, Me., Aug. 8.

THIS model community of trim white houses is rapidly being depopulated. Army engineers are winding up all activity on the great Passamaquoddy power project, shutting it down in a preliminary construction stage, with none of the large dams completed.

It may be resumed. The great hydraulic steam shovels may once again be put to work at the colossal job of building a trap for the far-reaching tides of Passamaquoddy Bay. But no one knows when that will be, not even President Roosevelt, who visited Quoddy Village recently and spoke hopeful words.

Plans are in preparation to turn this spic and span New Deal town over to another government agency. One of the functions of the new occupants, presumably, will be to preserve the Government's $7,000,000 investment here, looking forward to the time, prophesied by the President, when work will be started again and the project carried to completion.

Quoddy Object of Attack From Date of Inception.

From its inception a little more than a year ago Quoddy has been the object of vigorous and unceasing attack, partly political, partly originating with private power interests. Quoddy has been a conspicuous target for opponents of the New Deal, and with good reason. A series of blunders has given critics every opportunity they could ask.

In nearby Eastport, and all through this section along the Northern Maine coast, are citizens who have fought, bled and died on behalf of Quoddy. It was their dream long before anyone had heard of the New Deal. And now they feel bitter toward the Roosevelt administration for the present failure, which they fear may retard the power development for years. They are cautious about expressing this bitterness because they cling to the hope that the President can still find some way to revive the scheme, a hope stirred by his recent appearance. As to the ultimate completion of Quoddy, despite the experience of the last two years and the constant barrage of unfavorable publicity, they have no doubt whatsoever.

Section Being Deserted By Industry and Commerce.

Industry and commerce have moved away from this part of the world. Once there were 15 sardine canneries at Eastport alone. Now only two small factories remain—the use of efficient, labor-saving machinery at other fishing centers did that.

Once Eastport, Lubec and other Maine ports did a flourishing business outfitting sailing vessels. That, of course, is over.

Decay has set in. Last year one of the long wharves that extended out into Passamaquoddy Bay tumbled into the water, carrying with it an abandoned three-story building. A stranded population has been left with little hope. The young, or the more ambitious among them, tried to escape the blight and many succeeded in establishing themselves in industrial centers.

It was about 12 years ago that Dexter P. Cooper, noted engineer who has helped his brother, Hugh Cooper, in the construction of great power projects in various parts of the world, first enlisted local support for the Quoddy tidal power scheme. Cooper has a summer home on Campobello Island, New Brunswick, 20 minutes by ferry across the bay from Eastport. Cheap power, as Cooper conceived the Passamaquoddy power project, was to bring new industries to the area. From that time forward it has been the dream, the hope, the faith which this stranded population has lived on.

That is why the shutdown is such a cruel blow. It is as though a starving man had been promised a seven-course dinner and then had been told, after the tomato juice, that it was all a mistake.

Hopes Buoyed Again By Roosevelt's Visit.

Oscar Brown, Eastport's leading druggist, is typical of those who have worked to make Quoddy come true. When the President came here last week, Brown was one of a committee of three named to draw up an appeal to the President. They planned to take this plea with them when they went to the reception which the President held on the front porch of his summer home on Campobello. But before they could hand it to a secretary, the President had made a brief address telling his summer neighbors, "We are going to have Quoddy." With hope renewed, Oscar Brown went back to Eastport and wrote in chalk on the bulletin board outside his store the following message:

"President Roosevelt will visit Eastport and Quoddy at 4 p. m. Thursday. He said Quoddy would be finished and those employed now would be kept at work on projects. He also said that the international project is being considered as part of a great plan to make Maine and New Brunswick one of the sources of cheap power.

"When finished we have a chance for your boy to stay at home and earn a living. You should vote for your own benefit. You know in your heart who is the only friend this section has. The members of the band are requested to be at the band's room in uniform by 3 p. m."

What Government Begins It Will Finish, Is Theory.

Many business men in Eastport staked their future, or a sizeable part of it, on the completion of Quoddy, confident that whatever the Government began it would finish. Will C. Beale, insurance and real estate salesman, author of several books about Maine and long a believer in Quoddy, is one of these. He owned two vacant store buildings on Eastport's main street and, certain that a mild boom would result from the construction of the power project, he invested $4500 in rehabilitating these stores. Both were leased but now, of course, the tenants will be unable to pay their rent, since they depended on Quoddy workers.

This is but one instance of what has happened as a result of the flow and ebb of the New Deal money tide. Government officials at the time the project was started made a canvass of available rooms in houses in Eastport in which, it was assumed, engineers and transient workers might live. Later it was decided to house all workers at Quoddy Village in barracks and separate houses. But on the strength of the canvass many townspeople remodeled their homes to add another room or a bathroom so that they could take in boarders. While the investment was slight it represented in many instances life-time savings.

Two Tidal Traps Called For in Dexter Cooper's Plan.

Why is Quoddy being shut down? Whose fault is it? These are questions which Maine asks and in this campaign year the answer is partisan and confused. Certainly there is no simple answer. The reasons for the present dilemma go back to the beginning of the Quoddy dream.

The plan, as conceived by Dexter Cooper, called for the construction of two tidal traps, one on the Canadian side and one on the American side, with a potential power production of 500,000 horsepower of "firm power"—which means 500,000 units on tap every second of every hour of the day, a capacity that Army engineers say is unique.

The method by which this power was to be produced was essentially very simple. A section of Passamaquoddy Bay, on the American side, was to be walled off as a high tide pool. Through gates operated electrically the 28-foot tide would flow into this pool until the water had reached the desired level. Another section of the bay, adjoining the high tide pool, but on the Canadian side, was to be walled off as a low tide pool and the tides barred from entering it. The level of water could always be kept lower in the low tide pool than in the high tide pool so that there would be a constant flow through the turbines in the dam separating the two pools. In this way the tidal flow could be utilized 24 hours of the day.

Cooper is an engineer who has something of the creative flair of the artist. And he has the artist's faith in the validity of his creation. It was not long before the had succeeded in capturing the interest of several large private power concerns, among them General Electric, Boston Edison, Westinghouse and the Insulls in Chicago. These concerns agreed to investigate on a co-operative basis the possibility of power production on Passamaquoddy Bay.

In association with Cooper an extensive investigation was started. In May of 1926 a preliminary permit was obtained from the Federal Power Commission at Washington in the name of Dexter P. Cooper, Inc., granting the right to make preliminary surveys for the Passamaquoddy power project. At about the same time a charter was obtained from Canada granting authority to make similar surveys on the Canadian side.

During the next three years the private power concerns spent about $400,000 for surveys and for options on the land essential for the construction of the required dams. Cooper put in another $100,000 out of his own pocket. In May of 1929 an application was filed with the Federal Power Commission by Dexter P. Cooper, Inc., for a license to construct the Passamaquoddy tidal power plant.

Fishermen Object; First Of Series of Misfortunes.

Then, as Cooper, Will Beale and others here in Maine tell the story, a series of misfortunes befell the project. On the Canadian side opposition developed from fishing interests who were convinced the power basins would ruin the fishing. Just before a general publicity campaign on behalf of the project was to have been started in the United States and Canada, an American Coast Guard vessel sank a Canadian ship suspected of being a rum runner. Bad feeling resulted and the publicity campaign was called off. Later the Canadian Government refused to renew the charter that had been granted.

A change in plan was made necessary and it was just here that the first hitch developed which was to lead to the present impasse. Without Canadian co-operation it would be impossible to build the low tide pool and therefore another method must be devised to take 24-hour advantage of the tidal flow.

Cooper worked out the Haycock Harbor storage reservoir hydro-electric installation to replace the low tide pool. To put it as simply as possible, this was a method whereby the level of the water in the high tide pool was to be artificially raised. That is, at high tide when the water outside the pool and the water inside the pool were practically on the same level and therefore water could not run through the turbines, the storage reservoir would be used to "prime" the pool. In September of 1929 the application for a license in Washington was amended, eliminating the Canadian pool and a month later it was amended again to include the Haycock Harbor storage reservoir.

The stock market crash occurred at this

Lucien Herr—The Intellectual Father Of Third Commune

French Socialist Leader's Influence Guided Leon Blum Into Public Career That Made Him Premier 10 Years After Death of Teacher.

By RICHARD L. STOKES,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, July 27.

LUCIEN HERR died 10 years too soon. Voltaire, Rousseau and Diderot may dispute the paternity of the French Revolution; he alone was the intellectual father of the Third Commune. As to outward calling, he was librarian of the Ecole Normale Superieure, in Paris, where he found a collection based on the Greek, Latin and French classics. This he modernized in a fashion that made history in the bookish craft. But his true vocation was that of fisher of men for Socialism.

After a controversy lasting a whole night long, he induced Jean Juares—whose own reasoning had brought him to the last verge of republican theory—to take the one additional step into Marxism. The reverse most lamented by this passionate angler was that dealt by Georges Clemenceau, whom he coveted for his creel; but the wily Jacobin remained proof against his fervid play of the hook. He would assuredly have been consoled had he been able to forecast the leviathan-like future of a certain minnow which in 1890 darted upon his bait. This was a Jewish lad who, though only 18 years old, arrived at the Ecole Normale with a scintillant scholastic reputation. His name was Leon Blum.

Broken in spirit, Lucien Herr died on May 18, 1926. The movement to which he had dedicated his existence seemed everywhere prostrate. In the latter days he reverted if not to the faith, certainly to a preoccupation with the hagiology, of his Catholic forebears. He strove, in a final essay, to establish the virginity of St. Ann, mother of the Virgin Mary. Had he survived a decade longer, he would have beheld Socialism rising from its wreckage to sweep triumphant across France and his proselyte, his inseparable ally for many years, the first Marxist Prime Minister of the Republic.

A Secretive Man.

By nature, Lucien Herr was profoundly secretive. So intimate a friend as his colleague and biographer, Prof. Charles Andler, was never able to learn why or when he became a Socialist, where he spent the year 1887, or whether he passed through Prague and Vienna on returning from his first visit to Moscow. His love of personal anonymity was almost a mania. The authorship of his interminable disquisitions in the press was involved in a labyrinth of sobriquets. His first book, on St. Augustine, was issued under the name of a friend. Direct contact with public affairs he avoided like a contamination. Therefore his renown is only beginning to emerge in France. To foreign countries, except Russia, he is virtually unknown. But his preponderance in the rise of Gallic Socialism, if occult, was decisive. Authoritative witness was borne to this fact three years ago by M. Blum himself, in an address at the Theatre des Ambassadeurs. His topic was the career of Juares, and emphasis was placed upon the indecisions of thought which harassed the earlier years of the future chieftain.

"Then," proceeded the orator, "there was found a man who gave form to the ideas, still perhaps confused, in the brain of Juares; who produced an effect of crystallization upon this travail, as yet seething and uncertain.

"After his defeat (for re-election to the Chamber of Deputies), Juares was appointed a faculty member at Toulouse. Work on a French thesis compelled him to frequent the library of the Ecole Normale. There he discovered a personage called Lucien Herr, librarian of the college, who was voluntarily obscure as to name, but who, from the depths of that sombre lair, for 30 years shed upon generations of students and professors the treasures of an erudition and a science well-nigh incomparable; and who, in addition, exerted upon many spirits—upon Jaures himself and numerous others—that effect of contagion and belief which was proper to his own fixed and steadfast convictions.

Influenced Other Leaders.

"Juares surrendered to this influence, as I myself did; as Albert Thomas did, 10 years later; and as did my friend Marcel Deat, 20 years after me. It was thus that Juares, reentering the Chamber in 1893, appeared as a Socialist Deputy."

Like Premier Blum, Herr came to Alsacian stock; but he was not a Jew. His father, Jean Herr, was a Roman Catholic, and a teacher of mathematics at Altkirch. His mother, sprung from a petty industrial family, was celebrated for a regal port, a superb

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

"The Forgotten Man."

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

"THE forgotten man" is an expression, which, so far as I know, originated in one of the essays by William Graham Sumner, published under the title, "What Social Classes Owe to Each Other." Brought out first by Harper's in 1883, it was later published by the Yale University Press. The following is a brief extract from the essay called "On a New Philosophy: That Poverty is the Best Policy," which contains the frequently quoted phrase:

"The humanitarians, philanthropists and reformers, looking at the facts of life as they present themselves, find enough which is sad and unpromising in the condition of many members of society. They see wealth and poverty side by side. They note great inequality of social position and social chances. They eagerly set about the attempt to account for what they see, and to devise schemes for remedying what they do not like. In their eagerness to recommend the less fortunate classes to pity and consideration, they forget all about the rights of other classes; they gloss over all the faults of the classes in question, and they exaggerate their misfortunes and their virtues. They invent new theories of property, distorting rights and perpetrating injustice, as anyone is sure to do who sets about the readjustment of social relations with the interests of one group distinctly before his mind and the interests of all other groups thrown into the background.

"When I have read certain of these discussions, I have thought that it must be quite disreputable to be respectable, quite dishonest to own property, quite unjust to go one's own way and earn one's own living, and that the only really admirable persons was the good-for-nothing. The man who by his own effort raises himself above poverty appears, in these discussions, to be of no account. The man who has done nothing to raise himself above poverty finds that the social doctors flock about him, bringing the capital which they have collected from the other class, and promising him the aid of the State to give him what the other had to work for.

"In all these schemes and projects, the organized intervention of society through the State is either planned or hoped for, and the State is thus made to become the protector and guardian of certain classes. The agents who are to direct the State action are, of course, the reformers and philanthropists. Their schemes, therefore, may always be reduced to this type—that A and B decide what C shall do for D. It will be interesting to inquire, at a later period of our discussion, who C is, and what the effect is upon him of all these arrangements. In all the discussions attention is concentrated on A and B, the noble social reformers, and on D, the 'poor man.'

"I call C the Forgotten Man, because I have never seen that any notice was taken of him in any of the discussions. When we have disposed of A, B and D, we can better appreciate the case of C, and I think that we shall find that he deserves our attention, for the worth of his character and the magnitude of his unmerited burdens. Here it may suffice to observe that, on the theories of the social philosophers to whom I have referred, we should get a new maxim of judicious living: Poverty is the best policy. If you get wealth, you will have to support other people; if you do not get wealth, it will be the duty of other people to support you." READER.

Exposure of the Frauds.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE board of directors of the League of Women Voters of St. Louis wishes to commend the St. Louis Post-Dispatch for the splendid service it has rendered to the citizens of St. Louis by exposing the registration frauds.

May we also express to you the appreciation of the league for your support of permanent registration, which the league has advocated for so many years?

MRS. IVAN H. LIGHT, President.

The Wright Brothers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I ENJOYED reading your editorial, "Across the Channel," but I could not help thinking while I was reading it how little has ever been said about the Wright brothers. Here are two men who invented one of the greatest things of all time—yet I venture to say today there are thousands of people who do not know even whether they are living or not.

How interesting it would be to read about their early boyhood and who their ancestors were. J. B. CORYELL.

Tug of War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I QUITE agree with you that the bar associations can claim but little credit for the judicial nominations. How, indeed, is the lay citizen expected to follow the lawyers' recommendations when he observes the sorry spectacle of the two associations of lawyers engaged in a tug of war, each shouting down the candidates put forth by the other?

It does seem that the gentlemen of the bar ought first to learn to agree among themselves on the fitness of the candidates before they presume to make recommendations to the public.

J. H. DRUCKER.

THE REVOLT AT DETROIT.

Freedom of political conviction may not be written in the letter of the Bill of Rights, but it is proclaimed in the spirit, and we are assured, on high authority, that "the letter killeth and the spirit giveth life."

The gentlemen who met in Detroit, on call of Sterling Edmunds of St. Louis, to consider what they may best do to prevent Mr. Roosevelt's election, were wholly within their rights as citizens. As such they are entitled to the respect which proper deportment supposedly commands.

For some reason, palpably illogical, the theory widely prevails that, once honored by a party, the honoree is bound to it forever. The notion was grandiloquently phrased by a good old tub-thumper: "The Democratic party forever. When she's right we'll stand by her, and when she's wrong we'll help to right her." That, of course, is simply emotional balderdash.

Without further preamble, then, the Detroit meeting of the Constitutional Democrats does not have to be defended. Convinced as they are, or profess to be, that Mr. Roosevelt has renounced the basic principles of the Democratic party and that his policies are subversive of democracy and would, if pressed to their conclusion, destroy our system of government, these citizens could support his candidacy only at the price of stultification. This they have refused to do. Their decision will, we believe, be respected by thoughtful people, however raucous the chorus of sneers and jeers.

An outstanding figure at Detroit was former Gov. Ely of Massachusetts. A man of brilliant parts, still young enough to count upon a political future, he has put his convictions ahead of expediency. Such a voluntary choice strikes us as admirable. The counsel he offered his associates is also admirable and in character.

Speaking for himself, he made it clear he was not there to "malign the President." Persuaded the national welfare would be served by Mr. Roosevelt's defeat, their duty, he argued, was to employ the most practical means to accomplish that end. On that predicate he was going to vote for Mr. Landon, would take the stump for him, in a word, would put all he had into the fight. But it will be square fighting, with the rules of courtesy and fairness religiously observed.

That, we take it, is sportsmanship—a quality urgently needed in our political battling and mostly conspicuously wanting.

SUMNER AND HIS "FORGOTTEN MAN."

A communication which appears in the letters column today quotes that portion of one of William Graham Sumner's essays which contains the often-quoted expression, "the forgotten man." It is one of the ironies that a quotation from Sumner should have been popularized by Franklin D. Roosevelt in his 1932 campaign in behalf of the "more abundant life" for the rank and file. For Sumner, who was a dynamic and compelling professor of political and social science at Yale from 1872 to 1910, was an extreme advocate of "rugged individualism." He had no use for trade unionism, socialism, tariff of labor legislation or other efforts of groups or government to interfere, as he put it, with the laws of supply and demand. A reading of the passage quoted in the letters column makes it plain that the Yale sociologist did not have the "poor man" in mind, but rather those who bore the costs of governmental social services and benefits to rich and poor alike. Viewed in this light, the New Deal's use of Sumner's "forgotten man" comes pretty close to being of a piece with its misapplication of Charles Evans Hughes' 29-year-old remark about the Constitution being "what the Judges say it is."

GOV. PARK RECEIVES A LETTER.

Sharing the view of the Post-Dispatch that the Election Board is unfit for public office, the St. Louis League of Women Voters has written a letter to Gov. Park, asking him to dismiss Chairman Waechter and Commissioners Hannauer, Wagner and Moore. The Governor, on receipt of this, has said that he will give the matter "careful consideration."

Responsibility for the registration fraud cannot be divided. The four members of the board are jointly accountable for the corruption which the Post-Dispatch exposed. There is a further objection, however, to the presence of one of the two Republican members, Charles L. Moore. His alignment with a faction of the local Republican party bent on unseating Fred W. Pape, chairman of the Republican City Committee, gave him a special stake in the election of committeemen and women. No one charged with supervision of elections should have such a stake.

We do not say with Chairman Pape that Commissioner Moore refused to give candidates for the Republican City Committee consideration in the naming of election officials unless they agreed to support candidates for certain offices favored by Mr. Moore. What we do say is that no member of the Election Board should engage in political activity which lays himself open to such a charge.

Gov. Park, these men, constituting the St. Louis Election Board, appointed by you and removable by you, are individually and collectively unfit for public office:

James A. Waechter.
Joseph W. Hannauer.
Stephen M. Wagner.

BEAVERBROOK'S "GOOD THING."

Lord Beaverbrook has his nerve to propose that the United States and Great Britain enter a military alliance. Fortunately—for both America and Britain—he is not the Government. We can laugh so much more merrily at his naivete.

"In some quarters," he modestly asserts in an article in the American Mercury, "it is believed that the United States will not have the alliance." He believes, too, that "perhaps the people of the United States take the view that Britain's liabilities are too big and her assets not big enough." This, he assures us, is not true, and he strikes one of the most surprising balances ever recorded in any kind of bookkeeping. He weighs our problems in the Pacific and the burden we have incurred under the Monroe Doctrine against Britain's concerns in Europe's woes, and sees our side of the scale hit bottom. He doesn't have much to say about financial resources, an oversight which doubtless helps him to write in deep black on the side of the ledger he chooses.

There hasn't been anything like it since 1929, when an acquaintance would sidle up and say: "I'm going to let you in on a good thing." Those who didn't ask themselves, "If it's such a good thing, why should he let me in on it?" learned a thing or two. It is a question which distinguishes a wise man from a sucker. Maybe Lord Beaverbrook can answer it.

THE REAL ROOTS OF AMERICA.

This listing of a reporter's impressions is abundantly open to challenge and disagreement. Reporters' impressions are justly subordinate to men and places specifically described. For the reader to challenge or disagree is a just and intelligent privilege.—Charles Morrow Wilson, in an introduction explaining why his recent book is called "Roots of America."

It is not pleasant to exercise a privilege so graciously and humbly presented, but Mr. Wilson's rationalization of the use of the broad title should be exploded because his book is accepted by a large group of readers as part of the American gospel. His admission that "Roots of America" is an ambitious title—"vastly more ambitious than the book itself"—won't do. Nor will the explanation that he does not pretend to present all the vast subsurface wonderland of American roots. No one could do that. But one might include in a gallery of portraits of typical Americans a few of the 60 per cent who are urbanites not "anchored in amiable earth."

It is true that we are, by and large, as he says, sons and daughters of a vast farming frontier. In a lesser degree, but in one certainly worthy of note, we are not. In the very nature of things, the larger part of the next generation will be sons and daughters of the city. One may deplore it, and hold with Jefferson that cultivators of the earth make the best citizens. There are, however, many who disagree with the sage of Monticello on this point. Both camps must face the actuality of an already changed and ever-changing America. Even granting Mr. Wilson's justification of the title in the sense of its definition as "origins"—going back, perhaps, to the days when Adam delved and Eve span—there is no excuse for his use of "roots" in the sense of being the source of national characteristics.

What are these roots of America? They are Mr. Wilson's Eben Whitaker, a New England farmer; Amos G. Gallup, an auctioneer of the same section; Hastings A. Williams, senior merchant of Williamsville, Vt.; Alf Robinson, Pennsylvania horse wrangler; "Mr. Missouri"; Ben Irwin, another Missourian, who operates a small-town hotel; J. Milam, Jasper (Ark.), editor; Dave Kezzler, cutter of staves for barrels; Paul Pfeiffer, Arkansas planter; Lee Romez, drum-maker of Taos; Jack Lambrey, sheep herder; Bill, ex-pugilist and ex-politician, and Bill Maddox, son of the corn belt. Assuredly.

But does America draw nothing from its city-born and do they not have characteristics of importance to America of today and of the future? Are not the iron puddler, the banker, the typist, the pressman, black with ink and grease, the machinist, the salesman and the saleswoman, the operator of chain stores and the thousands who work in them, the manager of a great department store and his countless subordinates, the builders, the packers and hundreds of other groups also roots of America? And what of those working to the end that we may have a fuller cultural life? What of the actor, the teacher, the artist, the musician? What of those who endow scientific and cultural enterprises? And do not the roots of America include the gangster and his moll, the shyster and chiseler, both rural and urban, the gambler, the loafer, the under-privileged? Unfortunately, but unquestionably, yes.

He who views the roots of America as virtually flawless and totally rustic sees scarcely half the picture. Our civilization is complex, and is becoming more so each year. Those who believe America's qualities spring entirely from the soil simply aren't able to see the wood for the trees.

BIG BILL OFFERS HIMSELF.

Big Bill Thompson, noble public servant in years past, has once more volunteered to toil for the people of Illinois. This time, the erstwhile "builder" of Chicago is a candidate for Governor on, so he says, the Union ticket, headed by Congressman Lemke for President and supported by Dr. Townsend, Father Coughlin and the Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, follower of Huey Long. Now, we have no intention of saying or even intimating that the National Union for Social Justice has indorsed Big Bill. On the eve of the Illinois primary in April word got around that Father Coughlin's Illinois backers had come out for the late Len Small. A rumpus followed and the radio priest disavowed the announcement. It will be interesting to see whether Big Bill, who has promised a platform "that'll curl their hair," is also repudiated. Small and Thompson were birds of a feather in politics. To balk at one and stomach the other would be without rhyme or reason. If the Lemke-Townsend-Coughlin-Smith movement is going to take up with the notorious spoilsman who disgraced Chicago before the world, its generalship is even poorer than it would seem to be, and that is bad enough!

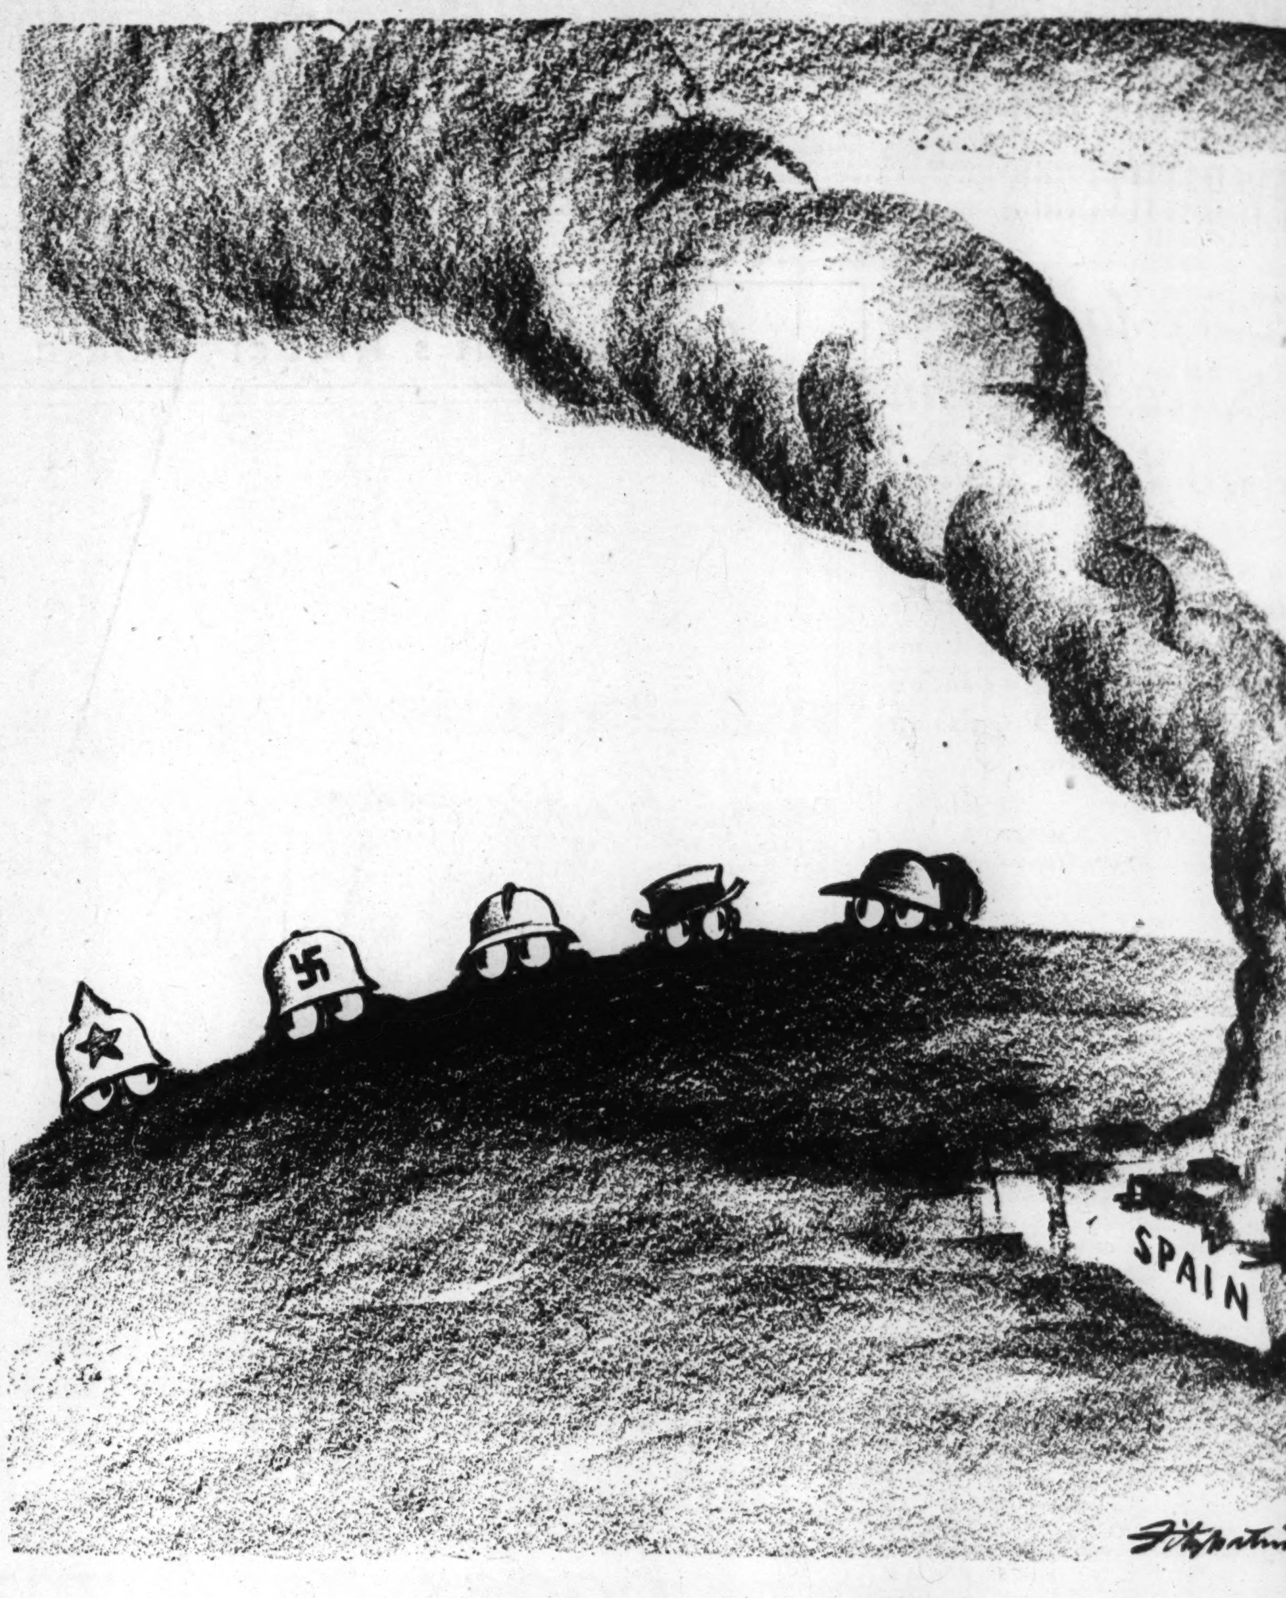
P. R. VOTING BY MACHINE.

The merits of proportional representation as a voting system are widely recognized, in theory. Many who see the merit of a method whereby proper representation of minorities is given are deterred from giving full support, however, by the practical difficulties of introducing the system. For one thing, it is pointed out that the task of counting votes under P. R. is a prolonged one, and there is often extended delay in determining the result. An answer to this objection is now provided by perfection of a voting machine that uses the P. R. system.

This machine, now being demonstrated in New York City, has a series of dials which the voter turns to indicate his first choice, second choice, and so on. Space is also provided for writing in the names of candidates not listed on the ballot. When the voter leaves the booth, a card is automatically punched with holes registering his choices. The card falls into a box which can be opened only at the central counting place. These cards are counted by tabulating machines, and it is estimated that they would enable the result of a New York election to be known early the following day. Of the machines themselves, a reporter for the New York World-Telegram wrote that he found them "less complicated and bewildering than the voting machines already in use."

Many instances have been recorded where, because of the distribution of voters into districts, minorities poll sizable votes without obtaining representation. The contrary of this evil is also possible under the present system, in that minorities may obtain undue representation by distribution of their votes. The P. R. system is designed to end such misrepresentation, and the perfection of a voting machine adapted to its needs should win converts for this ballot reform.



SPECTATORS AT THE RINGSIDE.

Future of the League of Nations

Present plight of League is likened by speaker to disunion among American colonies when Articles of Confederation were in effect; similarly, he says, nations must decide to pay the price of "a more perfect Union" to avert war; thinks flaw in Covenant is that it seeks to prevent war more than to promote justice.

From an Address by Charles G. Fenwick, Professor of History, Bryn Mawr College, at the Institute of Public Affairs, University of Virginia.

NEVER before, perhaps, in the history of the world has the paradox been presented of an almost universal desire for peace and at the same time an apparent inability on the part of the nations to do the things that make for peace.

Religious leaders are insistent in preaching the ideal of peace, organizations of many kinds sign manifestos for peace, yet the preparations for war have gone steadily on and the past year has witnessed the dread reality itself. It is not to be wondered that many citizens have become discouraged, and have been led to abandon the ideal of international co-operation and have taken refuge in a policy of isolation.

This is not, however, the first time in the history of the world that great ideals have seemed to be on the point of defeat because men have hesitated to do the practical things upon which the success of the ideal depended. Out of the enthusiasm of the American Revolution of 1776 was born the ideal of a "league of friendship" that was to be "perpetual." Scarcely had the war been won than the 13 states that had entered into the Articles of Confederation began to seek their separate interests and defeat the primary purpose of the Union.

The "critical period" of American history, as it has been called, is not without a parallel in the critical period through which the world is now passing. Did our forefathers abandon their principles because of the practical difficulties found in their execution? No, they went on to form a "more perfect Union" and they called upon the several states to pay the price of that Union in the subordination of their individual claims to the general welfare. Every American will agree that the price was worth paying.

When the World War ended, an international organization not unlike our own Articles of Confederation was created. The old law of nations had held that each was the judge in its own case; the new law set up agencies representing the whole community of nations to which controversies between individual nations were henceforth to be submitted.

The old law of nations had left each individual state to pursue its claims by force of arms; each state was free to take the law into its own hands and to declare war when its judgment called for such action; the victim of the attack found no protection from the community at large.

The new law set up the principle of co-operative defense, the same principle that is embodied in the Constitution of the United States. The old law had proceeded on the principle that, when acts of international outlawry were being committed, those nations whose interests were not directly affected might stand aside and declare their "neutrality." The new law announced that henceforth all nations were to be collectively responsible for the maintenance of peace. It was a great experiment, and high hopes were held out that at last war was to be banished from the earth.

Why is it that these new principles which represent the evolution of law between man and man and between state and state of the United States have thus far failed in their application to nations? Is it to be said that individual citizens may be called upon when necessary to subordinate their interests to the common welfare, but that nations are a sort of supermen to which the ordinary rules of law and morality are not applicable? The suggestion is utterly in conflict with the teachings of Christian jurists and with the principles of American democracy.

It is a fundamental in our tradition that nations are bound by the same principles of morality that are binding upon the individual citizen. If an individual citizen may not defraud, neither may a nation defraud, nor rob, nor kill. If an individual citizen may be called upon to make sacrifices for the good of the community as a whole, so may a nation in formulating its foreign policies be expected to consider the welfare of the larger family of nations.

The truth is that the great experiment of 1919 has failed to meet the demands put upon it, not because the principles upon which it was based were not the right principles, but because the principles have not been pushed far enough

Law can be an agency of peace only if it undertakes to promote justice as well as to prevent violence. The framers of the Covenant of the League of Nations put too much stress upon the prevention of violence, upon the maintenance of territorial boundaries and the existing status quo. They did not sufficiently realize that the League, if it was to be successful, must give equal attention to removing the causes of war and promoting those conditions of justice which are necessary to make law tolerable to those whom it attempts to control.

The question before us, then, in considering the future of the League of Nations, is to determine how the important changes that are needed in international relations can be brought about peacefully, while in the meantime protecting the existing order against violence. A stable peace, a peace based upon justice, calls for building up a fund of common international interests which shall be to each nation a strong motive for observing the law; it calls for a lowering of the economic barriers that have been raised so high of recent years; it calls for an open-door policy in the markets of the world, for greater equality of access to the raw materials of industry, for a fairer distribution of the opportunities of trade and commerce in the undeveloped part of the world.

The issue confronting us seems to me to be not whether the goal of a lasting peace, a peace of stability based upon justice, is ultimately attainable, for it must be attained if our civilization is to survive. The issue is rather whether we shall have the wisdom to move forward toward that goal now, in the immediate future, without waiting for another devastating war to teach us the necessity of doing so.

NAVY APPROVES DESIGNS FOR TWO NEW BATTLESHIPS

SPEEDIEST AFLOAT, AIM OF OFFICIALS

Britain to Build Two, Japan Four, and Other Nations Are Also Adding to Battle Fleets.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — The navy, ready to resume building $50,000,000 battleships after a lapse of 13 years, has selected designs for the mightiest and speediest sea-fighters in the world. It is expected Great Britain will notify the United States of its capital ship construction program within the next month.

Several designs have been approved by the General Board from the multitude of sketches made to show various combinations of speed, gun-power, protection and other vital characteristics obtainable within the limitations of 35,000 tons. Actual building will not start, however, until President Roosevelt has authorized it. Congress has already earmarked $100,000,000 for new battleships.

Britain to Build Two.

Great Britain has announced it will begin building two new dreadnoughts on expiration of existing naval treaties on Jan. 1. Under the new London treaty the signatories, United States, Great Britain and France, are pledged to exchange data on tonnage, length, beam, horsepower, speed, fuel, type of machinery, number and caliber of guns and torpedo tubes, and aircraft to be carried, at least four months before laying down the keel of any naval vessel.

The comparative battleship strength among the world's sea powers is: United States: Fifteen of 464,300 tons; Great Britain: Fifteen of 474,750 tons; Japan: Nine of 272,070 tons; France: Nine of 185,925 tons; Italy: Four of 86,532 tons, and Germany: Six of 69,120 tons.

Japan refused to sign the pact and will not be given the data by either Great Britain or the United States. The Japanese have let it be known they plan to build four battleships in their quest for the naval equality denied them in naval treaties. Other major powers are building or have planned eight more.

35,000 Tons Each.

Admiral William H. Standley, Acting Secretary of Navy, has declined to make public any data concerning the new American ships except that they would be 35,000 tons each. Navy officers say they will be "bigger and better" than any existing American warship. The following statistics are for the West Virginia, commissioned 13 years ago, and now the Navy's most powerful ship: Tonnage, 31,800 tons; length, 624 feet; beam, 97 feet, 6 inches; speed 21 knots; armament—eight 16-inch guns, 12 five-inch .51 guns, eight five-inch .25 guns, and two 21-inch torpedo tubes; electric drive; eight boilers: 27,300 horsepower; crew 1200; two cage masts; two catapults and four planes.

The speed of the new ship is unknown. For comparative purposes, however, the following figures show the speed of existing capital ships, or speeds hoped to be attained in ships under construction:

All United States battleships (except three obsolete ships) make 21 knots; Nelson and Rodney, Britain's latest, 23 knots; Hood, British battle cruiser, 31 knots; Mutsu and Nagato, Japan's latest battleships, knots. Present French and Italian battleship speeds are comparable to American.

Tips From Battle of Jutland.

In drafting the final plans for the ships, officers are taking advantage of lessons learned from the Battle of Jutland, the most important naval engagement of the World War, and facts known concerning battleships built by other sea powers during the last decade.

A return to direct steam drive and innovations in design and weight distribution are expected to make the two new American battleships speedier than the comparable battleships of any other nation. Designers are confident they will be several knots faster than the 21 knots (approximately 25 land miles an hour) of any existing American craft. They now aim at foreign speed records.

The projected return to direct steam propulsion is a departure since the last five battleships in the navy were built with electric propulsion.

During the 13 years since the last battleship was launched, however, the navy has built and tested 10 new cruisers whose speedy performances have foreshadowed the speed of battleships of the future.

The Italians have drawn plans for new ships of 34 knots speed. That high speed, however, officers said, indicated that the Italian ships will be lighter armored and in the battle cruiser class.

Father of the Third Commune

figure and a homeliness of visage which could be described only as original. She died in 1871, leaving two sons. Tony, the elder, became an army surgeon and explorer. The younger, born in 1864, was Lucien Herr. The annexation of Alsace and Lorraine by Germany after the Franco-Prussian war caused the family to seek refuge at Vitry-le-Francois. There the motherless boys were raised by their father with an austerity accountable for Lucien's life-long abhorrence of every form of restraint.

But it was this Spartan father who saw to it that his sons spent hours each day at fencing, swimming, tennis or riding. It was from him also that Lucien inherited an addiction to music which served throughout his life as a haven and consolation. In his student years, when often he could afford only one meal a day, he still found ways to rent a piano and buy scores. Later, a piano stood always beside the large table which was his work-desk at the library.

After learning all that Vitry-le-Francois could teach, Lucien passed to the preparatory schools of Sainte-Barbe and Louis-le-Grand in Paris; and in 1883 matriculated at the Ecole Normale—that august university, neighboring the Pantheon, which has fulfilled with such celebrity, since 1763, its particular function of training teachers of the loftiest professional rank. He was noted for high distinction as a student, as well as for a love of pranks and colossal physical strength. It was a rule of the college that the students, to protect them from the temptations of the city, should be locked at night within the premises; so that many an idler, by mere dint of having nothing else to do, became an accomplished scholar. There was also a regulation that students caught smoking outside prescribed hours should be sentenced to captivity in the library. No small part of Herr's vast reading is ascribed to the volumes he consumed while a prisoner under this statute.

Vanished for Year.

Having been graduated with especial honor in 1886, he was enabled to spend a term at the University of Leipzig as a guest of the Ministry of Instruction. Before returning to Paris, he visited Moscow, St. Petersburg and Nijni-Novgorod. Then for a year he vanished; owing to his love for secrecy, his whereabouts during 1887 remain unknown. According to some, he was with his brother in Algiers; others hold that he visited a cousin on the Riviera; still others maintain that he hid himself in Paris. All that is definite is that in April, 1888, he appeared as a candidate for the directorship of the library of the Ecol Normale. Despite his youth—he was only 24—the appointment fell to his lot. This article is not concerned with his professional career. Suffice it to say that he reorganized the collection from top to bottom, aligning it with the thought and achievements of modern science; and that, having only meager funds, he developed perforce, as a buyer, into one of the most astute judges of new books in Europe.

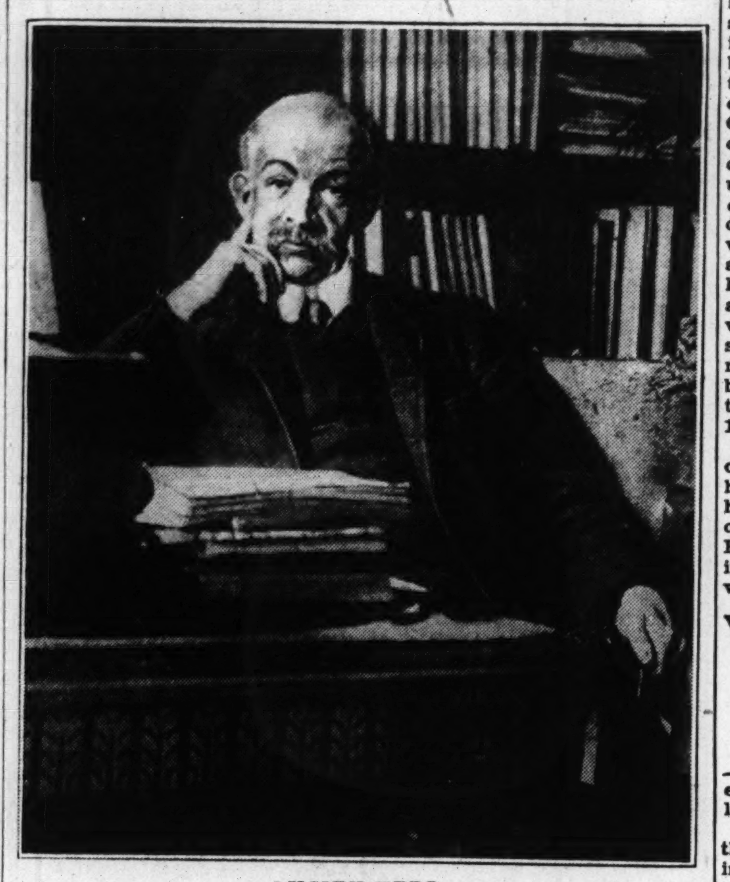
It was a somewhat singular figure which took possession of the library's work table. Lucien Herr had the stature, the breadth of shoulders and the brawn of a peasant blacksmith, with the great domed skull of an Alsatian of the Upper Rhine, thatched by a dense growth of chestnut hair. Above antler-like mustaches and eyes as glowing as the headlights of an automobile, towered a brow already furrowed with wrinkles like that of an old man. His convictions as an impassioned Socialist were fully formed. Most Frenchmen, in 1890, had never heard of Marx. Prof. Andler records that Herr, the omnivorous reader, had before that year devoured the only two volumes "Das Kapital" which had then appeared.

No member of the faculty was more popular. It was the librarian custom to lunch each day with the students in their refectory, and to make their coffee with his own hands—very artfully, it is said; though this may be doubted, the brewage being French. It was a strategic post from which to spy out the sentiments of possible acolytes. Lucien Herr never wasted his missionary powers upon men who were not already, as he phrased it, "of good will." It is not likely that he failed to note with more than usual interest the advent of Leon Blum, who was wealthy, gifted and favorably disposed.

Won Many Prizes.

He came with a record of having been one of the most redoubtable snatchers of prizes in the history of the Lycee Charlemagne, that cradle of French genius. Through its narrow black gate at 101 Rue St. Antoine, in the shadow of the column of the Bastille, with a Jesuit church on one hand and on the other the pushcarts of the descendants of those Maenads who once marched to seize a King at Versailles — through this portal trooped as school boys Hugo, Michelet, Gautier, Sainte-Beuve, Sarcey, Lemaitre, Meissonier, Blanqui, Faguet, Richepin, Leon Bourgeois and Sadi Carnot, to say nothing of the Marshals Joffre and Manoury, and the actor, De Feraudy, star of the Comedie Francaise. During four out of five years Leon Blum led his class in general excellence as a student, not to mention a dazzling array of some 27 first prizes in such branches as French composition, Latin composition, both in prose and verse; history, geography, declamation, Greek and German. Then for a year he pursued the same devastating course at the Lycee Henri IV, 23 Rue Clovis, across the street from the church of St. Etienne du Mont, where rest the bones of Racine and Pascal.

The Teacher of Leon Blum



LUCIEN HERR.

A subtle epigram of Blaise Pascal is a favorite quotation of the Prime Minister: "You would not seek me had you not found me." In a sense, he was already a Socialist before meeting Lucien Herr. I have described, in a previous article, the impression made upon him as a boy of 14 by this sentence in "Les Effrontes" of Emile Augier: "Wealth should not be hereditary since intelligence is not." But one may imagine the delighted ardor with which Herr, with such an opening, introduced this neophyte to the lives and works of the French Socialists who preceded Marx, such as Babeuf, Fourier, Saint-Simon, Proudhon, Blanc and Blanqui, to Lasalle, Debel and Liebknecht, and finally to "Das Kapital" itself.

Blum Changes Career.

Why, having entered the Ecole Normale with the intention of becoming a professor of philosophy, did Leon Blum, after only one year, desert its gloomy corridors for the Faculte du Droit of the University of Paris? This about-face remains an enigma. It may well have been that Herr, with his eye for the nuances of talent, discerned in young Blum potentialities for public life, and persuaded him that the avenue to that goal was the practice of law rather than the exposition of Plato.

At any rate, Leon Blum was one of Lucien Herr's first converts, probably three years earlier than Jaures himself. It was not until 1897 that Herr saw fit to make the two men acquainted. This historical presentation occurred in a tiny apartment at 27 Rue Madame, near the church of Saint-Sulpice, where Jaures had lodgings. Blum had by then completed his law course and been admitted to practice before the Conseil d'Etat. He was also well launched on his career as a man of letters, which began during 1892 with a contribution to a noted radical weekly, now defunct, called "La Revue Blanche." Its music critic was Claude Debussy.

To Lucien Herr the Third Commune owes not only its leader but the trait which particularly distinguishes it from its predecessors in Paris and Russia—namely, the bloodless if unrelenting pursuit of its aims. He taught both Jaures and Blum that republican institutions form an ideal framework within which Socialism may evolve; that universal suffrage, of the political sovereignty of the masses, can be made to lead, peaceably and lawfully, to their social and economic supremacy. Despite his giant strength and well-proved courage, he was the gentlest of men. Violence and slaughter he detested with the hatred of a civilized being for every vestige of savagery.

Prevented Clash.

On the day of the Grand Prix, June 11, 1899, Herr made one of his infrequent descents into the streets of Paris. With Leon Blum and other friends he led a column of working men in a demonstration on behalf of Emile Loubet, who had recently been elected President of France. From the Pavilion d'Armenonville the marchers were assailed by a shower of stones, bottles, glasses and iron chairs. The victims of this attack were about to storm the pavilion, when Herr, taking possession of the passageway, forbade them to invade the gardens. Then, single-handed, he made it possible for the leader of the assault to make his escape unharmed in a carriage.

Later, in the Avenue du Bois, the demonstrators were attacked by police. Many were wounded; skulls and jaws were broken. But when one of the gendarmes became separated from his companions and was near to lynching at the hands of the crowd, Herr said simply: "Give me this man!" He was instantly obeyed. The ranks opened before him, and he restored the policeman to his brigade. Nevertheless, Herr sent to Edouard Vaillant, of the Chamber of Deputies, a telegram recounting what he himselm, Blum and others had witnessed in the way of police brutality. This "petit bleu" was one of the chief factors in bringing about the fall of the ministry of Charles Dupuy.

Defense of Dreyfus.

"L'Affaire Dreyfus," relates Prof. Andler, "was the climax, the heroic hour, of Herr's life. He proved what can be accomplished by a powerful spirit, without material resources, by sheer dint of the truth, perceived by critical reason, tenaciously defended by a resolute conscience and a passionate will." It must be remembered that when Dreyfus was convicted by a court-martial in 1894, even Juares and Clemenceau believed him guilty, and regretted that he had not been shot. With his extraordinary resources of information, Herr knew almost from the start, not as a conviction but as a fact, that the Jewish staff officer was innocent. The majority of Socialists held that, innocent or guilty, the case did not concern them, Dreyfus being not only a wealthy man but by profession a militarist. Even four years afterwards, in 1898, when Emile Zola launched his immortal letter, "J'accuse," powerful factions in the party refused their aid on the ground that the novelist was a bourgeois.

In his usual nameless fashion, Herr organized centers of Dreyfusism throughout Paris, and obtained hosts of signatures to petition after petition demanding a new trial. But his supreme service was that of converting Juares, Clemenceau and Anatole France to a belief in the innocence of Dreyfus, and of launching these three flashing swords into battle. Zola arrived at the same conviction independently, having been revolted by Leon Daudet's jubilant description of the ceremony at which Dreyfus was degraded. It was Herr, in addition, who by endless interviews impressed upon other Socialist leaders his conviction that this case, being one of fundamental injustice, could not for a moment lie outside the province of the party's conscience. It may be doubted whether Zola himself was a more powerful factor than the anonymous Lucine Herr in obtaining the eventual vindication of Dreyfus and the disgrace of the bandits who had plotted his fall.

Party Without Leader.

Juares, who accepted without question Herr's cerebral ascendancy, was the instrument through which the latter for many years exercised the intellectual leadership of the Socialist party in France. With the assassination of Juares in 1914, Herr found himself disarmed. The party remained without a predominant leader until the rise of Leon Blum, who did not enter Parliament until 1919. Herr lived to see the disruption of the party at Tours in 1920 and Blum's emergence as president of the French Section of the Second International; he beheld the patient, laborious beginnings of his disciple's service as leader of the opposition in the Chamber of Deputies. But Blum did not really become a national and human figure until members of a royalist funeral cortege, about a year ago, recognized him in a passing motor, swarmed upon the vehicle, slashed his throat and left him for dead. This ill-judged attack, in the opinion of many, was a principal element in the victory of the Popular Front.

There is space merely to hint at the multifarious labors which in the end undermined even so herculean a constitution as Lucien Herr's. For ten years he was secretary to the editor of "La Revue de Paris," and introduced to the public such persons of genius as Romain Rolland, Georges de Porto-Riche and the Countess de Noailles. He was one of the founders and editors of "l'Humanite," and gave it this name. Blum was its dramatic critic. For 22 years Herr served on the committee charged with a complete reorganization of the Ecole Normale. After the war he added to his duties as librarian those of director of the Museum of Pedagogy; having been reduced to poverty, he made countless translations for the publishing house of Hachette.

Died in 1926.

He never recovered from what he considered the tragic lapse from principle of which the Second International was guilty in 1914. It could have prevented the war, he held, by resorting to the general strike; instead, its various sections suffered themselves to be betrayed into nationalism by the military bureaus of their respective countries. His brother was killed by one of the shells with which the Germans bombarded Paris from a distance of 60 miles. In the winter of 1925 this titan, who had been until a year before a mountain climber of professional skill and daring, suddenly shrank into an invalid, supporting himself on a cane and lamenting that his whole being had become one pain. He died after an operation for cancer, leaving a widow and several children. His simple gravestone at Grosrouvre, near the forest of Rambouillet, bears, with becoming reticence, only this legend: "Lucien Herr, 1864-1926."

The masterpiece which was to crown his life, the idea of which had haunted him from early manhood—an exposition of the philosophy of Hegel—was never written. He was much too busy serving the interests of others to find time in which to carry out his own.

Victory Means Only Interlude in Spanish Struggle

everything to gain and nothing to lose by struggling.

Next to the nobility and clergy, the army was one of the dominating factors in Old Spain. Under the monarchy the army was not solely a military defense force. It was a social as well as political organization steeped in class tradition and sworn to defend the existing order, the church and the monarchy. Many of its regiments dated back to the days of Philip of Navarre, Ferdinand and Isabella and the Armada. Although the army of Old Spain collapsed after the Spanish-American War, it was rebuilt in the years that followed into a fairly modern military unit. Under Primo de Rivera, Gen. Damaso Berenguer and others, it formed the bulwark of the dictatorships which supported King Alfonso during his last decade in office. It was even able to survive the Moroccan scandals and the suicidal policy of King Alfonso in tearing up the Constitution and dissolving the Cortes, or parliament granted the nation by his assassinated father.

The republicans, who repeatedly refused to make their revolt against Alfonso a military coup, began seriously to undermine the army when they assumed power. Manuel Azana, now President, while Minister of War and Premier, shattered the hold of the old army clique. He retired 80 out of 162 "generals" over night. He made ability and loyalty to the republic pre-requisites to commissions rather than family tradition and political influence. That is why half the army today is officered by men who will die defending the Government and the Common Front. Had the present uprising been staved off another year, Spain would have had a "Red Army" to defend the revolution and the republic, instead of an army of radical privates and reactionary officers. If the Leftists eventually win, the army of Old Spain will be little more than a memory.

Democracy to Suffer.

As already pointed out, the political forces at odds today in Spain are liberalism and radicalism versus conservatism and reaction. No matter which side wins, democracy will eventually suffer. The monarchy is to all intents and purposes dead and can be revived only by accident and as a stop gap. If the Rightists and Leftists fight it out to exhaustion the monarchy may possibly be re-established, but if it is, its life will be short, because both Fascists and extremists would unite against it in time. The Spanish Fascists represent the landlords, big industry and the aristocracy; the church alone stands for the monarchy. The Clericals as a whole are royalists. They are distrusted by the Fascists, who want a dictatorship or conservative republic rather than a monarchy. The Reds hate them.

The Left—or Popular Front—is composed of Socialists, Communists, Syndicalists, Trade Unionists and Anarchists, with a considerable number of liberal republicans. They are united by one bond—their mutual hatred for capitalists and the Clericals. Otherwise the Marxists and the Communists have little in common, either with each other or with the Anarchists. A real coalition government for them is impossible.

One of the most serious aspects of the present disorders in Spain is the danger of international complications. The Italian Fascists and German Nazis are anxious to see a Fascist regime rise in Spain. There are indications aplenty that the Spanish rebels have received financial aid from Rome and Berlin. On the other hand the Moscow and Paris governments are sympathetic toward the Popular Front. Britain is outwardly neutral. English investors are heavily committed and for them a solid republican regime is the only hope. If the struggle is long drawn out (and rebel leaders admit Catalonia can hold out for months even if they take Madrid) the seeds of civil war may easily spread to other parts of Europe. Liberals all over the continent see more than a national struggle going on across the Pyrenees; they believe the outcome will sound the death-knell or renaissance of democratic institutions.

Across the frontier in France a serious political situation exists. The French people, following the lead of the Spanish masses, united in a Common Front to halt the onward rush of the French Fascists—the Croix de Feu and Young Nationalists. They installed a Popular Front regime and Leon Blum, Socialist premier, is in much the same position as are the Spanish socialists. Naturally the French Socialists and Communists are doing everything they can, legally, to help their comrades in Madrid. And French reactionaries are lending more than a helping hand to the Spanish rebels. If Spain goes Fascist it will be hard to hold back reaction in France; if Spain goes Communist it will likewise be hard to stem the rising Communist tide in France. In the last elections the Communists polled the second largest vote. In one way a Red regime in Spain would be welcomed by the French Foreign Office. It would strengthen their alliance with Soviet Russia against Germany and also increase French influence in the Italian-dominated Mediterranean. A Communist Spain would not be a neutral or pro-German Spain in the next war. In the last war Spain's uncertainty gave France plenty to worry about.

Land of Tomorrow.

Until recently Spain has been a land of "manana"—tomorrow, politically as well as in other ways. It was this habit of procrastination that caused the anti-monarchists to take 10 years to oust King Alfonso in their celebrated bloodless evolution. Then after they came into power they procrastinated. They promised much—redistribution of lands, social security, etc., but were slow in bringing the reforms to a head. They ousted the Church from politics but permitted the priests to sow dissension and intrigue against the Government. They granted freedom of the press, speech and assemblage without realizing that freedom often results in license.

The result has been that since 1931 Spain has been in a constant state of upheaval. Alfonso was overthrown in 1931 and in 1932 there was a counter revolt which started at Seville. It was easily suppressed and its leaders pardoned. In 1933 followed the first Left rebellion and five months later a second abortive revolt by the radicals. A third uprising in December 1933 brought the first repressive action by the Azana government, and so incensed the workers that they helped the Clericals oust the Socialists in the elections of 1934. In the fall of 1934 the Clericals repaid the dissident Socialists and Syndicalists by turning on them savagely in the Asturian uprising and shooting down thousands of miners and peasants. The slaughter shocked all elements in Spain and the Popular Front landslide last autumn was the inevitable consequence. Then came the present Rightist rebellion.

The present fight is unquestionably a showdown, but unless the Leftists win it will furnish no solution. Spaniards, politically, are not like either the Italians or the Germans. Sabotage, assassination and dynamite are weapons with which the Spanish Syndicalist and Anarchist are well schooled. They resemble, in that respect the Russian Nihilists. For some reason they have been easy-going and loath to resort to the executioners block in the past. But the ruthlessness of the reactionaries, fighting for their all, has built up a class hatred in Spain that oceans of blood will not wash out.

Maine's Quoddy Dream Fades

time and there was no longer any interest in schemes to produce added electric power on the scale of Quoddy, nor, for the time being, on any scale. That, according to local defenders of Quoddy, is the sole reason why big business dropped the project. The opposition has repeatedly said that the private power concerns abandoned the plan because it was found to be economically unsound. The fact remains that $400,000 of "power trust" money went into preliminary exploitation.

Advent of New Deal.

With the advent of the New Deal and the establishment of a works relief program, advocates of the Quoddy power plant immediately turned to Government for the realization of their dream. One is told here that sentiment in Maine was overwhelmingly in favor of the construction of Passamaquoddy as a work relief project. Returning from Russia in 1934 where he had been aiding in the construction of the great Dneiperstroy hydro-electric plant, Dexter Cooper indicated that he could obtain from the private power interests involved cession of their rights in the Quoddy project.

On May 28, 1935, President Roosevelt approved an allotment of $10,000,000 out of the $4,800,000,000 work relief fund to start construction of Quoddy. The total cost, the President indicated, would be about $30,000,000. Presumably the other $20,000,000 would come later out of work relief funds. Congress was not asked to authorize the project.

This, of course, was the first serious error, for it left the way wide open to political opponents. However, it was only the first of several ill-considered moves. It is apparent now that the development of the project was not clearly thought out.

Army Engineer Given Task.

The Army engineers were assigned the task of starting work on the big power development. In August a year ago they reported to the Power Commission that "an agreement had been reached concerning the terms" of the acquisition by the United States of the rights of Dexter P. Cooper, Inc. The Power Commission thereupon denied the application of Dexter P. Cooper, Inc., for a license and the way was clear for the Government to build Quoddy.

When the Army engineers were assigned to the job, under the direction of Col. Philip B. Fleming, as engineering officer, Cooper's amended plans, calling for the Haycock Harbor storage reservoir, were turned over to them. It was on the basis of this plan that the figure of $30,000,000 for the ultimate cost was given out at the time the $10,000,000 was allocated. This plan did not, of course, call for Canadian co-operation and it contemplated production of only a fraction of the 500,000 horsepower said to be available from the entire plant.

Analysis of the plan led Army engineers to the conclusion that it would cost not $30,000,000 but $60,000,000. Col. Fleming reported this fact to President Roosevelt. Finally the project was entirely revised and Army engineers decided on a working plan for a project to cost $37,000,000 which would develop 30,000 horsepower.

Problem of "Priming" High Tide Pool.

Since, of course, the new plan did not include construction of the Canadian low tide pool it had of necessity to include some means for "priming" the high tide pool that was to be built. The natural tidal flow would supply 30,000 horsepower for 10 hours out of the 24 but no business would be interested in power for only 10 hours a day and so some artificial aid had to be devised to keep the load to 30,000 units during the remaining 14 hours.

According to Capt. Donald J. Leehey, administrative officer in charge at Quoddy, who outlined the engineering phases to the writer, this might have been done several ways. It might have been done with a supplementary hydro-electric plant situated on one of Maine's turbulent mountain streams not too far distant from Quoddy. It might have been done through a co-operative agreement with a private power company which would supply the needed power at the essential times. It could be done by means of a storage reservoir and hydro-electric pump system such as Cooper had intended, but army engineers ruled this out as too costly. Or it could be done through construction of a supplementary Diesel power plant on the site of Quoddy and it was this method that was finally decided on.

Critics Take Immediate Advantage.

It became an immediate target for critics of the Quoddy project. The idea was absurd on the face of it, they said, the necessity of having to build a Diesel power plant up in the Maine woods to make Passamaquoddy feasible at all.

The change in plans gave critics still another opportunity. In building a 30,000-horsepower plant for $37,000,000, the Army's plan called for construction of the high tide pool to such a scale that it could be employed in conjunction with the low tide pool if and when the latter should be built. Therefore the cost was computed not on a basis of 30,000 horsepower, but on an ultimate basis of 500,000 horsepower. However, critics divided 30,000 into $37,000,000 and got a cost of well over $1000 per horsepower, which is very excessive. Republicans, and particularly Republican newspapers, were not slow to take advantage of these opportunities for attack.

In a similar way the economic phase of the project was confused at the outset. Cooper gave assurance that he had obtained guarantees from business firms which would establish plants in and around Eastport to absorb the 30,000 horsepower. That was the real objective of the scheme—to draw industry to a blighted area. But it was not clearly established before construction was begun what agency would sell the power and, if that agency was to be the Federal Government, how legal and constitutional difficulties would be overcome.

Congressman Brewster and Row.

President Roosevelt's advisers took the assurance of Representative Brewster of Maine that he could jam through Maine's Republican Legislature a measure creating a State power authority. The Federal Government would then delegate the task of operating Quoddy and selling the power to this State authority. It developed later that Brewster had no intention of working for such a measure and a nasty political row with charges and counter-charges followed.

Quoddy became increasingly a political target and a big, broad one. To the accompaniment of a fierce Republican attack, led by Senator Vandenburg of Michigan, Congress at the close of the last session denied the President the right to advance further relief funds to the Florida ship canal or to Quoddy, the former perhaps as conspicuous a white elephant as Passamaquoddy. Col. Fleming immediately began to close down the project. At the peak of operations last fall more than 5000 men were at work here. Today there are fewer than 1000 and the number is rapidly diminishing.

Shut-down Offends Engineers.

If the townspeople are unhappy over the fate of Quoddy, so are the Army engineers. They are disgruntled over what has happened for several reasons. First the Army engineers like to finish what they begin. Then they are angry over what Capt. Leehey says is the deliberate and "vicious" distortion of the engineering phases of the scheme. That touches the Army engineers in their pride and they have had from the beginning an unshakable conviction in the practicability of Quoddy from the engineering standpoint. They are annoyed, too, because the barrage of criticism has reflected on their ability as relief administrators.

"That has been our primary job," says Capt. Leehey. "People seem to forget that this was primarily a relief project. We took our workers off the relief roll and paid them the relief wage of $44 a month, minus $8.80 for food and lodging at cost. Consider it from the standpoint of the requirements the President laid down for expenditure of the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund.

"A project should employ a high proportion of labor. We absorbed 5000 men from the relief rolls. And incidentally the allotment to Quoddy was Maine's entire relief allotment, less in proportion to the number of unemployed than was granted to other states. Preferably it should produce something useful. Well, take just the vast file of blue prints and drawings and the results of our research here. I think on the score of usefulness this project will stack up against most others.

"It should come up to a total man cost per year of $1800. That had to be raised later to $2600 and they have been happy to get decent projects at $3000. At the end of a year we had used just short of 6,00,000 man-hours of labor at a man-year cost of $1534 which is phenomenally low. It defies comparison with any other big project."

Where $7,000,000 Has Gone.

While Capt. Leehey is too discreet an officer to suggest it, he implies a comparison between the Quoddy work-relief project and various kinds of leaf-raking and other so-called boondoggles which have been brought to light. In proof he offers the following rough balance sheet to show where the $7,000,000 spent at Quoddy has gone and what may be realized from it:

$1,500,000 in various kinds of equipment, which is being sold to other departments of the Government and shipped away; listed as "very liquid."

$2,500,000 in Quoddy Village, the laborers' barracks, warehouses, workshops, spur track, the hospital, etc.; listed as "semi-liquid."

$1,500,000 in actual field construction, including two medium-sized dams, one small dam and the purchase of all essential land; listed as "non-liquid."

To get back to the engineering phase, Capt. Leehey expresses again his firm conviction in the feasibility of the enttire project to produce 500,000 firm horsepower. The cost of the entire scheme, Capt. Leehey estimates at about $100,000,000, or $200 a horsepower. He pro-rates this cost as follows: $30 for the high-tide pool; $25 for the connecting dam and turbines, and $135 for the low-tide pool.

The citizens of this region are just as convinced today as they were a year ago that the entire project will be completed. When is another question. President Roosevelt told newspaper correspondents in the morning that work could not be resumed on Quoddy without the authorization of Congress. He added that he would discuss the possibility of Canadian co-operation on his trip to Quebec. That afternoon he gave to his anxious summer neighbors his broadly phrased message of hope. "We are going to have Quoddy." But he did not say how or when.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION 90 YEARS OLD TOMORROW

English Scientist Bequeathed His Fortune to U. S. Government to Found Organization.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8. — The Smithsonian Institution today took formal cognizance of its "birthday" on next Monday in a statement recalling that on Aug. 10, 1846, Congress provided for the establishment of an organization for "the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men."

Until an inconspicuous English scientist, James Smithson, bequeathed in 1829 his fortune to the United States Government for founding the organization, "pure science was almost exclusively a hobby of individuals," the Institution said.

Smithson was described by the Institution as the natural son of the Duke of Northumberland, a student of chemistry and mineralogy and a fellow in the Royal Society of Great Britain. His estate, when finally delivered to the United States, was valued at $550,000.

"With this," said the Smithsonian statement, "was set up the far the largest institution up to that time, devoted to the pursuit of pure science without regard to immediate and obvious utility."

In addition to the exhibits familiar to capital tourists, the Institution is the guardian of 800,000 volumes, pamphlets and charts of scientific research, and directs a bureau of ethnology, an astrophysical observatory, a gallery of art and the National Zoological Park.

"Bitter Sweet," Romance Of Yesteryear, at Opera

Noel Coward Work, Success of 1933 Season, to Be Repeated Tomorrow Night—Norma Terris to Make First Appearance.

NOEL COWARD'S nineteenth century operetta, "Bitter Sweet," which opened the 1933 season of Municipal Opera, will be brought back to Forest Park tomorrow night, as the tenth production this year. "A Connecticut Yankee" departs this evening.

Partaking of the undying devotion of Sari and Carl Linden, Norma Terris and William Hain will be seen in the leading roles, while Florenz Ames will portray the elderly Marquis of Shayne, companion of Sari's later years.

Miss Terris, noted stage prima donna, will be making her first St. Louis appearance. She is the original Magnolia of "Show Boat," which she was playing when Coward sought her unsuccessfully to create the part of Sari Linden for "Bitter Sweet" in London. Her stage career began with impersonations, at which she is adept, but she has been dancer, dramatic actress and leading lady in the movies, also. Her other New York musical shows were "A Night in Paris," "A Night in Spain," "Well of Romance" and "Be Yourself."

William Hain sang leading roles at Municipal Opera last summer. Since then he has been with the Chautauqua Opera Company in New York and the Los Angeles Civic Opera Company. For purposes of the record, his Broadway shows have been "The Dubarry," in which he was leading man for Grace Moore, and "Roberta," where he was the original Ladislaw.

Florenz Ames, character comedian and star of Municipal Opera in 1928 and 1929, has recently been in "First Lady," with Jane Cowl, and will return to the cast when the play reopens next month. Since he was in Forest Park last, he has played in "Silver Swan," "Who Cares," "Of Thee I Sing" and "Let 'Em Eat Cake," on Broadway, and went to Australia in 1934 to take the lead in George M. Cohan's "The Merry Malones."

THE remainder of the principals include Joseph Macaulay, who was the Marquis of Shayne in 1933, and will be the Austrian officer, Captain Lutte, this week; Dorothy Vernon as the mischievous French singer; Audrey Christie in dual appearance, as Gussie, a cafe entertainer, and later, Lady Devon; Zamah Cunningham as Mrs. Millick; June Havoc as Dolly Chamberlain; Earle MacVeigh as Lord Henry Jekyll; Al Downing as the Honorable Hugh Devon, Una Val, Inez Harvot and Sherry Kennett, who in private life is Mrs. Richard Berger, wife of the manager of productions at the opera.

Harriet Hoctor, completing a two-weeks' engagement, will present her own ballet creation, "Ballet Fantasie," with the 24 Municipal Opera girls, whom she has been rehearsing and directing for the past week.

"Bitter Sweet," it will be remembered, tells the love story of Sarah Millick and her music teacher, Carl Linden, who elope from London and go to Vienna, where they both become entertainers in a cafe. Captain Lutte's unwelcome attentions to the bride lead to a duel in which Carl is killed.

Loyal to his memory even when she becomes the great opera singer, Sari Linden, and the Marchioness of Shayne, Sarah is recounting the story of her life to a young woman of today, as the operetta opens. Scenes from the past retell her romance, with the final one returning to the present. Backgrounds are necessarily those of fashionable London and Vienna.

"Bitter Sweet," in book, lyrics and music is a one-man job, entirely the work of Noel Coward. His songs include "I'll See You Again," "What Is Love?" "Tokay," "Little Cafe," "If You Come With Me," "If Love Were All," "Kiss Me" and "Zigeuner."

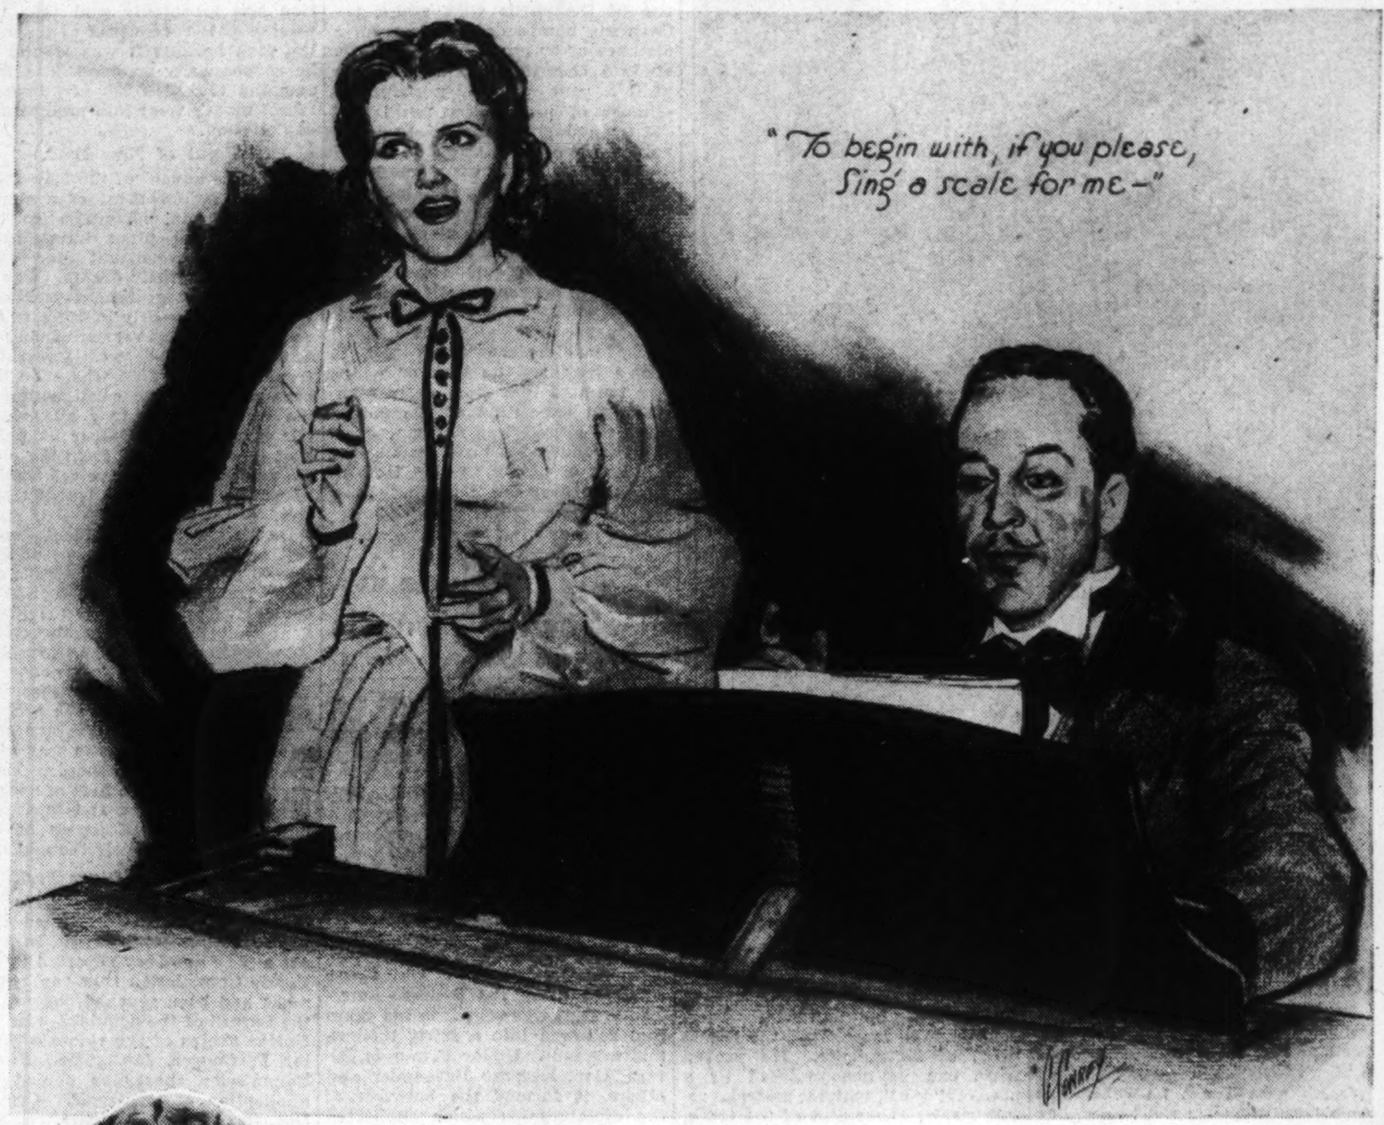
THE 1935 Municipal Opera production of "Bitter Eweet," with a total attendance of 62,000, still holds the record for opening weeks, although several 10-day opening runs, including that of "Kid Boots," obviously have surpassed it. Marion Claire and Allan Jones were the Sari and Carl Linden in 1933, with Leonard Ceeley as Capt. Lutte.

Presentation of "Bitter Sweet" here previously was the first in America away from the Ziegfeld Theater in New York. Since that time, the Shubert interests have held the rights, and included "Bitter Sweet" in the repertories of their various light opera ventures over the country. Late this spring the rights reverted to Coward again, and Municipal Opera, which had held an opening for an "unannounced" show during the tenth week, while it conducted negotiations, was able to get "Bitter Sweet" again.

Coward himself brought "Bitter Sweet" to this country on Nov. 5, 1929, after it had enjoyed unusual success in London. Evelyn Laye headed the cast. Ziegfeld was financially interested in the American production, and his stage director, Zeke Colvan, helped shape the show for this country. Colvan also directed the 1933 municipal Opera production, and is in charge this year.

Leaving the show safely in Colvan's hands, Laurence Schwab, producing director of the opera, flew to Hollywood last week to engage a composer and lyric writer for his new musical comedy, "Swing It, Susan," and to cast an eye around for Municipal Opera talent. His new show, incidentally, is about a Boston debutante who leaves her sheltered life to move with a faster set.

Following "Bitter Sweet," only two weeks of Municipal Opera remain. Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill," will open Monday night, Aug. 17, with Georgie Price, Gil Lamb, William Hain, Ruby Mercer, Audrey Christie and a new comedian, Jack Powell, in the cast. A week later, Miss Terris and Guy Robertson will take leading roles in the American premiere of Ivor Novello's "Glamorous Night."



"To begin with, if you please,
Sing a scale for me—"

A voice lesson from Noel Coward's sentimentally lovely "Bitter Sweet," with Norma Terris and William Hain, Municipal Opera.

Broadway Takes Notice of Election Year in Fall Shows

POLITICAL activity of the year will be reflected on Broadway by several new plays, some satirical, but none taking the electoral excitement as lightly as did "Of Thee I Sing." Partisan feeling runs too high for that, the theater managers think.

Definitely advertised as "a satire about politics," however, a new work called "Left Turn," by Jean Burton and William DuBois, will go into the career of Upton Sinclair, author who left the Socialist movement to found his "Epic" plan in California.

"The Lonely Man," by Howard Koch, will be a political fantasy detailing the futile efforts of a young professor in a Kentucky college to aid striking coal miners. "Lend Me Your Ears" is a comedy of politics in a small Connecticut town.

Considering the international field, Sidney Kingsley's play, "Ten Million Ghosts" will present a leading career along the lines of Sir Basil Zaharoff, munitions king. "Without a Crown" is supposed to deal with a turning point in the career of Mustapha Kemal, Turkish dictator, and "Storm In a Teacup" appropriately has a background of Scottish politics.

Louise Beavers Gets Big Role.

Louise Beavers will play her first important role in two years when "Toinette's Philip," starring young Bobby Breen, goes into production. Miss Beavers, who appeared in person at the Missouri Theater last winter, was the Negro mother in "Imitation of Life." Before that, she had been busy in films in maid and "mammy" bits, but the part in "Imitation of Life" was of such magnitude that directors refused afterward to cast her in minor roles. "Toinette's Philip" gives her another major opportunity.

Bing Crosby Is Crowded Close By Newcomers

Bob Burns and Martha Raye Are Real "Finds" In "Rhythm on the Range"

By Colvin McPherson.

IN the week's examples of young people riding across country in box cars, making merry at race and rodeo, flourishing firearms and defying law and order generally, there is ample evidence, by way of the screen, that the state of the nation has not changed. The moral fiber is not shaken, nor the soul stirred, by Hollywood this week.

Bing Crosby, in "Rhythm On the Range," at the Fox, rides on ahead of the rest. The slight circumstance of his adventures have to do with bringing a prize bull back West from New York, and with Frances Farmer, a runaway heiress, who beds down in the same car. Bing wins her affections, you may be sure, and after pouting a little while, can be persuaded to accept her fortune, but that's not what makes "Rhythm On the Range" very good entertainment. Bing rustles up a fine bunch of cowboy songs, and in one, "I'm An Old Cowhand From the Rio Grande," does some dandy comedy work, which is his forte, as "Anything Goes" so plainly demonstrated. The genuine importance of "Rhythm On the Range" comes from the fact that it starts two new comedians on very promising careers. Bob Burns, former citizen of Van Buren, Ark., and attraction on Bing's radio programs, does not need an introduction. His work on the screen is as inimitable as over the air. The other newcomer is Martha Raye, a kind of female Bert Lahr, with post-graduate work in the school of Cab Calloway gyrations. Fitted by nature with a dental sample case instead of a mouth, she is a virtuoso in the art of "mugging" or making faces. She is the only woman you have ever seen who does a funny drunk act and even when as sober as the people on stamps, excites a proper amount of laughter. In other words, she is completely delightful. And while futures are being made, Miss Farmer herself gets in a few heavy licks. The young lady has more than just another pretty countenance for the cameras.

Bing Crosby, relaxing from "Rhythm on the Range," at the Fox.

Need we make note of the fact, then, that there is a second film, entitled "36 Hours to Kill"? Brian Donlevy, G-man, gets on a train out West and follows a Public Enemy East. Gloria Stuart, fugitive from a subpena, becomes the object of his non-professional moments. The best part of the show is Stepin Fechit, as Pullman porter.

The Return of Sophie Lang.

ABOUT two years ago, a picture called "The Notorious Sophie Lang," played a day or two at the Ambassador, which then closed temporarily, leaving Sophie to wend her way to the neighborhoods. She is back now at the Orpheum, thoroughly reformed from her jewel-snatching past, and with no other interest than making herself a companion to a wealthy lady of advanced years. But one's past has a way of troubling one, if you know what I mean. Sophie (Gertrude Michael) is recognized by Max Bernard (Sir Guy Standing) and when Max steals the Krueger diamond from Sophie's friend (Elizabeth Patterson), Sophie has to play a lone game in getting it back. To whom can a little girl turn, in such trouble, except a newspaper man? Ray Milland is the journalist, and since there's a wife in it for him, is glad to give aid. Second position at the Orpheum goes to "The Last Outlaw," about a desperado of the days-when who comes out of prison to find everything changed. He hasn't seen any movies, therefore no really up-to-date criminals. But when the time comes, the ex-pestilence of the Southwest, Harry Carey, knows how to help the undersheriff (new name for "under-dog") capture the culprits and the glory. Patrons should stay through it, anyway, and see the Dionne Quintuplets in the news-reel.

There's Always Tomorrow.

THE recall of "There's Always Tomorrow" at the Ambassador represents one of the most unworthy uses of the revival idea. A medium grade picture of 1934, "There's Always Tomorrow" tells how Frank Morgan strayed from home and how his film children discovered his little playmate, Binnie Barnes, and did a loyal lot of covering-up from mama, Lois Wilson. It's a film not without a good deal of wholesome comedy. It is not for comedy, however, that "There's Always Tomorrow" is revived, but because it has in it that shining gem of 1936, Robert Taylor. He is oldest of the five Morgan brats. That he is big box-office today is undeniable. The public will see him in anything and will have him soon with Barbara Stanwyck, Joan Crawford and Greta Garbo, and maybe with pickle and onion. In return for their tickets, his following sees him in "There's Always Tomorrow" as a rather stiff-necked young man who tosses his hat onto the hall tree, hugs a little girl on the front porch, gets righteous over dad's conduct and surly from then on, but never helps fix the furnace. For his fans, therefore, "There's Always Tomorrow" will be disappointing. It is an early stage of a developing star which may well be forgotten. "Spendthrift," the new picture at the Ambassador, is about one of those wealthy young men who have speedboats, polo ponies and a big estate, but no ready cash. And in order for Henry Fonda to clasp Pat Paterson to his manly bosom finally and sincerely, he has to have a world of trouble, mainly Mary Brian as wife. The juggling of accents in "Spendthrift" is unusual. Miss Brian, a Texas gal in real life, goes thickly Kentuckian; Miss Paterson, as British as Basil Rathbone, becomes Irish, and Fonda, a drawling Nebraskan, goes in for radio sports announcing. Of interest in "Spendthrift" is June Brewster, as a sharp-tongued young society girl.

Jean Harlow pictures usually get two weeks at Loew's and "Suzy" is no exception. From a novel of a few years back, "Suzy" describes an American chorus girl who marries two men in wartime, gets mixed up with spies and finally has only Franchot Tone and widow's weeds left. Dorothy Parker, to whom many witty things are ascribed, had a hand in writing the screen play. Whether for her part or not, "Suzy" is heartily amusing and often exciting.

Eight Songs for Jessie Matthews.

Jessie Matthews will sing eight songs in her new film, which has gone into production as "Paris Love Song." Music and lyrics were written by the teams of Gordon and Revel.

Tips for Tourists On Names of Players

Now that summer visitors are descending in droves on Hollywood, some of the stars with names difficult to pronounce are having a hard time recognizing themselves. Adolphe Menjou is one of the chief sufferers. He hears himself called "Mr. Menjon" or "Mr. Mun-joo", when his own choice is "A-dolf", with a short "a" like the one in bat, and "Mon-joo."

ZaSu Pitts calls herself "Zay-Zoo", Claudette Colbert is "Cloh-det Colebare", Don Ameche's last name is "Ah-mee-chee", with the second syllable accented. Simone Simon, new French actress, is "See-moan" twice, with accent on "moan". Ann Dvorak accepts "Div-or-ak", with the "D" and "v" sounded almost together. Franchot Tone is "Fran-choh", John Qualen is "Kwah-len" and Paul Muni "Mew-nee". Hardest of all is the name of Sonja Henie, skating champion, who recently signed a movie contract. The first part is "Soh-nee-ya" and the last "Hen-nee", like penny, if you have one.

Tenth Anniversary Of Talking Pictures

The tenth anniversary of talking pictures was noted by Hollywood last Friday, even if the studios were too busy to celebrate. The first "talkie" was a short subject. An audience in a New York City theater on Aug. 7, 1926, saw Will Hays, "czar" of the film industry, move his lips on the screen and heard sounds apparently coming from them. Then they saw John Barrymore in "Don Juan," and heard a symphonic musical background.

Developments came swiftly after the first showings. In 1927 came "The Jazz Singer," in which Al Jolson sang a great deal, and spoke six words of dialogue. The first all-talking picture, "The Lights of New York," followed in 1928, and from then on, the talkie era was in full swing.

New Film Star Is Made By 28 Years' Training

A Glance Through Frank McHugh's Scrapbook Shows That Comedian Is Only Receiving the Reward of Hard Work.

By H. H. Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 8.

THIS picture business is a funny game. Take, the making of star, for instance. Sometimes they just happen over night. Mor often stardom comes after years of plodding along until a par which catches the eyes of the fans marks the turning point. Now here's this fellow Frank McHugh who is just about to burst into th bright lights with "Three Men On a Horse."

Frank McHugh's scrapbooks are dusty from lack of use but can, on occasion, be persuaded to bring them out and thumb throug the not too neatly kept pages.

Frank is 37 years old and he has spent 28 of those 37 year in stage and screen work, yet in spite of this he is perhaps the leas "actorish" actor in Hollywood today. His scrapbooks show this. N place in them has his own name been underlined.

This is the eighth wonder of the movie world.

"I've always intended to fix them up," he explains by way apology, "but somehow I never seem to get the time—or the energy

"Besides," he adds, sheepishly, "I didn't have to underline th good notices because there is nothing else in these books. I thre all the poor ones away, years ago. All but one."

He made a rapid search through three volumes of clippings, pic tures and theatrical announcements and found the one poor notice h has saved. It was the report of a Washington, D. C., critic ha written following the opening of the play "Princess April" in th Belasco theater in the capital city. It said unkind things about th production in a rather pleasant way and ended with the line, "O To be in England, now that 'April's' here!"

"He didn't like it," grins McHug

The discovery of this review l the actor on to other items he r members with particular interes One was a clipping from a Waterbury (Conn.) newspaper which announced, in headlines, "Whol Town of Waterbury Regrets Departure of McHugh."

"I got a friend of mine to put in," explains Frank. "He worke on the newspaper and we we great friends. Near the end of first season I played in stock Waterbury, I began to be worrie because the management hadn't o fered me a job the next year. M friend fixed up the story."

"Did it work?"

McHugh turned the page an pointed to a second clipping whic was headed, "Frank McHugh Wi Be Back."

"It did," he said.

ONE printed notice, meant to b posted as an insert into a Lo don theater program, occupies place of honor in the third scra book. It reads: "Notice, Owing the sudden indisposition of M James Gleason, the part of H. "Hap" Hurley will be played at th performance by Frank McHu Apollo Theater."

"That was pasted to programs e ery night for 12 weeks" explain Frank. "Jimmy Gleason was ha ing appendicitis at the time. Late when Bob Armstrong was marrie and went away on his honeymoo I played his part. I was a gener understudy and I staged the show

Another early clipping, glued in the scrapbook years after it w first printed, discloses the fact th Frank played the role of Mary Mc gan in "Ten Nights in a Bar-roo She was the liittle girl who ca nightly to get her drunken fath to "come home with me now."

As a boy, Frank also pla Topsy in a "Tom Show," but th wasn't his first appearance blackface. When he was six, he d an imitation in vaudeville of th late Bert Williams, singing a so called "Oysters and Clams", something like that. He's neve really been out of the theater sinc unless you can call moving ov into pictures getting out.

He came into pictures 'way bac in 1928, along with the early talki And he's been at it from then o Made a lot of hits, too, as a com dian, but not until now, with th film version of "Three Men on Horse," has he stepped into sta dom.

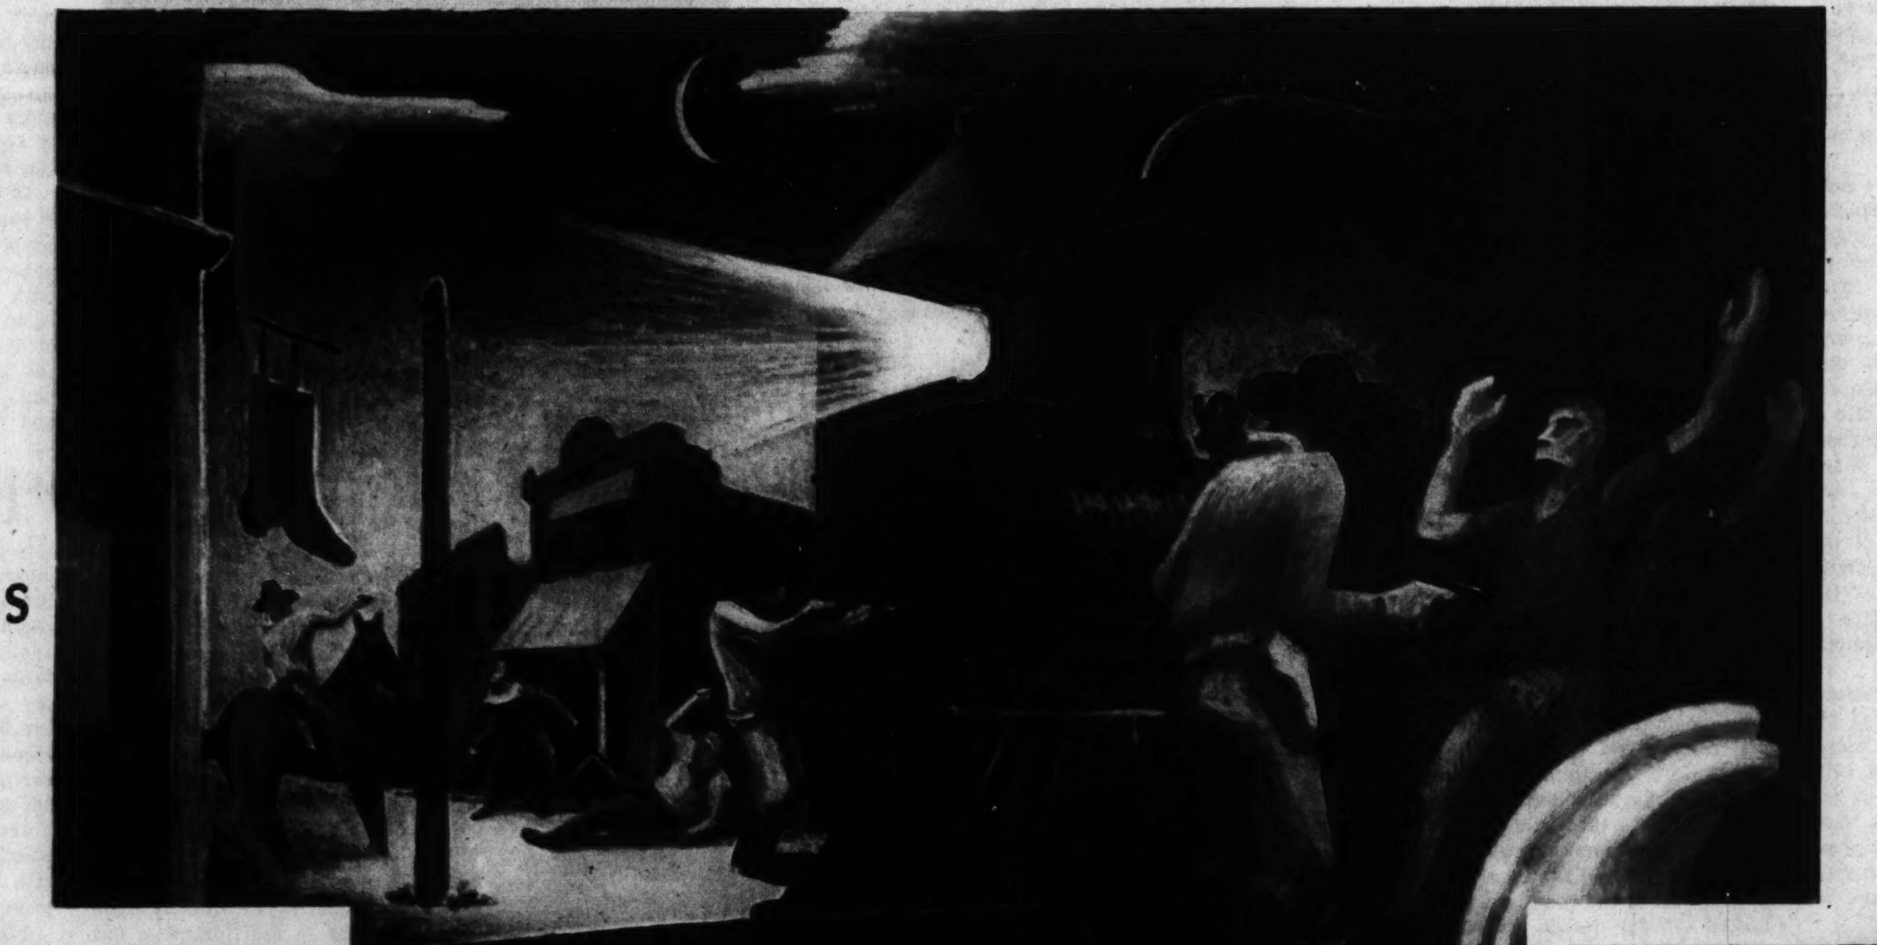
A rough color sketch of what will be the fourth main panel in the mural which begins with agricultural life, carries through a rural courtroom scene, and starts off the story of modern industrial life with a representation of lead and zinc mining.

Thomas Hart Benton Paints Missouri's History

Vivid Episodes From a Panorama for the Lounge in the House of Representatives at Jefferson City.



Jesse and Frank James rob a bank and hold up a train—one of three representations of Missouri legends, or charcters who have become legendary, incorporated in the mural.

Clay model for a.panel: The beer industry, shoe workers, a typist. The small panel represents the rich dining in a cabaret.

THE way Thomas Hart Benton happened to be commissioned to paint murals in the House Lounge of the Missouri Capitol in Jefferson City was this: A bunch of politicians were sitting around in a hotel room there. Benton was raised on political shop talk and knew some of the men. That is how he came to be there. But his pencil was busy, as it always is, sketching the scene. Such fragments of American life are the gist of his canvases.

Rangy, bald-headed, easy-going Senator Ed Barbour happened to notice him and strolled over, beer bottle in hand, to see what he was up to. Benton's drawing showed the Senator chatting with a lobbyist there, each gesturing with a bottle. Ed was tickled. There wasn't anything flattering about the sketch, but it was true, and he felt flattered when the famous painter said he intended to make a painting out of it: "A Western Senator and a Lobbyist." He began to tell all his friends in the Senate about it.

"Benton," he would say in his amiable Ozark drawl, "knows real Missourians. He's an honest-to-God Missourian himself. He's honest. Why he'd rather set in a store window and talk houn' dog stories an' drink whisky than do anything else." And that is how Ed persuaded them to appropprite $16,000 for a set of frescoes Benton is working on now.

The reproductions on this page not only give a clue to the subject-matter of the murals, but give a remarkably clear idea of how this Missouri artist works. Aside from the two sketches in color, they represent clay models. Benton makes his original sketches from life, but in getting the composition for a mural he restores his subjects to the round and recovers something of the original perspective by use of models in high relief.

This painstaking method is in unexpected contrast to Benton's personality. He is a short, boisterous, shaggy man with an unruly mustache and scraggly black hair and a deep catchy chuckle. "Living here in America and being a common American I am moved to yell and whoop things up," he once said. "I like violent stimulation." Although unquestionably robust, his painting lacks the violence one would expect in it. Often it is somber and stylized. He is militantly nationalistic, as much so as the famous statesman for whom he is named. He is a great-nephew of Senator Benton, Missouri's first and one of her most rugged contributions to the Senate.

His father, whose portrait will appear in the forthcoming murals, was Congressman Maecenas E. Benton, a practical politician, who resented a son so effeminate as to want to paint. That was Benton's background—nine years of boyhood in Neosha, Missouri, then school in Washington, a job surveying in the Missouri lead belt and another as cartoonist for a Joplin

SCIENCE SAYS AMERICAN CLIMATE IS NOT CHANGING

J. B. Kincer

THREE devastating drouths in the United States in the last seven years have brought, along with appalling ruin and misery, a growing fear. To many people the grim phenomena of barren, sun-blistered fields, starving livestock, hot, dust-laden winds, mean not only present disaster, but future doom. They believe the succession of rainless, sunbaked summers is definite evidence that the American climate is changing, and that the change is turning the great agricultural West into a desert. When this fear finds its way into print, it is sometimes illustrated by such fanciful pictures as that of a camel caravan wending its way across a sandy desolation that once was a wheat field—journeying, possibly, between Amarillo, Texas, and Huron, South Dakota, or between Omaha and Cheyenne.

It is a pretty effective cure for such forebodings to talk with J. B. Kincer. He doesn't take any stock in them. And he may properly be considered an authority on American climate. Kincer is principal meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau and chief of its Division of Climate and Crop Weather, a man of more than 30 years' service with the bureau. He is also president of the American Meteorological Society, a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, a member of other scientific bodies, author of the climatic section of the Atlas of American Agriculture, and editor of the weekly crop and weather bulletins issued by the Department of Agriculture.

"The climate of the United States," Kincer says, "doesn't seem to be undergoing any fundamental change. These drouths of 1930, 1934 and 1936 merely represent a dry phase of our normal climate. We're having a 'family' of drouths. We have had these periods of drouth—several drouth years close together—before, and we can expect to have them again."

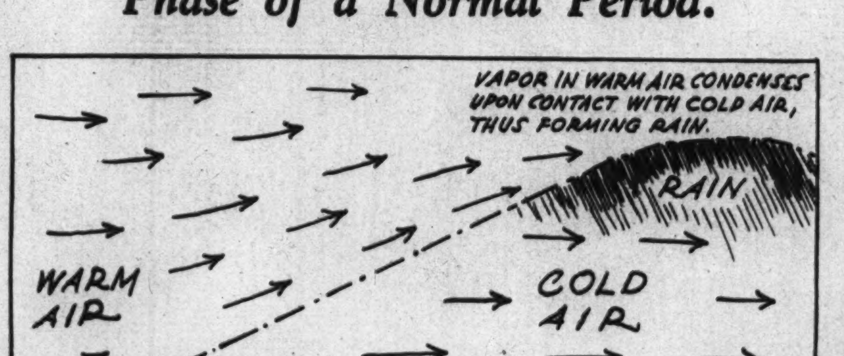
Weather records show that a "minimum phase of precipitation" similar to the present one occurred late in the nineteenth century. Beginning in 1886, there was widespread deficiency of moisture until 1895, although not every year in the period was extremely dry, 1892, for instance, having fairly abundant rainfall. As this dry period continued, many states accumulated a deficiency of moisture—that is, with each successive year of subnormal precipitation their need of moisture grew—and in 1894 and 1895 there were severe drouths, the culmination of the dry phase. The next year precipitation was more abundant. In 1897 there was insufficient moisture in the region between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains, but a few years later, after the turn of the century, a wet phase of climate was under way.

In that 1894 drouth Iowa was probably the hardest hit of the states. Its precipitation was 10 inches less than normal, a disastrous deficiency because of the previous dry years. Missouri that year had 6.1 inches less precipitation than normal; Illinois, 8.3 inches less; Nebraska, 8.8; Oklahoma, 7.8; South Dakota, 7.6; North Dakota, oddly enough, had .2 of an inch more than normal, and Arkansas, .9 of an inch.

The Department of Agriculture's records of average pasture conditions on August 1 during that dry period are significant. Whereas the condition for the United States as a whole had been placed at 100.2 in 1877, in 1886 it was 80.7 and in 1887, 73.8. Somewhat better conditions were reported for several years following, but in 1894 the figure was down to 66 and in 1895, to 77.8. Missouri pastures, whose August 1 condition had been rated 111 in 1877, were down to 75 in 1886, to 73 in 1887, and to 64 in 1890 and 1894.

Weather men think there was another general dry phase, similar to the present one and that of 1886-95, in the 1830s. Precipitation records are scarce for that time, but the few available indicate a succession of about 10 years of subnormal rainfall. These dry years were not the same, however, in all parts of the country. At Washington the dry decade seems to have ended in 1831, while the records at St. Paul, Minnesota—which go back more than 100 years—show a minimum precipitation phase ended with 1848.

J. B. Kincer, Chief Meteorologist of the United States Weather Bureau, Quotes the Record to Show That the Present Drouth Is Just a Dry Phase of a Normal Period.



VAPOR IN WARM AIR CONDENSES UPON CONTACT WITH COLD AIR, THUS FORMING RAIN.
RAIN
COLD AIR

Simplified diagram of how rain results from the interaction of two air masses, one warm and light, the other dense and comparatively cold. The warm air flows up the side of the cold air mass, and as it rises, cools until its water vapor condenses and falls as rain.

IN ST. LOUIS, where the weather records go back to 1837, the precipitation that year and in 1838 was far below normal; in 1837 the rainfall was 27.01 inches and in 1838, 31.51, against a normal (up to 1930) of 39.55. (It may be well to explain that "rainfall" as here used is meant to include snow; in measuring precipitation, an inch of snow is figured as the equivalent of one-tenth of an inch of rain).

Tree rings in Eastern Oregon also provide evidence of a long drouthy spell about a century ago. The rings marking the growth of trees in those years are narrow, indicating scanty moisture. There are indications, too, in tree-ring records in the Northwest, that that part of the country, at least, experienced a major minimum precipitation phase somewhere between 1755 and 1780.

There have been, of course, a good many "transitory" drouths, which last only a short time and affect limited areas. The Southwest and some of the interior valleys felt such a drouth in 1901. In 1910 there was drouth in the North, the South and Central States. The Southwest and Northern Plains were abnormally dry in 1917, and in 1925 drouth visited the South and Southeast. These and similar drouths, however, have been but interruptions in periods of fairly normal or abundant rainfall. Weather records show that periods of more than normal rainfall have alternated with the periods of persistent drouth. From about 1865 to 1885, for example, there was what Kincer calls "the outstanding wet phase of the United States climate in the last century;" then came the drouth family of 1886-1895; then for the first two decades of the twentieth century, there was, in general, an abundance of moisture. The Government meteorologist sees no reason to doubt that the present drouthy period will be followed by one of above-normal precipitation.

"It is characteristic of precipitation records, in the long run," says Kincer, "to vary in wave-like progression; that is, when short-period fluctuations are smoothed there appear successive up and down trends, merging more or less regularly, one into another. These cover comparatively long periods of time, and trend alternately above and below normal.

"THAT sort of thing isn't confined to the plains of the United States, but is to be found in other parts of the world having similar climates. Compare the weather records of Warsaw, Poland, and St. Paul, Minnesota, which have comparable rainfall conditions and records going back for a century. They show very similar conditions as to characteristic trends and periodic deficiencies of precipitation, although the time phases do not coincide. Warsaw for the five years ending with 1826 had a deficiency of 23.9 inches; for the five years ending with 1896, a deficiency of 20.3 inches, and for the period ending with 1924, 18.9 inches. In St. Paul, five-year periods ending in the years stated had the following deficiencies: 1856, 25.9 inches; 1891, 21.6 inches, and 1934, 24.3 inches. And at Padua, Italy—which has, incidentally, the longest continuous weather record we know of, going back to 1745 — we find a long trend up to about 1800 of better than average rainfall, and then a long movement in the other direction, with rainfall largely below average until 1855.

"Apparently weather has been behaving in this way for a good many centuries. The Bible tells of years of plenty followed by successive years of famine because of aridity.

"The present deficiencies in rainfall in the central valley states, in general, began with June, 1933. But the trend in precipitation in the Northwest has been downward for about 25 years; this decline has centered in Minnesota, but covers the Northern Plains to the west, especially the Dakotas, and extends to the Western lake region on the east. When the present hot, dry phase will end we don't know. Dependable weather records don't go far enough back for us to tell whether the long-range weather trends have a predictable regularity of occurence."

What causes drouth? A deficiency of precipitation. What causes the deficiency? Failure of vapor-laden air to encounter conditions which make it drop its moisture to the earth. Why doesn't it encounter such conditions? Kincer says he doesn't know—and a reasonable inference from that is that no one knows. Weather is world-wide, and there is still a good deal of data to be gathered before all its behavior can be explained. But Kincer is fairly sure that the things man does or leaves undone have practically nothing to do with the kind of weather he gets—including drouths.

Not everybody agrees with the Weather Bureau's chief meterologist on this point. There have been from time to time, and still are, theories that human activities influence the weather. In the early part of this century, for example, large areas of western land were being planted with grain for the first time. It happened that those years were unusually wet. Many people hopefully asserted that the bountiful rainfall was due to cultivation of the land, and a slogan was evolved embodying this faith: "Rainfall follows the plow." The Weather Bureau insisted that the climate of the Great Plains had not changed; that there would be a swing away from the wet phase. In 1919 it included in a Monthly Weather Review a paper entitled "Cultivation Does Not Increase the Rainfall." Before long, of course, the precipitation decreased, fell below normal, eventually subsided into the current drouth phase.

Theories placing on man responsibility for the dry years of the 1930s have been numerous and some of them have been ridiculous. Kincer is willing to comment on two of the ideas—one, that extensive radio broadcasting has brought the dry weather, the other that the drainage of many small bodies of water is responsible.

As to the broadcasting notion, Kincer says: "It is definitely known that radio waves have no influence whatever on atmospheric conditions or on the temperature. Consequently, they could not affect condensation, the major factor in precipitation. Furthermore, radio broadcasting could scarcely account for the drouth of the nineties and earlier ones."

Of the drainage theory: "This idea is sponsored by a good many thinking people, and on its face it has some appearance of logic. It is argued that, with the destruction of thousands of square miles of water surface, there is obviously less moisture contributed to the atmosphere through evaporation, and, consequently, less to condense and precipitate as rain.

"BUT two fundamntals are necessary to produce rain: First, water must be gotten into the air through evaporation from moist surfaces and transpiration through the leaves of growing plants; second, the invisible water vapor thus applied must be condensed into liquid form as rain drops. The drainage theory overestimates the importance of the first phase of the problem. The second phase is by far the more important. There is nearly always enough moisture present in the air to produce rain in substantial amounts whenever the machinery of nature's rain factory is operating in a manner to cause sufficient condensation.

"Consider this evidence: In parts of Southwest Africa, even in coastal sections, the average rainfall is less than an inch a year, yet the adjoining Atlantic Ocean affords opportunity for a plentiful supply of atmospheric moisture. . . . Michigan is nearly surrounded by large bodies of water, while Indiana, adjoining, with less than one-half of one per cent of the total surface water, has an average of 30 per cent more rainfall. . . . In Western Arkansas, in 1934, April had above normal rainfall, but July had only .15 of an inch, or four per cent of normal. Yet July actually had 86 per cent more atmospheric moisture than April, as shown by the humidity records made by the Weather Bureau at Fort Smith. . . . One could cite such cases almost endlessly. They seem to me to establish, beyond doubt, the fact that the primary agency in producing rainfall is not local water surfaces, but rather the physical atmospheric operations through which the moisture present is condensed and made available as rainfall."

The actual creation of rain Kincer explains as follows: "The only effective method of producing rain is through the cooling of the air in volume and degree sufficient to extract from it a goodly portion of its water held in vapor form. Nature effects this cooling in a number of ways and

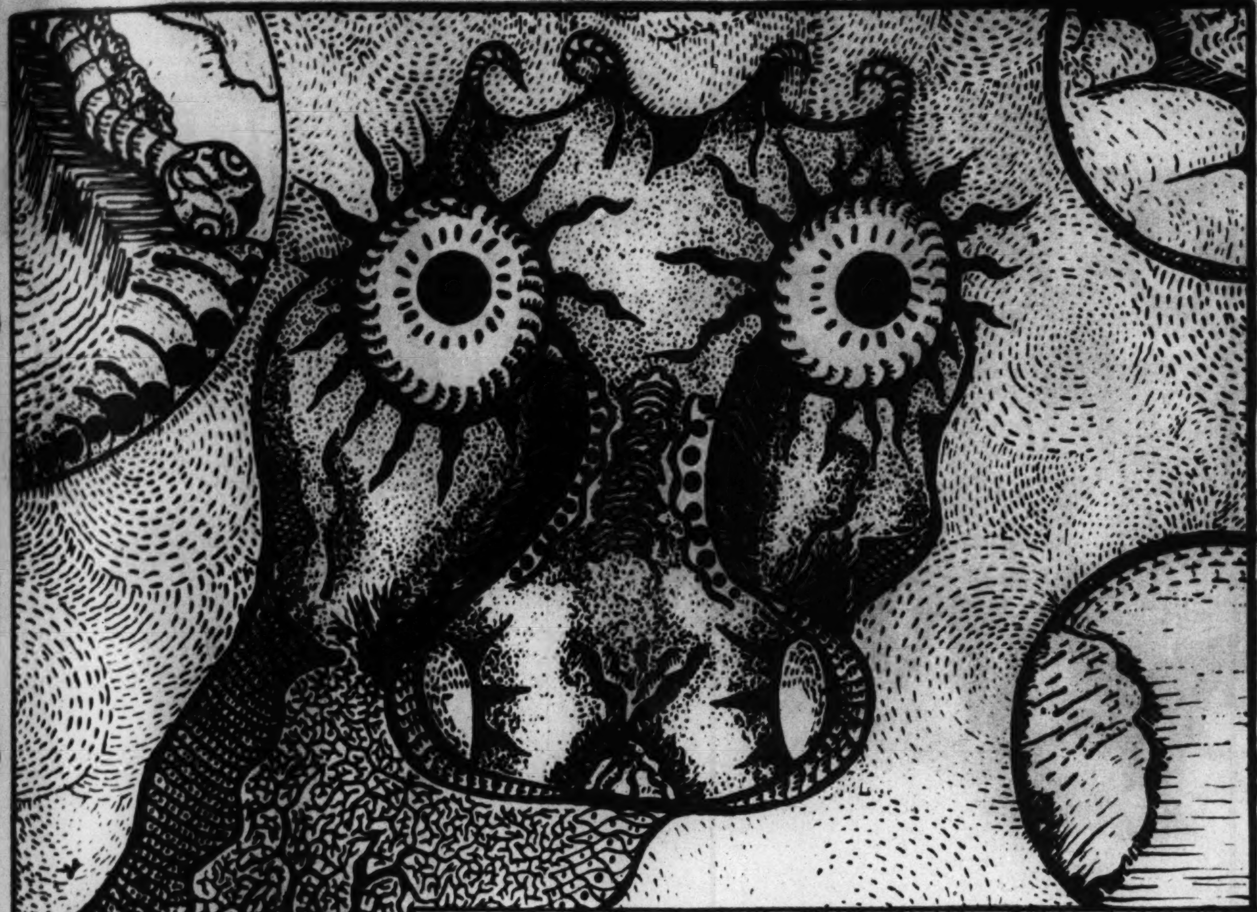
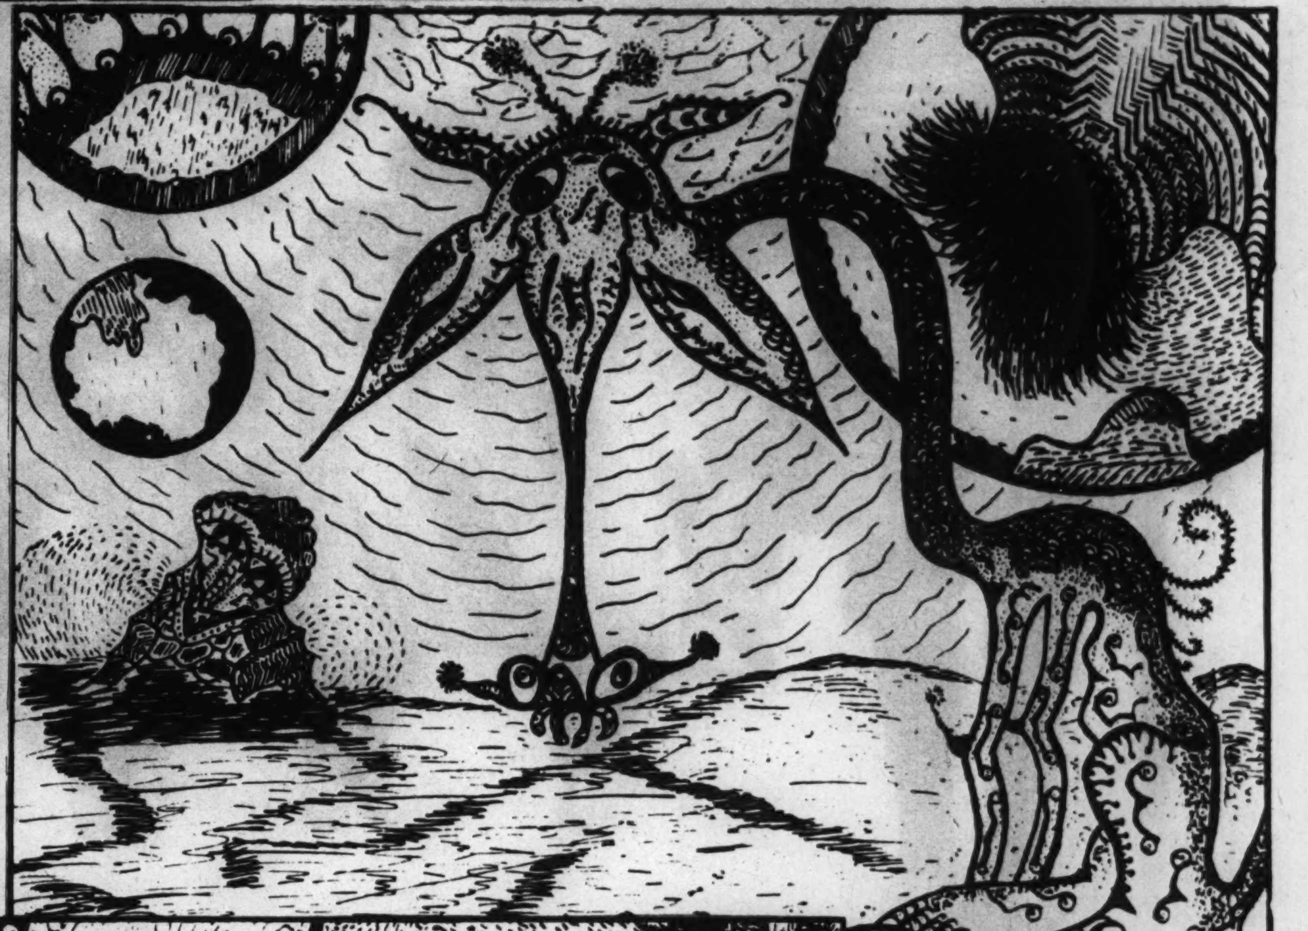
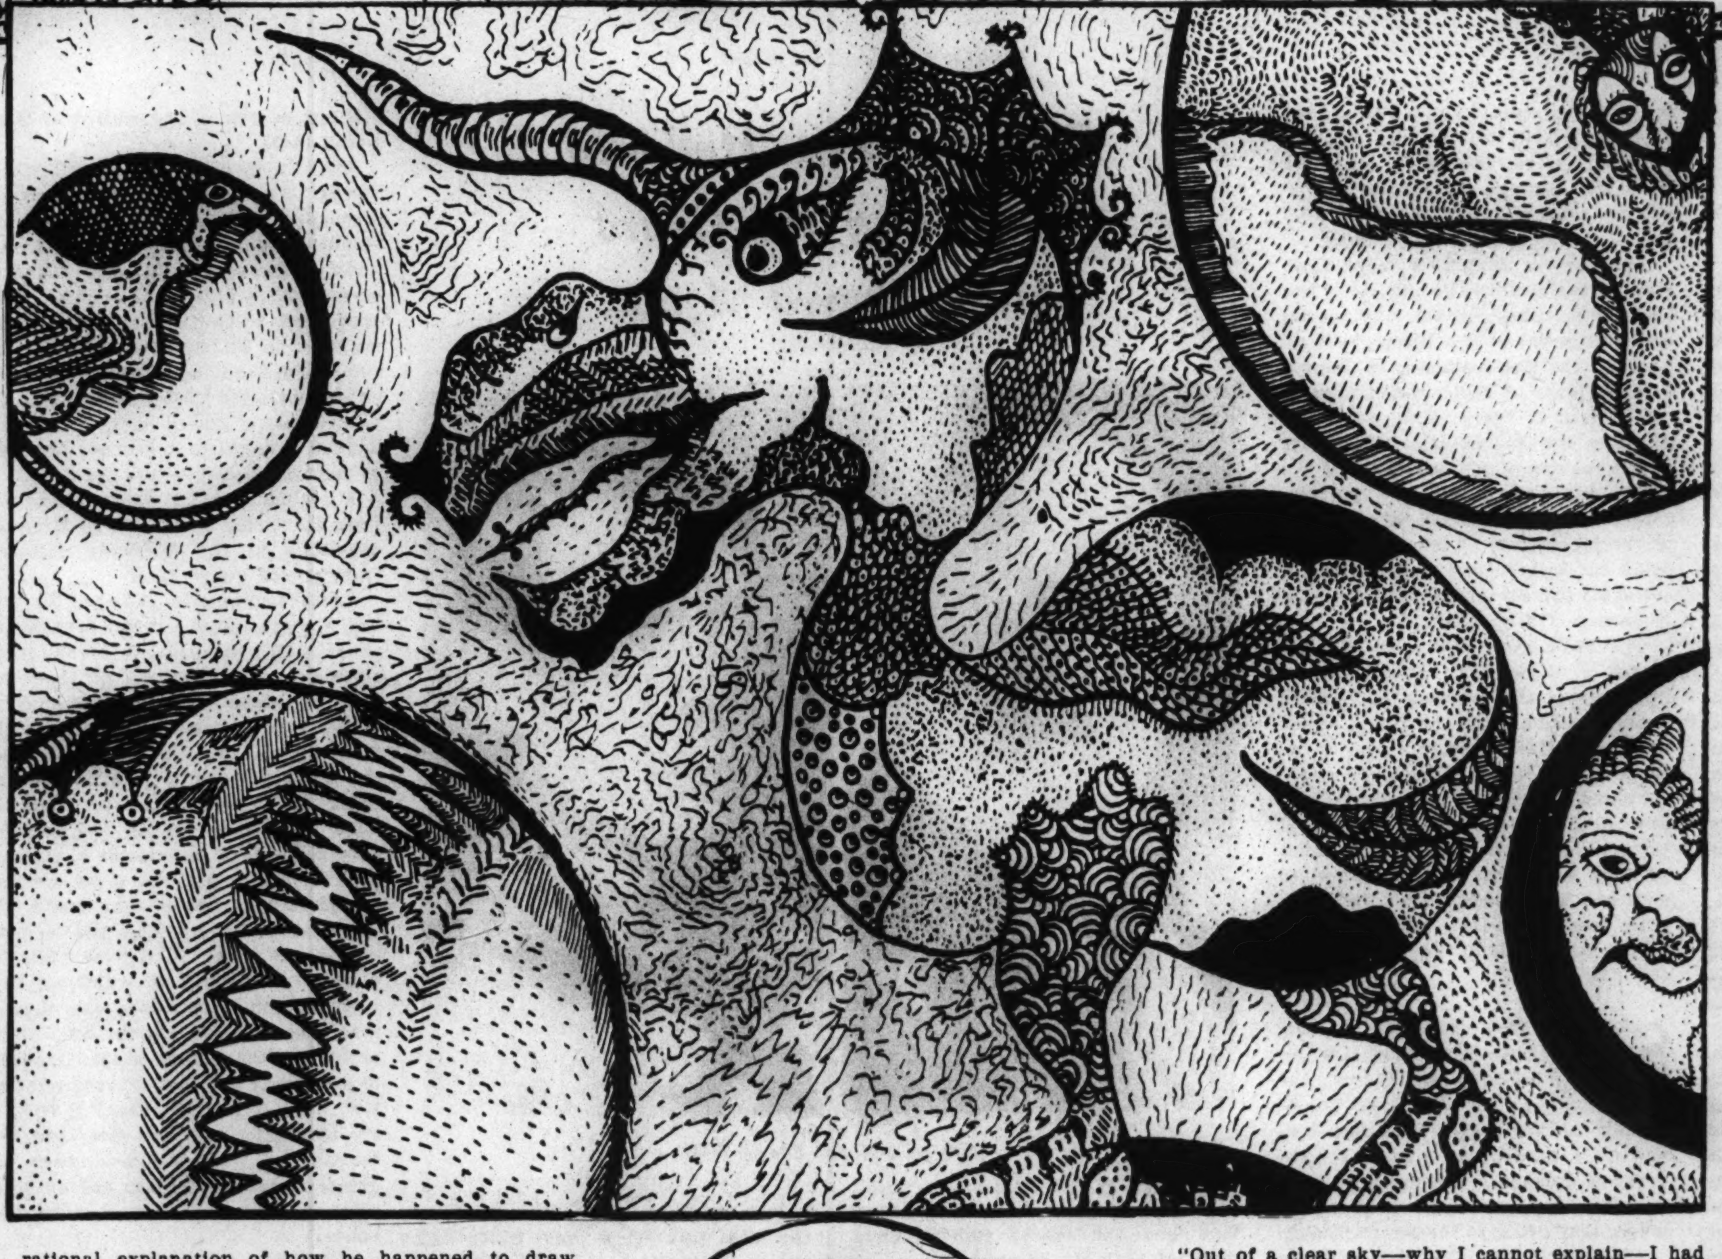
GROTESQUE DRAWINGS by a Man Who Had NEVER DRAWN Before

Lynwood M. Chace.

Lynwood M. Chace—Photographer and Naturalist Who Never Had an Art Lesson—Says His Hand Was Moved by an Unknown Power.







By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW BEDFORD, Massachusetts.

LYNWOOD M. CHACE'S normal occupation is that of photographer and naturalist. His studies, pictorial and verbal, of insect life have made him famous all over the world and his activities in connection with photography and natural history have filled most of his conscious moments. But recently Mr. Chace found himself engaged in a new and alien occupation. What made it all the more remarkable was the almost unconscious nature of this activity. For it so happened that without having planned anything of the sort and without having ever taken a lesson in drawing he sat down one day at his home on West street and started a series of pen-and-ink sketches. And having completed the series he dropped his pen and hasn't had the slightest inclination to make another drawing.

The subjects of these drawings were nothing that Mr. Chace had ever seen or ever thought of before though some of them, on closer inspection, did affect the observer with something of that cold horror that susceptible persons feel when they look at one Mr. Chace's enlarged photographs of a spider. They were monsters that combined the characteristics of mythological and prehistoric creatures with certain attributes taken from the more grotesque living creatures of today. And the execution of the drawings showed a very high degree of craftsmanship.

Mr. Chace says he has no explanation of the subjects and cannot give a rational explanation of how he happened to draw them. Nor can he explain the strange and sudden gift of draftmanship which he called into use.

"Out of a clear sky—why I cannot explain—I had an unaccountable urge to draw strange creatures," he says. "I had to do it even to the neglect of my photographic work. My hand was actually moved by an unknown power. I felt strange under this peculiar spell; my hand shaped creatures that astonished me. Never had I seen such creatures and never would I want to; but still some strange power forced me on.

"I grew tired at times, but was helpless under this spell. If I left to take a walk I was always drawn back. This continued until I had 24 of these unnamable and grotesque creatures completed. Then the spell left me.

"When I was my normal self again I was astonished at what I had created. My friends thought me crazy or thought that I had been drinking heavily. They could not grasp what I had done.

"WHAT puzzled them most was why, suddenly, I created these fantastic formations when for years they had known me as a nature photographer—and knew too that I had never taken an art lesson in my life. It is true that if I should try with all my ability to draw an ordinary animal such as a cat or a dog one wouldn't know what it was when I had finished.

"The fact is that I did not really draw these strange-looking creatures, but was urged and my hand guided by some unknown power over which I had no control. I worked at them day and night until this strange power left me."

Explanations offered by Mr. Chace's friends and others who saw the drawings extended all the way from classifying them as phenomena similar to that of automatic writing to the suggestion that Mr. Chace was perpetuating a pleasant little hoax.

But Mr. Chace waves all this aside. He sticks to his story of being possessed and moved by a power entirely outside of himself.

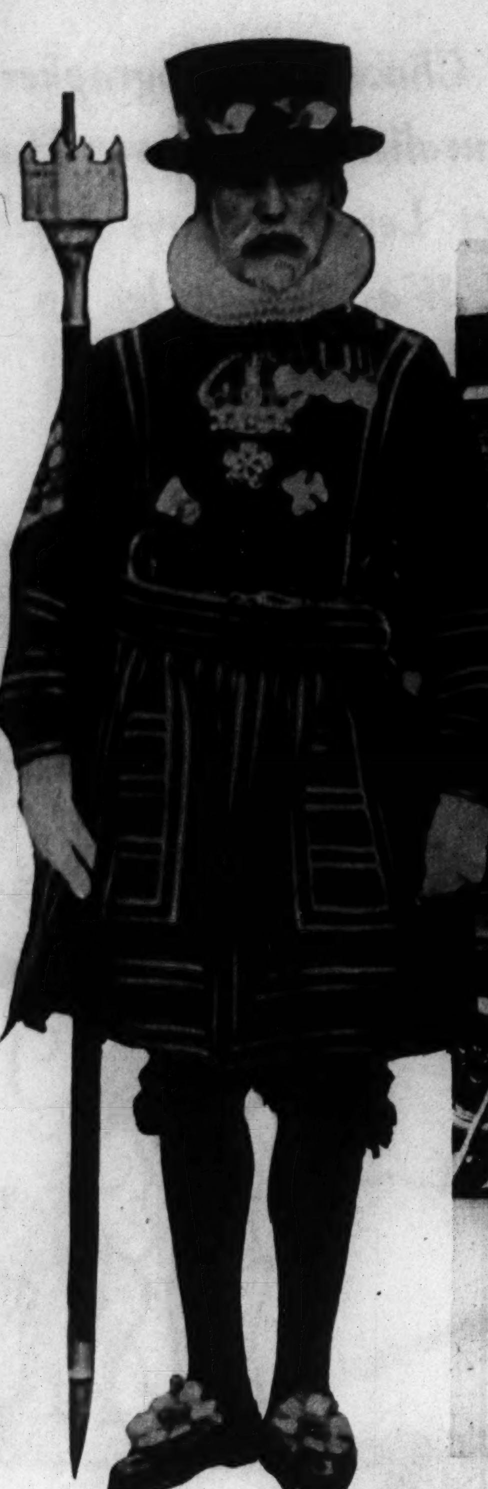
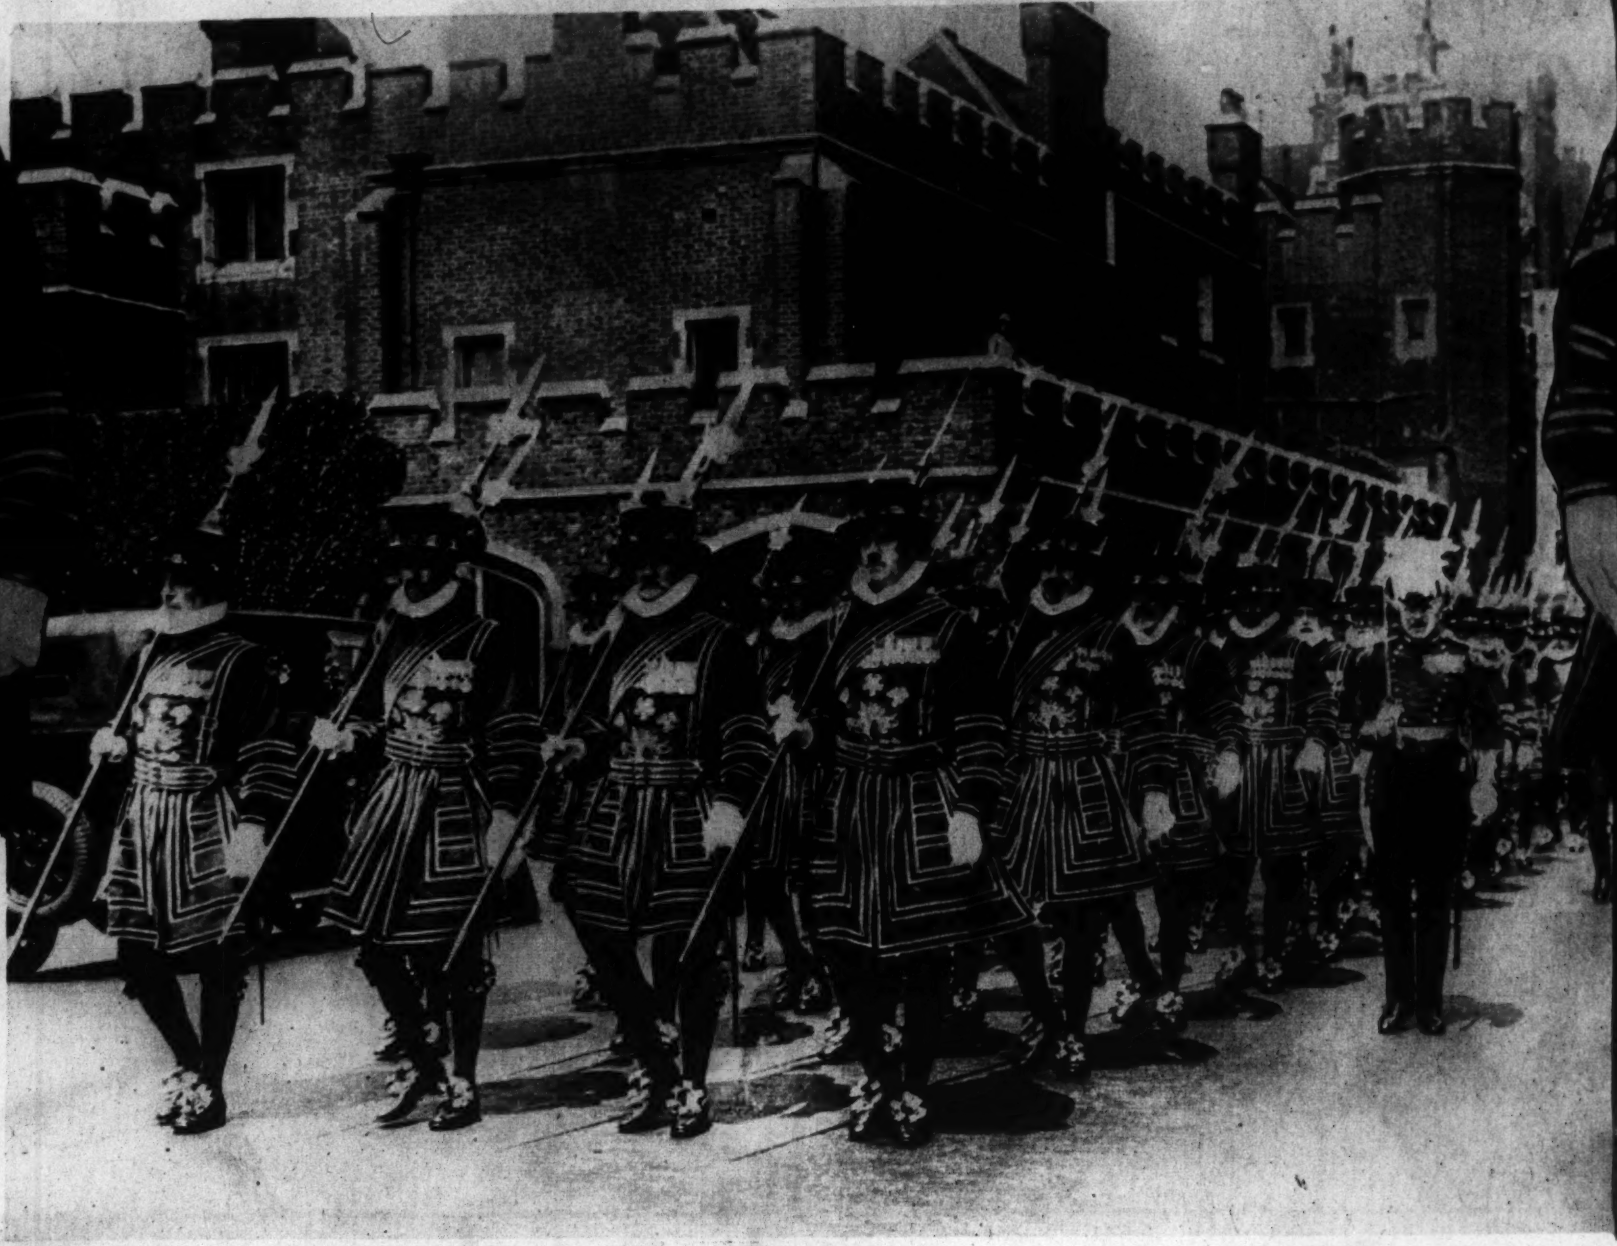
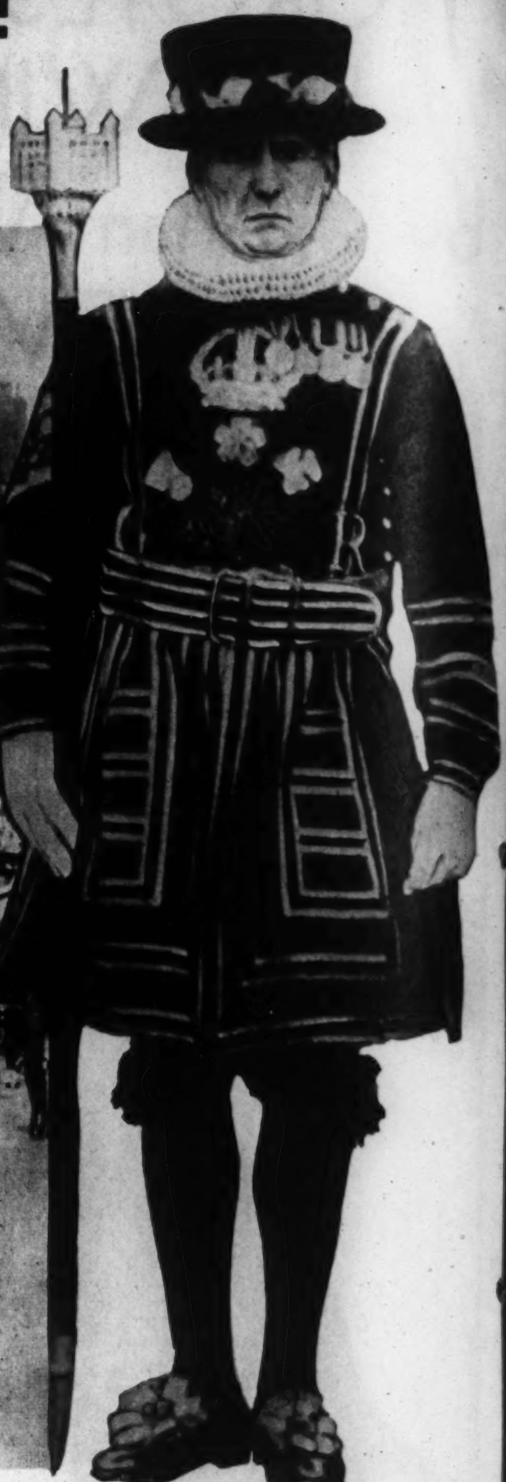
OFF with THEIR BEARDS! Said KING EDWARD VIII



Here he has a beard to please King Edward VII and King George V.



The Yeomen of the Guard.



Here he is smooth shaven in accordance with King Edward VIII's wishes.

Why the Time-Hallowed Yeomen of the Guard Have Shaved Again.

LONDON, England.

THERE was a little more scraping and clanging of steel on stone than usual in the guard room of Buckingham Palace a few days ago. The beards of the 100 portly gentlemen who compose the King's body guard of the Yeomen of the Guard were reflected for the last time in the gleaming blades of their eight-foot steel halberds that hark back 451 years to the days of Henry VII, founder of the Tudor dynasty.

A few of the more grizzled veterans remembered full-bearded army-trained King Edward VII who, frowning at the smooth shaven faces that he saw on his first inspection in 1901, ordered that henceforth all his yeomen should wear beard and mustache as did their sovereign. George V, the bearded sailor King who succeeded him in 1911, seemed pleased with their hirsute status during his 25-year reign. Then clean-shaven King Edward VIII made his first ceremonial visit to the yeomen last month.

Pink-cheeked and freshly shaven, he passed between the two ranks of the 100 men selected from among the distinguished veterans of the armed forces for the ceremonial office and pay that is regarded as a pension. At the conclusion, the captain of the yeomen remarked, "Your Majesty, the yeomen, all of whom are bearded, observed that Your Majesty is clean shaven."

King Edward smiled and replied graciously, "Tell your yeomen that they must also be clean shaven at my next inspection."

However, the yeomen will be quite distinguishable minus their beards, for their uniforms go back with but slight modification to the Tudor times. Royal red knee-length tunics with purple facings and stripes and gold lace ornaments, white ruffs, red knee breeches, red stockings, black flat hats, black buckle shoes, and red, white and blue rosettes at knee and ankle—such was the colorful regalia of the yeoman before the Spanish Armada was scattered and such it is today. The weapons consist of ceremonial sword and halberd with red and gold tassels.

It was the yeomen of the guard who seized Guy Fawkes in the cellars of the Houses of Parliament in 1603 and prevented him from carrying out the well-known "gun powder plot" that would have resulted in the deaths of King James I, the Lords and the Commons. From that time until the present the yeomen of the guard have searched for hidden explosives in the vaults below the Parliament Building before any Parliament assembled. Until the old Parliament Building burned in 1834 the search was a reality, the yeomen, guided by the dim light of their oil lamps, cautiously threading their way through the narrow underground passages, prodding every corner of the dark and musty vaults.

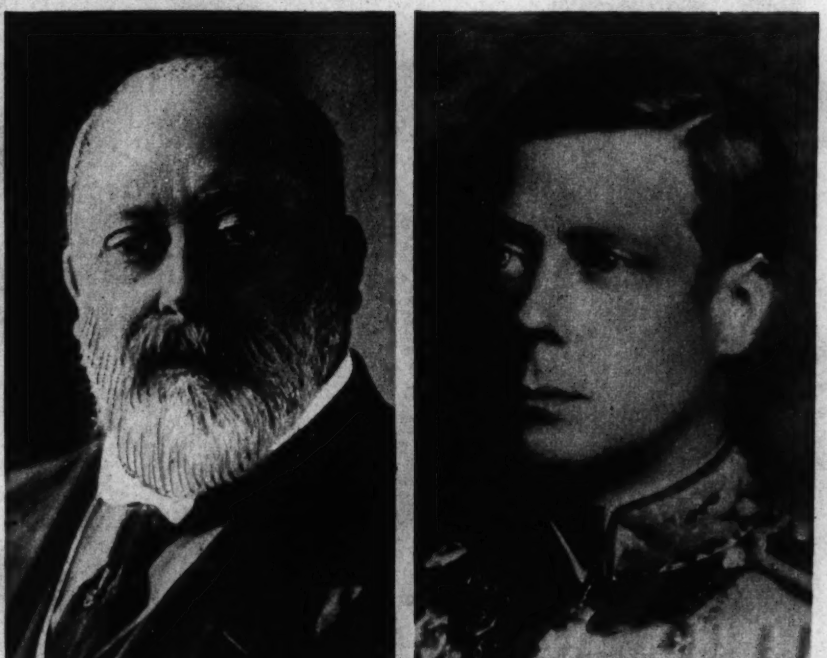
The present search, a mere ceremonial, begins with the officials of the Lord Great Chamberlain, the special detective police of the Houses of Parliament, the Commissioner or Deputy Commissioner of Police assembling in the Princes' or Peers' robing room and awaiting the coming of a detachment of the yeomen of the guard led by the junior Exon (corporal). On their arrival, the chief of police takes charge of the procession. Each yeoman lays aside his halberd and receives one of the same tiny oil lamps that were used in earnest 175 yars ago.

The Exon gives the word and the search is under way. Descending by iron ladders and crossing iron grated floors, the men reach the vaults. Electric lights illuminate every part of the white-walled vaults, making the smallest objects visible. The burly yeomen, however, feel the historic import of the ceremony and there are no smiles as they solemnly pace the passages ever and anon raising their flickering little lamps although the flames are barely perceptible in the brilliant electric light.

SLOWLY they reascend to the Princes' chamber, lamps are returned, halberds shouldered, the Exon reports to the Lord Great Chamberlain that the search "has been well and truly carried out," and the ceremony is finished. The yeomen, however, always repair to a nearby winery where they drink to the King's health.

One duty that the yeomen have been relieved from is "back stairs duty," which is said to be the origin of the expression "back stairs influence." All council houses and palaces during the first 250 years of the guard had two entrances, a public one in front and a private one at the back. All those whose visits to the King were to be concealed were conducted to him by the back stairs which were carefully guarded by specially selected yeomen. "Back stairs duty" came to an end in 1773.

The founding of the guard goes back to the Battle of Bosworth Field on August 22, 1485, when King Richard III, crippled and deformed though he was, led the attack on Henry Tudor, cutting down some of the men, surrounding Henry only to be himself cut down. From the band of men who had shared Henry's exile, marched with him through Wales, and guarded him on Bosworth Field came the yeomen of the guard.



Edward VII and Edward VIII.

In a proclamation, King Henry announced to the people that he had selected, and in the future intended to select, the chosen protectors of his person not from the nobility, but from the class just below them which had shown itself the backbone of the nation's strength.

The first captain of the yeomen of the guard was one John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, who had been Henry's stanchest friend in exile, his most able commander on the march, and the brilliant captain of the archers at Bosworth Field.

The duties under Henry VII were varied. The standing army had been disbanded so there were no troops to stand guard. Yeomen watched the outer doors of the palaces, guarded several doors of ante chambers, lined approaches to audience chambers, participated in all state ceremonies, accompanied the King whenever he went out, and carried the royal supper. At each meal a dainty maid of honor handed a spoon to a yeoman for him to taste every dish before the King.

A realistic picture of the elaborate precautions for guarding the King is contained in the following account from an old guard book:

"After bringing in 'the stuff for the bed' then the esquire or the gentleman usher shall command them what they shall do. So, first one of them to fetch the straw with a dagger or otherwise (that there be no untruth therein), and then the yeomen to take the straw and lay it plain and draw down the canvas over it straight. Then shall they lay on the bed of down and one of the yeomen to tumble up and down upon the same for the search thereof, and to beat it and lay it even and smooth. Then the yeoman taking the assay to deliver them a blanket of fustian, on which all the yeomen must lay hands at one, that it touch not nor ruffle not the bed. Then to lay on the nether sheet, likewise to take assay and that it touch not the bed, until it be laid where it should be; then take both the sheet and the fustian and truss the same back together under the feather bed on both sides, and at the feet and under the bolster.

"Then the esquire for the body to take the other sheet and roll it on his arm or stripe it through his hands, and go to the bed's head and stripe over the bed twice or thrice down to the feet. Then all the said yeomen to lay hands on the sheet and lay it plain on the bed; then the other fustian or two and such covering as shall best content the King. Then take a pane of ermine and lay it above, then a pane or two of martens. Then to roll or fold down the uppermost of the bed, sheet and all, the space of an ell. Then the yeoman takes the pillows and beat and raise them to the esquires of the body, who shall lay them of as best please the King. Then take the head sheet of raynes and lay one side thereof under each end of the bolster and the other side to lie still. Then take a head sheet of ermine and lay it above and over, and then the other side of the head sheet raynes and cover the bed over and over on every side, first taking an assay of all those that have touched any part thereof, making a cross and kissing where their hands last were. And then to stick up the angels about the same bed, and an usher to let down the sparver (canopy) of curtain and knit them; and an esquire for the body to cast holy water on the same bed."

King Edward VIII inspects the Yeomen of the Guard at Buckingham Palace.

The next King, Henry VIII, was fond of wandering through London disguised as one of his yeomen of the guard. According to an old tract, he met a cobbler, who, taking a fancy to his stalwart visitor, entertained him in his humble home, and proposed a return visit. The King, amused at the situation, told the cobbler to come to St. James's Palace and ask for "Henry of the Guard."

THERE the King received him, still dressed as a yeoman. As the unsuspecting cobbler conversed familiarly with the King, officials entered and addressed him as "Your Majesty," whereupon the cobbler fled in horror. He was caught, returned and told that he was to have a pension for life. The King continued to wander about the streets in the yeoman's uniform, halberd in hand, studying his subjects.

In 1696, the close watch that the yeoman of the guard kept on King William III is credited with saving him from assassination. The would-be assassins had four plans: To attack the King at night in his palace at Kensington, to attack him on the way to St. James's Palace for service on Sunday, to attack him in a narrow lane leaving his hunting grounds, to attack him just after he crossed the Thames by ferry. The first three were abandoned because the yeomen surrounded the King too closely to allow the assassins any chance of success. The fourth fell through when the plotters were discovered.

During the reign of King George IV the uniforms of the yeomen, which were discarded for new every year, were much in demand by persons wanting them for theatrical or other public exhibitions. Many of the yeomen added to their annual pension by selling their old uniforms. This was stopped by the King ordering that each yeoman should surrender his old uniform and receive nine pounds.

During this time, there had crept in the custom of filling vacancies in the guard with civilians who paid for the honor. King William IV, who succeeded George IV, put a stop to this. He directed that no person should be appointed yeoman unless he had served in the army or marines, that the officers of the guard should wear the field uniform or the dress uniform of a field officer of the Peninsular period. The uniforms of the yeomen remained the same.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

DR. A. S. W. ROSENBACH
MAXINE ELLIOTT

A FRIEND of TWO KING EDWARDS

THE English King's liking for the French Riviera has brought into the news again a name that caused as many hearts to somersault 30 years ago as, much more recently, did his own as Prince of Wales. And he is the second Edward of England to figure with her in the news. If Edward VII, in the statue erected by grateful citizens of Cannes, is able to gaze blandly past her without a flicker when she drives out from her Chateau de l'Horizon, he is far less susceptible than ever he was in the flesh to the fascinating presence of Maxine Elliott.

It was in Marienbad, almost 30 years ago, that she and that Edward met. As the story goes—and for all its suspiciously glamorous details, it must be remembered that the truth about Maxine was often stranger, if rarer, than fiction—she sat in the park in a dove-colored gown with a ruffled parasol and book of verse to match. It happened that the King passed by, and it happened that she glanced up from the page so that for a moment their eyes met. She has never said what verses she read in the next 10 minutes. Possibly she does not know. Certainly it does not matter. For then an equerry came with an invitation to dine.

There is a myth that later, when Miss Elliott was mistress of Hartsbourne Manor and hostess there to half the glittering titles and sparkling minds of the time, she was informed that a royal guest would come down unattended for the week-end. She replied directly that she knew so good a friend would not thus destroy her. He grumbled that even his subjects were not allowed so to advise him, but she began packing her trunks. The vans were halted only when a royal messenger arrived with a list of guests who would accompany the King.

Only now, as Miss Elliott reaches 63, it becomes possible to understand that her powerful enchantments may have been too hastily laid to capers of the heart. Those were days when her physical perfection is said to have moved Ethel Barrymore, to whom is attributed an even more famous epigram on the respectable antiquity of the theater, to exclaim, "The Venus de Milo—with arms!"

Maxine had to wait for the passing of youth, before the world's chatter turned to her extraordinary acumen in finance. It is fortunate that she did not have to go broke before it could notice her sparkling mind, her limpid sense of the nuances of people and living. In that case, by all accounts, they would never have been noticed.

Alexander Woollcott, who in refuting one myth may have retold others, says that once, she and her lawyer each bought mining stock at 15. The practical man of affairs sold out at 44, and warned her that he felt it time to get out from under. She waited and sold at 115.

"If she had been a man," says the lawyer, "Morgan would have been her secretary, and Jacob Schiff her office boy."

It is one of the most long-lived and cherished of American legends that Woollcott attacks. The story is that her Maxine Elliott Theater in Thirty-ninth street, New York, was a gift from the stalwart Pierpont Morgan, considered otherwise as unapproachable as the King. Woollcott goes the whole hog; says she didn't know Morgan at all, never even spoke to him. Maxine herself took a middle course; she said she'd only spoken to him twice.

Hardly anyone doubts now, however, that she obtained the theater through gifts from a higher source than even the House of Morgan; through her great drawing power in the theater and her shrewd business sense. She not only paid for the theater, but took the upper hand in its design and its management. It was a gold mine up to her last performance there, as Cordelia in "Trimmed in Scarlet," 16 years ago. In 1924, upon the marriage of her niece, Maxine, daughter of Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson and Maxine Elliott's sister, Gertrude—who has a place in the British Who's Who while Maxine does not—she provided for dowry a cool $500,000.

Woollcott says she decided early to quit the stage when her fortune reached a certain figure; and when, one evening, she got word from her bankers that it was accomplished, she posted a notice on the bulletin board, paid off the performers to the end of the season and walked out for good.

"I never really liked the theater," she declared on her last visit to this country, in 1933. "I just happened to be in it. Night after night I have played in successes. They gave me my theater. They provided for me so well that I was able to give a relative a half million, and she got it while I was still living. But they became drearier and drearier.

"My idea of happiness is some small corner of the world, and peace."

Her "small corner" is the Chateau de l'Horizon—built under her personal supervision in a spot on the Riviera where conservative architects said it was out of the question—which the King of England would have made his summer residence this year were in not for troubled European conditions.

But, before taking leave of that interview in 1933, it should be recounted that a sentence from an old news story was read to her: "Beauty neither buys food nor keeps up a home." She had said it in 1908.

"Could I have spoken so truly so long ago?" she said.

She had excellent reason to speak "truly," for in that year the late Nat Goodwin, the foremost low comedian of some 30 years, divorced her at Reno. It was her second. Born Jessie Dermot, daughter of Captain Tom Dermot and so lovely as a child that, rather than leave her alone at home in Rockland, Maine, he took her to sea with him, she was married to George A. McDermott, a lawyer, and divorced him in 1897. Gossips have said the lawyer, who was Mayor's Marshal in the Grace administration in New York City, had money which the Dermots lacked.

A NOTE of the same ugly sort was sounded by Goodwin after their divorce. "The comic little man," he said, referring to himself in the words of one of her admirers, "did one thing, however. He launched his third wife on the waves of English society, and they repaid him by stealing her from him. Did they get a bargain? I wonder."

He never mentioned her without bitterness, a fact that suggests to the canny that while Aesop's tale of the fox and the grapes might not apply, yet Wilde's line, "Scratch a cynic and you find a sentimentalist," might be paraphrased to fit the case.

Five years later, when she was reported about to marry a tennis player who boasted that he had never tasted alcohol or used tobacco, she cabled an inquiring friend in the Associated Press: "I have honorable intentions toward no man." That is according to Woollcott. Her published denial, cabled to London from Cannes after a Chicago paper reported actual marriage, was "Never again!"

An English correspondent wrote, "Miss Elliott has won remarkable favor in English society, especially since her divorce from Nat Goodwin, the comedian."

As for Maxine, herself, the records do not show that she ever publicly pawed over the scraps of her broken marriage—unless something of the sort could be read into her hearty "Never again." That may mean that she was bred, if not born, to the finer sensibilities of the circle to which she has seemed for years to belong. Or it may mean that she was brought up in the best traditions of the coast of Maine.

An ACE BOOK COLLECTOR for FIFTY YEARS

ONE evening during the productive last year of her life, that corpulent, vivacious and gifted Bostonian, Amy Lowell, gave a dinner party intended to be something very special. For although she had invited only one guest, that one happened to be a Sybarite whose fastidiousness would test the bravery of the most ambitious and meticulous of hostesses. He is a gentleman who keeps terrapins in his attic. But Miss Lowell was rewarded for feeding such an exquisite by the fact that her guest performed brilliantly as a conversationalist—and topped that off by performing a miracle.

At that time Miss Lowell was bringing to a conclusion her lifelong labors on a biography of John Keats, a poet for whom she felt an almost mystical affinity. When dinner was over and she and her guest were sucking a pair of choice Havana cigars in the drawing room, she began to tell him about her masterpiece. Suddenly in the midst of an eloquent passage, she leaned forward and fixed him with a covetous eye.

"Dr. Rosenbach," she said with sudden intensity, "there is a certain book I want more than anything in the world: Keats' own copy of Shakespeare, with his notes through it!"

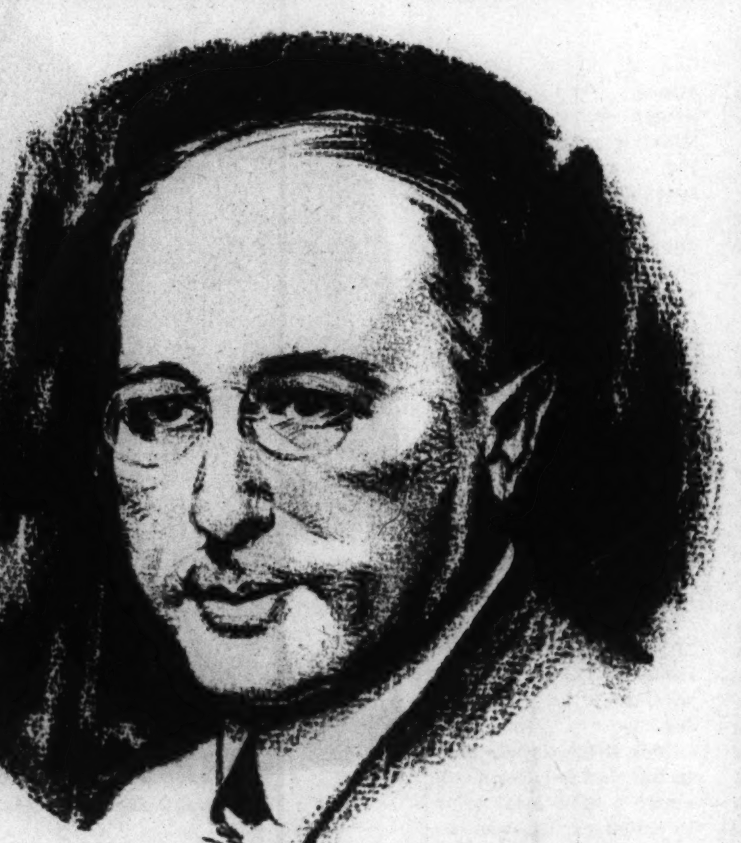
Her companion leaned back in his chair, puffed out his smooth jowls and regarded her with the complacency of a cat that has swallowed six successive canaries. Then he put his hand into his jacket and pulled out, with the air of an amateur prestidigitator who had just extracted a jack rabbit from his vest pocket, Keats' own copy of Shakespeare. Miss Lowell, whom A. Edward Newton called America's most distinguished woman collector, turned pale as she accepted the book.

That may have been a rare and delicious moment in the career of Dr. Abraham S. Wolf Rosenbach, but like other incalculable rarities, it was almost a commonplace accident of his career. The Doctor's career celebrated its fiftieth anniversary the other day—the same day the Doctor himself celebrated his sixtieth birthday; by any standard those have been tremendously exciting years and by his own standard they have been voluptuously satisfying. He is a collector of firsts—not merely first editions, but superlatives and precursors in all things. Hence no one could be suspected of the slightest exaggeration in referring to him by way of introduction as the world's foremost book collector, the greatest bibliographer in the world, the mightiest and most formidable book seller and the richest and most scholarly gentleman in his field.

DR. ROSENBACH himself would not gainsay these extravagant claims, for like most collectors, he enjoys a boast and adores superlatives.

While the story of his life is loaded with as much good copy as even a novelist could desire, it is peculiar in having no beginning and no necessary or ascertainable sequence of causes and events. It is a haphazard string of legends.

He is an offspring of one of Philadelphia's oldest families, one of the seven children of Morris Rosenbach, a moderately well-to-do cotton manufacturer, and Isabella Polock Rosenbach, whose brother Moses was a publisher and book collector and the vital force in his education. Moses Polock was a regular miser of books, an eccentric old man regarding his collection as infinitely more lovable than his family and his friends. He took a fancy to "Rosy," as his intimates call him, when he was a child of 9 and made him his assistant when he was 10. That was the beginning of "Rosy's" career—a monotonously successful one punctuated only by triumphs in the art of fastidious acquisition. Uncle Moses helped instil him (if that were needed) with a capacity for gloating property lust that is almost unparalleled in the annals of American collectors. Uncle Moses himself was particularly fond of Americana and owned the finest collection of early American children's books in existence. He almost never sold a rare book, and when he did sell one copied out every page, word for word, in long hand. "Rosy" collected his copies.



Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach.

The nephew has become the possessor of that collection and a great authority on the subject of juvenile literature. He is a confirmed bachelor and obviously dislikec children, since he has a grounded conviction that they eat books. But the reason for his love of children's books is not far to seek. He adores quoting such plums as the following from Cotton Mather's book on pious deaths of New England children:

"When she was about two years and a half old; as she lay in the cradle, she would ask herself that question, what is my corrupt nature? and would make answer again to herself, it is empty of grace, bent unto sin, and only to sin, and that continually."

And he treasures the exhortation, "O children of New Egland, poor hearts; you are going to hell indeed: But will it not be a dreadful thing to go to hell from New England?" which appears in one of his trophies.

Dr. Rosenbach bought his first book at an auction when he was 11 and owned $14 less than he had bid. The auctioneer was convulsed with laughter when he learned the situation and understood that the trembling youngster was Moses Polock's nephew.

His first important killing was made seven years later, when he was a bookish undergraduate at the University of Pennsylvania. It was in the same auction rooms that he discovered a collection of original pamphlets containing a Horace Walpole limited first edition of Gray's "Odes" and an unknown first edition of Samuel Johnson's "Prologue" for the opening of the Drury Lane Theater. He was the only bidder who knew the contents of the bound collection, and was able to buy them for $3.60. A few years later when he was a graduate student at the same university, he was offered $5000 for the collection. He has never sold it, although he needed the money badly in those days. There are many other books he has always refused to sell. His private vaults in New York and Philadelphia now contain several million dollars worth of unprocurable books. If he were not first a collector, he wouldn't be the unrivaled book seller he is today.

It is this passion for owning books, together with an unplumbed memory, a vast scholarly intimacy with literature and literary history, and a settled conviction that the price of rare books will never stop rising, that gained him his pre-eminence. He finds buying at auction the most fascinating sport in the world—even more so than fishing near his country house at Corson's Inlet, New Jersey, aboard his launch, First Folio; and he is devoted to fishing and eating fish.

"Rare books," he wrote in his autobiographical "Books and Bidders," "are a safe investment. The stock can never go down." His writings are full of such confessions of faith, and they aren't altogether sentimental, by a long shot. "As I grow older," he wrote at 51, "I find I have to fight that deadliest of maladies—conservatism. This is one thing in the world that the collector should pray to be delivered from. Of course it is awfully difficult to pay $500 today for a book that in your youth you could have picked up for only $20, or to buy a book for $1000 which two years ago passed through your fingers for one-third as much."

BUT it has been this policy of never being afraid to pay a high price, of always outbidding a competitor, that has made Dr. Rosenbach a multi-millionaire.

Such buying and selling may have materialistic overtones and there are certainly a great many intelligent people who will find a great many faults with the whole process, but to Dr. Rosenbach it has been satisfactorily dramatic. He is certainly the only person in the world who has bought a Gutenberg Bible and sold four first folios of Shakespeare by wireless from mid-Atlantic. He is the only person with one exception who has paid as much as $106,000 for a single volume; the exception is Mrs. Stephen V. Harkness, who relieved him of the book, another Gutenberg Bible, and presented it to Yale University. What she paid is not known.

Dr. Rosenbach's friends never tire of repeating anecdotes that illustrate his uncanny memory and his erudition. If he hadn't happened to be the only person present at a London sale in

HER MOTHER SAID She Was INSANE—But the COURT DISAGREED

The Strange Case of Alice Littleton Griswold and the Eccentricities Which Got Her Into Trouble.

Judge Albert Millar.

A recent snapshot of Alice Littleton Griswold,

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania.

THERE'S no doubt about it that pretty Alice Littleton Griswold has caused her mother plenty of trouble. She has been extravagant beyond her comfortable private means. She has upset the household and been too obviously gloomy at home. She has gotten into trouble when she has gone away. Any 24-year-old girl who can down a quart of whisky a day is likely to be a little difficult around the house. But the question that concerned Judge Albert Millar and Judge Raymond MacNeille when she came to their Philadelphia court, the other day, was only indirectly involved in all these domestic foibles of hers.

What Miss Griswold's judges had to decide was whether she was as crazy as her mother thought she was and whether Mrs. Frank Tracy Griswold, widow of a wealthy broker, had been justified in having her incarcerated in a sanitarium. The fact that the girl was pretty and clever, that she had made high grades at college and had been not altogether unsuccessful as an actress before giving that up to study law, would, on the face of it, make it seem likely that her mother might be in error. Mrs. Griswold professed that she "absolutely adores" her daughter. Naturally there were prominent psychiatrists lined up on both sides, for it was a knotty question and Miss Griswold and her mother are both wealthy.

When Miss Griswold appeared in court she had spent four days at Fairmont Farm, the institution to which her mother had had her committed. She wasn't feeling particularly friendly, but she made an attractive picture in spite of that. She was terribly pale and her reddened lips were tight and unsmiling. She wore a black frock, black gloves and a black picture hat—all of which enhanced her unhealthy pallor and her well-groomed blonde hair. Her sharp little nose was turned up and her eyes evaded those of her haughty mother, seated across the courtroom.

The first witness in the case was Dr. George Wilson, a professor of neurology at the University of Pennsylvania and superintendent of the hospital where Miss Griswold had been confined. Fairmont Farm is a private institution near Roxborough, Pennsylvania. Miss Griswold had been taken there against her will in accordance with a certificate signed by Dr. Wilson, Dr. A. H. O'Neal of Philadelphia, and Dr. John Parsons Millett of New York. It was up to them to uphold the diagnosis—"Tendency to alcoholism, lying, phobias and emotional instability . . . Dementia praecox (?)"

Dr. Wilson testified that Miss Griswold had confessed to him that she became a hard drinker at the age of 14 and that she had increased her doses up to the point where she consumed a quart of liquor a day. He quoted Mrs. Griswold as saying that her daughter always drank six or seven cocktails before dinner, three or four glasses of champagne during dinner and half a dozen highballs before retiring.

"FROM the history of the case as given me by Dr. O'Neal and from my own observations," he said, "I would say that this girl's case presents a very difficult problem. On my diagnosis chart I have written 'dementia praecox' with a question mark after it. I have also written the tentative diagnosis "constitutional psychopathic inferiority from the excessive use of alcohol.'

"When Dr. Millett came from New York to examine Miss Griswold," he went on, "the young woman came downstairs in bare feet and very scanty clothing and flew into a rage with her mother. She ran outside and her mother had to coax her to come in. She was very antagonistic. At times she professed profound hatred of her mother and brother. At other times she was normal and expressed great affection for them."

Dr. Millett was next on the stand. He substantiated what his colleague had said. "This child," he said ominously, "is very ill. Although it may not be her own fault she is a very sick girl, mentally. Although I cannot diagnose her illness exactly, there are some signs, however, of abnormality. She was antagonistic and told conflicting stories. She first said that her mother had never helped her and later admitted that her mother gave her $1400 to pay bills she owed."

Miss Griswold had three attorneys in court to counteract the impression that kind of testimony would have. One of them, Layton Schoch, was ostentatiously skeptical of Dr. Millett's opinions. "Are you sure she wasn't spoofing you?" he asked the physician. "You know you were there to determine whether she was to be incarcerated."

"I don't believe she was spoofing," the witness answered, "although she did tell me different stories."

"Wouldn't it surprise you, Doctor, to know that while at school this young lady's marks averaged from 84 to 86?" the attorney asked in an arch tone of voice.

"No," answered Dr. Millett, who isn't easily ruffled. "That in itself wouldn't be surprising."

Mrs. Griswold was next in line and her testimony added a little local color to the story that was being unfolded. She looked tired and harassed as she took the stand and began to answer the preliminary questions. Yes, she said, Alice has an income of $5000 a year from her grandmother's estate; yet she has never learned to manage her own finances and is always in debt.

"On June 3, 1936," Mrs. Griswold began, "I received a cable from Alice from London, saying she was anxious to come home and would arrive in September. She asked me for 175 pounds to pay for the trip. I went in town the next day, but the man who takes care of such things for me was away and I did not send the money right away. The following day I got another cable saying she would be home this month, July, and asking for only 50 pounds. I sent 100 pounds and met her at the boat, in New York.

"She looked lovely as she always does. But she was nervously exhausted and excited. On the way home she kept telling me about her health. She said she was afraid of heart trouble or cancer. After we were home we had Dr. O'Neal for her, but she seemed to think we were deceiving her about her condition.

"During the visits of Dr. O'Neal, Alice suffered hallucinations. She thought she saw creatures crawling over the bed and heard burglars walking in the hallway. She couldn't sleep. Sometimes she wandered to four beds in a night.

"At times she abused me and called me uncomplimentary names, saying I was horrid and she didn't like me or her brother. She insisted on locking her room every night and always kept the key with her when she was outside the room. A friend playfully knocked her into the pool one day and she still clutched the key when she swam out. I knew she was unhappy and offered to arrange a trip to White Sulphur Springs for her, with a maid. But she refused."

In reply to her attorney's questions Mrs. Griswold said that she adores her daughter. "I want to help her with my whole heart and soul," she testified. She told of visiting her in London last February and of finding her "run down and underfed, living in a cheap rooming house and cooking food out of tin cans on a little gas stove." She said that in spite of the fact that Alice was so broke she had had to pawn her jewelry, she sent an expensixe display of flowers to her room at the Claridge.

"One day she came into the hotel," the mother continued, "and asked if I had put any detectives on her trail. I said, 'Of course not.' She said thr British detectives were trailing h and that they wanted to get her o of the country because she knew t much about England. She was trembling and greatly exhausted and terrified and later became physically i from worry. I asked her to return t America with me, but she refused an I had to leave her there."

Mrs. Griswold spoke disparagingly of her daughter's attempts to become a successful actress and told how she finally gave up this ambition and decided to become a lawyer in England. She said that before Alice gave up he hopes of a stage career she had aske her mother to buy a mortgage on th Music Box Theater, saying that thi would help her get ahead. Mrs. Griswold could have bought the mortgage she said. Her fortune is valued a more than $600,000. She even consulted her financial advisors about it but they counseled her against it.

Her most crushing blow was a reflection on her daughter's morals. " learned that she had established close relationship with a married ma in London," she said, without tellin how she had learned this, "and sh was giving him money. I did no think that was proper." Her own a torney interrupted to point out th this testimony was irrelevant.

Yet there were tears in Mrs. Griswold's eyes as she told of her love fo her daughter and her desire that sh should be happy. In one year, sh pointed out, she had given her $420 to spend in addition to her own income.

ALICE GRISWOLD was w poised and collected as she to the stand to answer this testimony. She had no complaint to ma about the treatment she received wh she was at the hospital, but s wanted to get back to England a was afraid she would be kept there b force. She had much to deny. Sh denied ever having said she hated h mother and her brother, although sh admitted confessing to Dr. O'Neal th she felt little affection for the forme She denied the tales of her drinkin exploits, saying she had been doi very little drinking during the pa year.

"I told Dr. O'Neal I did not ca to live in that house," she said, ferring to her mother's country pla Hothorpe, Radnor. "During the years before I began my studies in E rope there were many disagreeab episodes. I felt uncomfortable the Then, too, I wanted to return to E gland. I am genuinely and intense interested in my studies there. four law examinations I got marks 72, 72, 84 and 86. I am very mu in earnest.

"I was given no warning when I taken to the mental hospital a f days ago. When two doctors came the door in a taxicab, mother fina explained that I would be taken Fairmont Farm for observation a that I would be treated kindly. I ma no resistance, except to ask to call m lawyers. But they said I could that later and virtually pushed me to the cab."

Miss Griswold's medical expert were ready to back her up and co tradict the testimony of the physicia on her mother's side. Dr. Earl Bond, a winner of the Bok Award a one of Philadelphia's most disti guished psychiatrists, was the first testify for her.

BENTON PAINTS MISSOURI'S HISTORY

paper when he was only 17. The Congressman objected to this and sent him to Western Military Academy in Alton, only to have him run away to Chicago to study at Art Institute. After that he had four years in France and came back to live in New York from 1911 till 1935, with the exception of the war years, when he was in the Navy.

His claim to the now coveted epithet "provincial" is rather tenuous on the basis of that, but he has always been most interested in the hinterland, particularly the prairie, and has spent his summers touring America getting material for the winter's painting.

BENTON is one of the artists most often touted as a native son and has been financially and artistically successful. The $16,000 commission isn't high for a big job. He has paintings in the Metropolitan Museum, the Whitney and the New School for Social Research in New York, and his work was prominently displayed at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago. Now, at 47, he is head of the department of painting and drawing at Kansas City Art Institute.

The Capitol mural will be an episodic panorama of Missouri's social history, full of portraits of obscure people. The immortality Benton will derive from it is limited, for although the building already houses over $1,000,000 worth of art, its basement was recently cleaned for the first time in three years and the existing murals have already been marred by "blisters, scratches, holes, cracks, match burns, chipped and peeling paint, a good many tacks, pencil marks, smudges and stains," an expert recently reported.

SCIENCE SAYS AMERICAN CLIMATE IS NOT CHANGING

usually on an immense scale. Air moves from place to place over the earth's surface in mass formation. These masses are of two major sources, polar and tropical. Those of polar origin are dense, heavy and relatively cold; those from the tropics are warmer and lighter. A mass of tropical origin moving northward may come in contact with a polar mass, and, being lighter, it naturally flows up over the opposing dense air, just as it would flow up the side of a mountain. As it rises, it cools, the normal rate of cooling being one degree for each 183 feet of rise. And as it cools, its ability to hold moisture diminishes; a cubic foot of saturated air at 80 degrees, for example, if cooled to 60 degrees, loses half of its water content. Thus rain results from the rising and cooling of a moisture-laden air mass and the condensation of its water vapor. This illustrates nature's method of producing rain in appreciable amounts; no other is effective. Sometimes local thundershowers result when a column of superheated air rises without the co-operation of a cold-air mass.

"St. Louis' rain is furnished by water absorbed by the air from the Gulf of Mexico and from territory between the Gulf and St. Louis. Masses of warm, vapor-containing air move over St. Louis mostly from the south, and toward the east, while the colder, high-pressrue areas come from the north and west.

"During the summer of 1934 there was a persistent absence of the dense, cool, polar air masses from the North until about the middle of August, when a more normal movement began, definitely breaking the heat wave, and, in conjunction with more favorable cyclonic (low pressure, with counter-clockwise winds) air circulation farther south, producing drouth-relieving showers over the interior states. Just how these drouth conditions definitely establish themselves and persist so long has not yet been determined, but it is evident that any effort of man to effectively change the situation would be fruitless."

Inability of man to change the weather does not mean, of course, that he can have no influence on its effects. Much of the ruin in recent drouths has been due to cultivation of western areas which, the Government experts say should never have been farmed.

In these regions the normal precipitation is comparatively slight and even small deficiencies are likely to be serious. If a region whose normal rainfall is 18 inches a year gets six inches less than that the result is much more marked than would be that from an equal shortage in an area whose normal is 40 inches. Plowing of normally semi-arid land has removed protective vegetation, and when drouth has dried the bare earth, winds have swept surface soil away in great clouds. Permanent damage to some of the land in such regions as the "dust bowl," that drouth-stricken section taking in parts of Kansas, Oklahoma, Texas, Colorado and New Mexico, is feared as a result of the removal of so much of the top soil.

Measures to minimize the effects of drouth have been advocated by Government agencies, such as substitution of drouth-resisting crops for wheat and corn and the return of much of the grain acreage in semi-arid regions to grazing land. The Great Plains Drouth Committee, recently appointed by President Roosevelt, is now trying to work out a long-time program to soften the effects of long dry spells in this territory, two of the ideas before it being to tap "hidden rivers" below the surface of the ground, and to build many small dams to "hold water where it falls."

All such steps are based on the belief that drouth is a recurring, unavoidable and unpredictable element in American climate.

There may come a time when drouths can be predicted far in advance, but though Government research is constantly going on in search of basic principles which would make such forecasts possible, Kincer says that time is not yet in sight.

examination," he said, "that Miss Griswold is suffering from any mental disease or is in need of the treatment she was receiving at the hospital. She does have a fear of her home because of the disputes she associated with it.

"She should not be restrained," he continued, "although she may need some guidance. About her drinking she admits that certain friends used to cause her to take too much. But she says she does not care to see them any more. She told me, that she had not been under the influence of liquor for a month."

Friends Miss Griswold had known on the stage, when she had bit parts in New York and Philadelphia plays, rallied to her defense. Many of them appeared in the courtroom, ready to testify on her behalf. A number of young people prominent in Philadelphia's social life were on hand for the same reason. None was called on to take the stand.

Reed McClelland, a New York actor who had appeared on the bill with Miss Griswold in Ethel Barrymore's Philadelphia production of "An Amazing Career," was warm in her defense. "She is a fine young woman," he told reporters, "and she has a great deal of talent for the theater. She was not a failure as an actress by any means."

When all the testimony had been delivered, Judge Millar called the principals and their lawyers and physicians into his chambers for a conference that lasted two hours. When they reappeared in court, the Judge announced that the petition filed for Miss Griswold had been granted and that she was discharged "on conditions satisfactory to Mrs. Griswold and the court." What those conditions were was not made public. Presumably Alice agreed to be treated by a psychiatrist. But her discharge was "complete" and she has not been returned to the hospital and is not planning to return to Radnor and continue living with her mother. Neither she nor Mrs. Griswold would discuss the case after the decision had been announced.

Her friends were still a little indignant about it. "She is high-strung" they said again and again. "But not unbalanced."

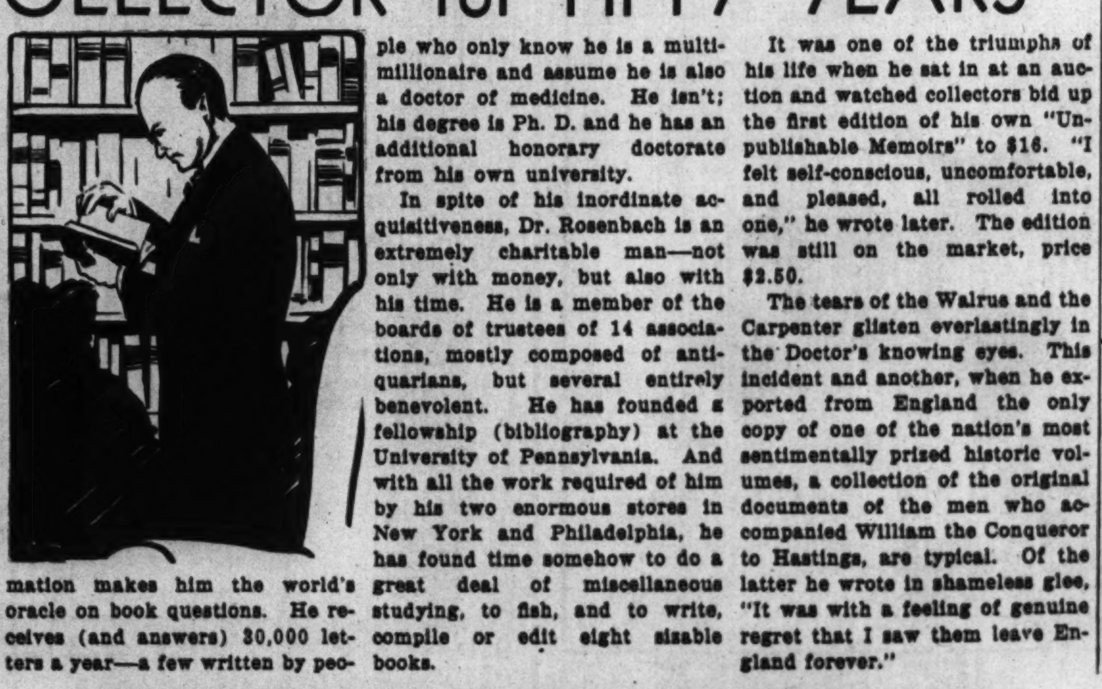
1923 who happened to know what was the first volume of verse published in America, he would have paid $50,000 instead of $250 for an obscure little religious tract called the Eliot Indian Bible. On the other hand, if he hadn't happened to be sitting in the office of the editor of the (London) Nation before the waste baskets were emptied, he wouldn't have been presented with a fine original manuscript of George Bernard Shaw's essay on censorship of the press; luck enters into the business as well as erudition, taste and oracular second-sight.

In one decade he bought more than $25,000,000 worth of books and manuscripts in Europe alone. Almost invariably he has been laughed at for his extravagant outlays, and almost invariably he has been right. There are few stories at his expense. One there is, however: How he showed a friend a rare Shakespearean folio, saying there were only three known copies in the world, adding that one other was in the Morgan Library—his rival—and admitting he was unable to recall who owned the third; it turned out that he owned it himself. But such tales are far from typical. His memory is fabled. Usually he answers "I don't remember." . . ." And then corrects himself by giving the exact date of the first book published in Mexico, or California, or Ohio. His mental catalogue of distinguishing misprints in rare editions (what collectors call "points") is almost inexhaustible; such knowledge alone protects a collector from buying valueless near-rarities.



This horde of specialized information makes him the world's oracle on book questions. He receives (and answers) 30,000 letters a year—a few written by people who only know he is a multimillionaire and assume he is also a doctor of medicine. He isn't; his degree is Ph. D. and he has an additional honorary doctorate from his own university.

In spite of his inordinate acquisitiveness, Dr. Rosenbach is an extremely charitable man—not only with money, but also with his time. He is a member of the boards of trustees of 14 associations, mostly composed of antiquarians, but several entirely benevolent. He has founded a fellowship (bibliography) at the University of Pennsylvania. And with all the work required of him by his two enormous stores in New York and Philadelphia, he has found time somehow to do a great deal of miscellaneous studying, to fish, and to write, compile or edit eight sizable books.

It was one of the triumphs of his life when he sat in at an auction and watched collectors bid up the first edition of his own "Unpublishable Memoirs" to $16. "I felt self-conscious, uncomfortable, and pleased, all rolled into one," he wrote later. The edition was still on the market, price $2.50.

The tears of the Walrus and the Carpenter glisten everlastingly in the Doctor's knowing eyes. This incident and another, when he exported from England the only copy of one of the nation's most sentimentally prized historic volumes, a collection of the original documents of the men who accompanied William the Conqueror to Hastings, are typical. Of the latter he wrote in shameless glee, "It was with a feeling of genuine regret that I saw them leave England forever."

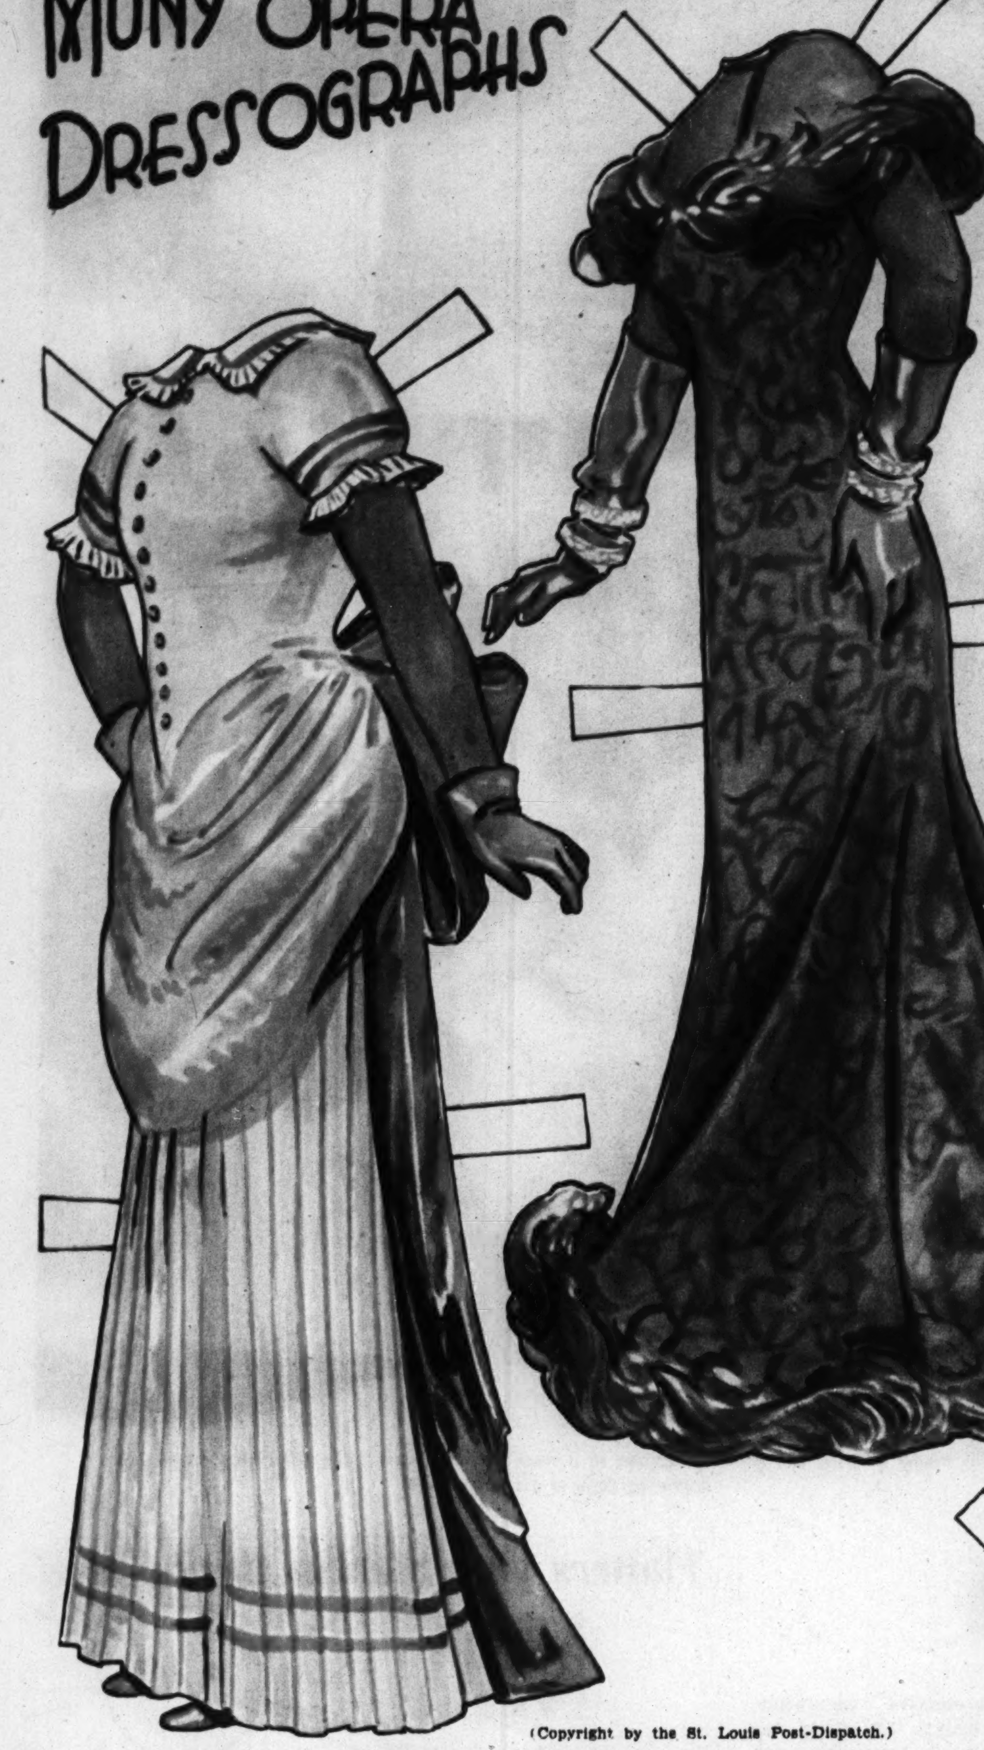
MUNY OPERA DRESSOGRAPHS



NORMA TERRIS, this week's Municipal Opera star, born in Columbus, Kansas, 31 years ago. She attended old La Grange College, then at La Grange, Missouri. In the early '20s she made her debut with the Ziegfeld "Follies" as a chorus girl. She soon graduated to "principal" parts, appearing in 'Be Yourself," 'A Night in Paris" and "Show Boat," among others. She also has played in the movies.

Accompanying Miss Terris are three costumes she wears in Municipal Opera shows. Cut out the star and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress her in her proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly. The three costumes shown here are worn by the actress in the following productions:

"Bittersweet," in which she wears a blue dress and a pink gown, and "Glamorous Night."

HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

And The Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

THE WORLD'S WORST MAYOR

THE CHARACTERS

JITTERY JOHN—A very unhappy harvest mouse.

GRUMPY—The ex-Mayor of the Hollow.

WALLY WADDLER—An outraged duck.

HARRY AND HILDA HOARDER—Two indignant squirrels.

Hermit Harry is a very wicked wolf. He hates everyone and wishes them all sorts of bad things. But as long as he just hated and wished, he did no one any harm. Then, alas, he one day found Jittery John hiding on his private property. And when Jittery told him that he was hiding from Grumpy, who is Jittery's rival in the coming election for Mayor of Hickory Hollow, it gave the hateful wolf an evil idea. He, with his gun, would make Jittery Mayor, since Jittery didn't want the job, and then he would make the new Mayor pass laws that would make everyone in the Hollow miserable. This he lost no time in doing, and we see the residents of the Hollow very much excited as

THE PLAY BEGINS

HARRY HOARDER—(Excited. But officer, you can't take our winter supplies. We'll starve if we have nothing to eat.

CHIEF OF POLICE RIP—You'd better keep your mouth shut, or I'll lock you up. I'm taking my orders from the Mayor. He just doubled everybody's taxes, and I'm collecting them.

WALLY WADDLER—(Yelling at another officer.) Orders or no orders, it's an outrage to make a law-abiding citizen take off his shirt and then pull all his feathers just so the Mayor can sleep on a feather bed. (And so it goes. Every one of the citizens are affected in some way by the cruel laws Hermit Harry made the Mayor sign. The Hermit is enjoying it all very much, and he watches from the window of the City Hall, his gun under his arm.)

HERMIT HARRY—Haw! Haw! Haw! Just look at those crazy squirrels, they're all upset. And that duck. Don't he look funny without his feathers? Haw! Haw!

JITTERY JOHN—(Timidly.) A-a-aren't you afraid that everyone will move away from the Hollow?

HERMIT HARRY—That's what I want them to do. I kinda like this place and might live here myself if I can get rid of these pesky people. (And with Grumpy in jail, where the Hermit had him placed, there doesn't seem to be anything else to do. Soon most of the folks are leaving, carrying what little they have left with them.)

FOR MANY YEARS I FAILED TO SPY
A WORD TO RHYME WITH SILVER,

I MET OLD JOHN McGILVER.

HIS ACRES WERE NOT MANY;
AND YET HE NEVER NEEDED MORE
HIS HABITS WERE SO CANNY.
HIS NATIVE HEATH AND SHAGGY WOODS
WERE ALL HE HAD A WILL FOR.
HE DID NOT CRAVE FOR THIS WORLD'S GOODS
NOR EVEN GOLD OR SILVER.
HE OFTEN SAID THAT RICHES GREAT
HE WOULD NOT GIVE A DILL FOR AN HONEST MAN IN ALL HIS WAYS WAS UPRIGHT JOHN McGILVER.
WHO EVEN IN HIS NEEDY DAYS

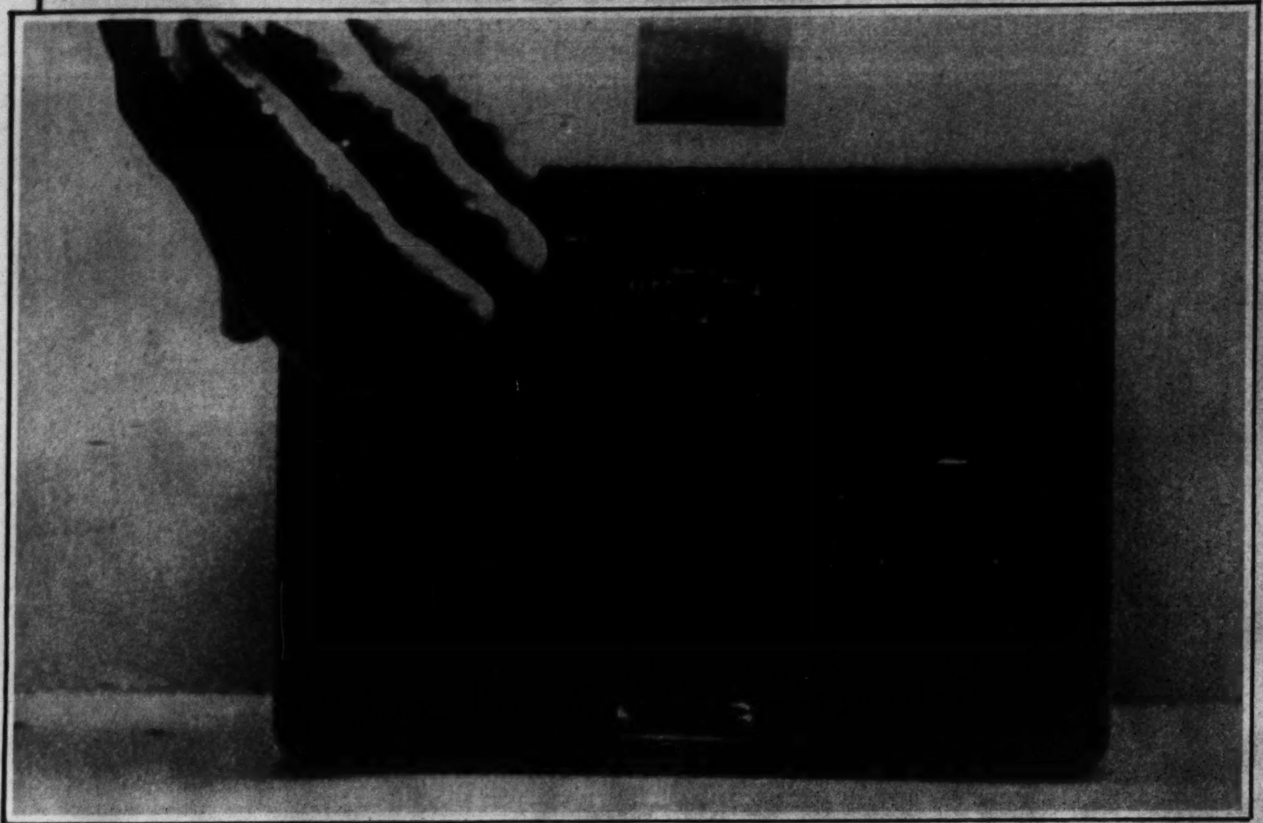
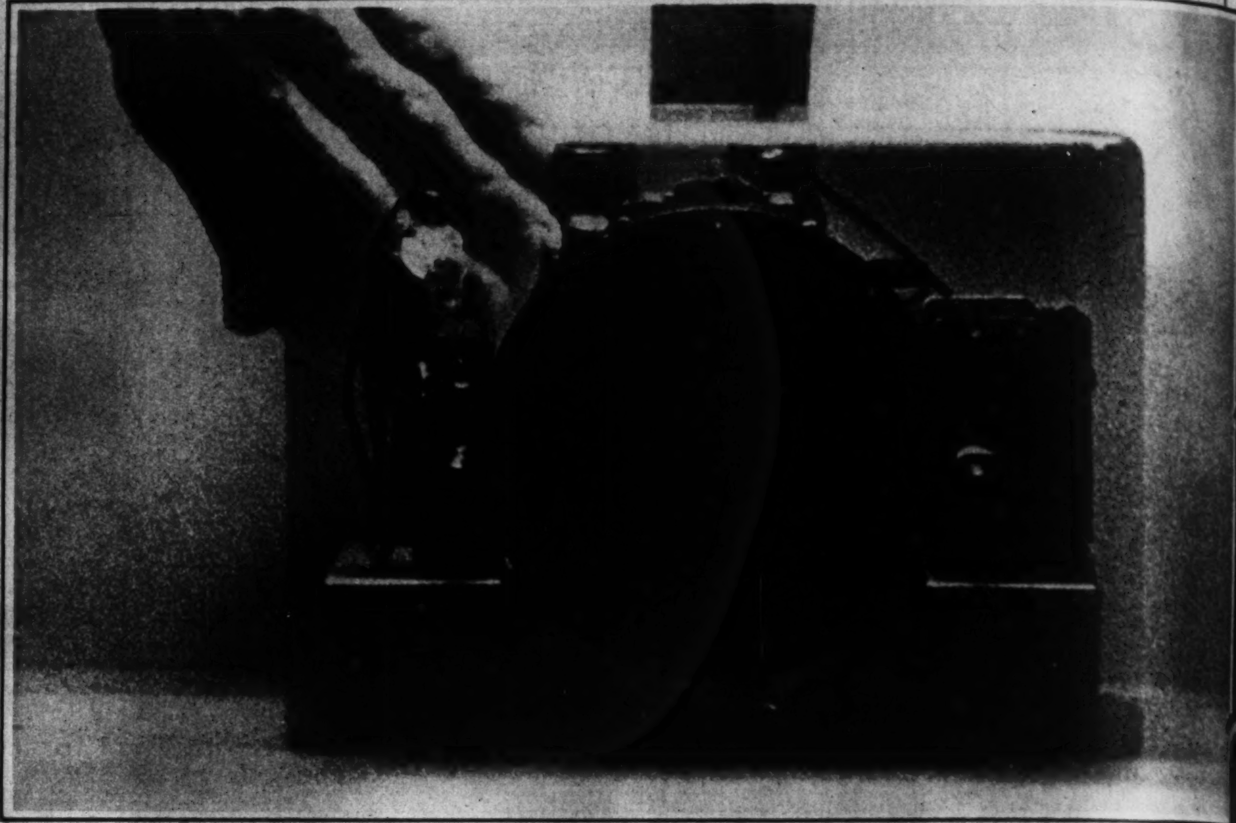
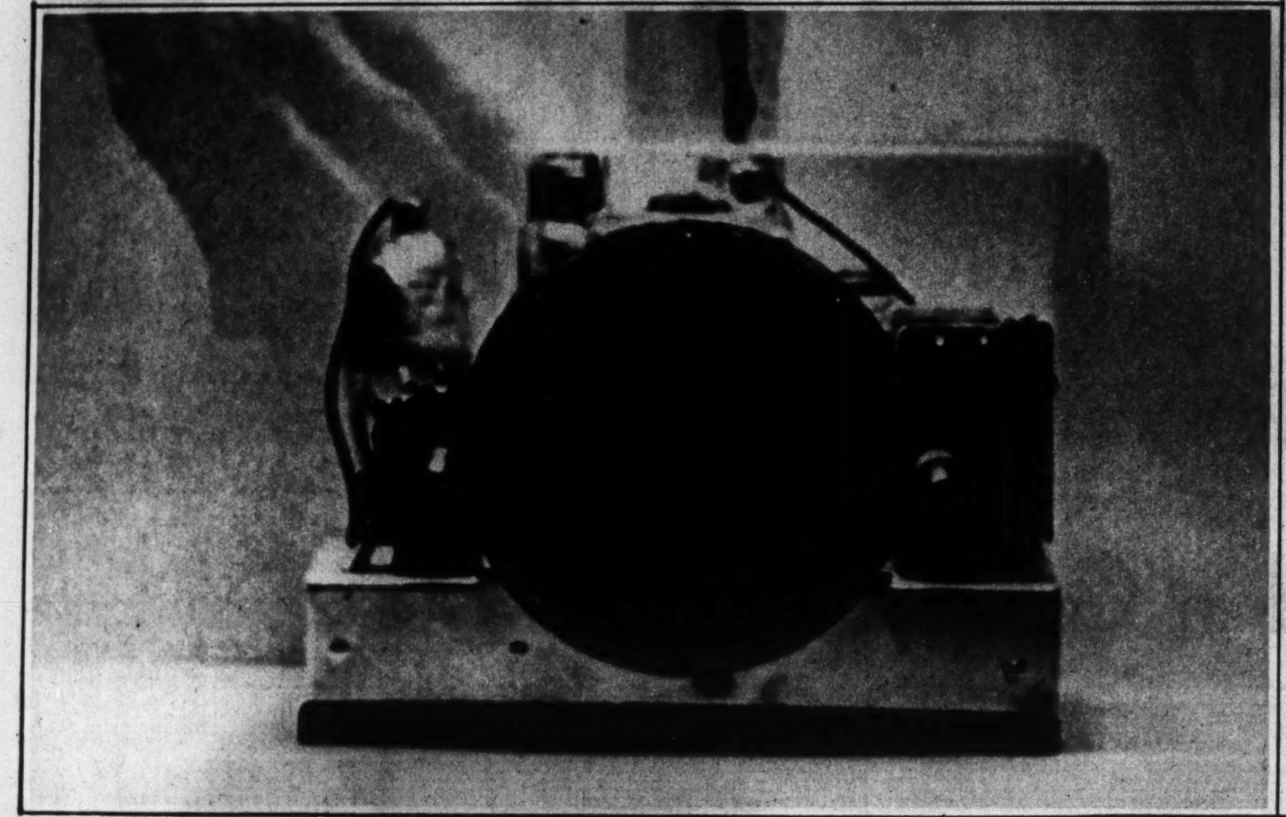
PRESTO CHANGO—Photographs of a 'Ray of Invisibility' at Work



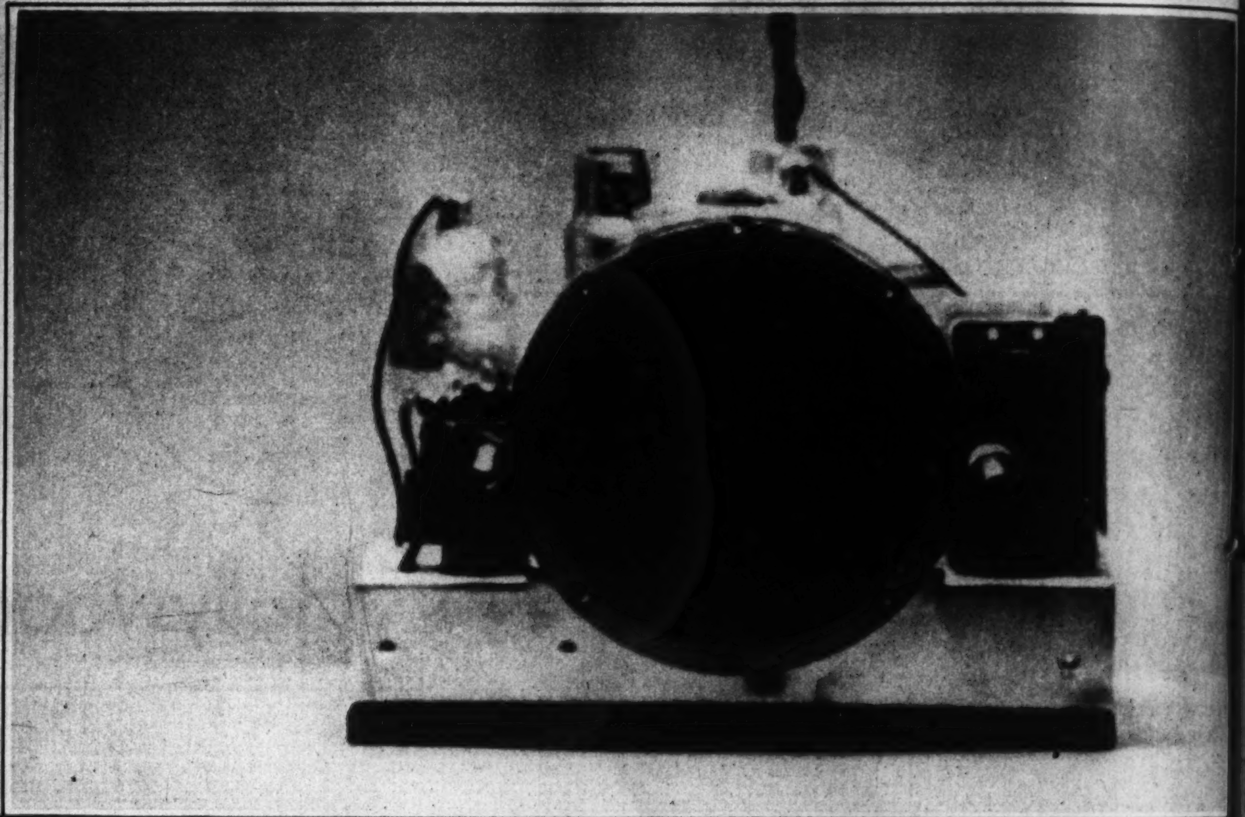
Photograph of a man's hand resting on a small radio cabinet a moment after the "ray of invisibility" has been turned on.



The hand and the outline of the cabinet become blurred under the action of the ray.



The works of the radio become clearly visible, while the hand and cabinet have turned into dim shadows.



Now nothing but tubes, loud speaker and metal base are to be seen, the hand and cabinet having disappeared entirely.

A machine invented by Stevn Pribil of Budapest is said to be capable of the feats shown in the four photographs above. The inventor will not disclose the principle on which his so-called invisible ray machine operates. It is contained in an oblong box about three feet in length and is said to be capable of making hard surfaces seem to disappear and to reveal the objects behind them. For example, one demonstration is said to have made the entire body of an automobile vanish, leaving the idling motor visible. It is claimed that the machine can render a cigarette tin invisible while revealing the contents.

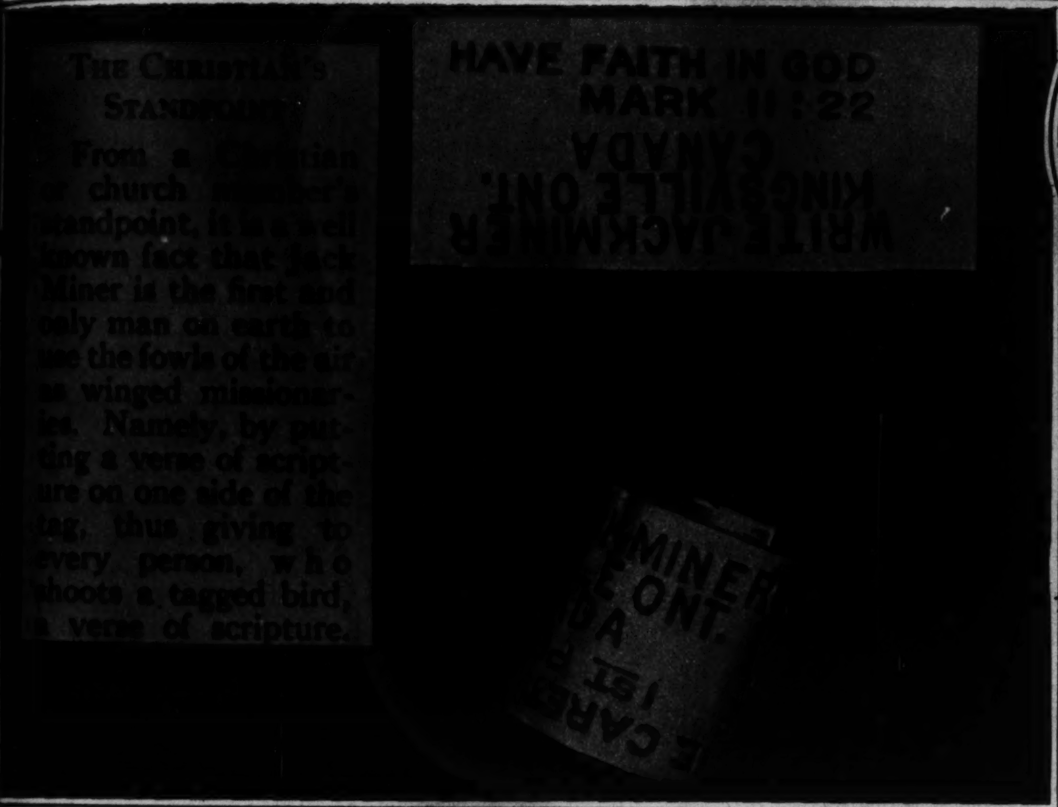
Unique Sancturary at Kingsville, Ontario, Where Birds Are Tagged With Scriptural Texts.

—Keystone photographs.

Scene at the Jack Miner bird sanctuary where thousands of birds from the North elect to spend the winter.



The Christian's Standpoint

From a Christian or church member's standpoint, it is a well known fact that Jack Miner is the first and only man on earth to use the fowls of the air as winged missionaries. Namely, by putting a verse of scripture on one side of the tag, thus giving to every person, who shoots a tagged bird, a verse of scripture.

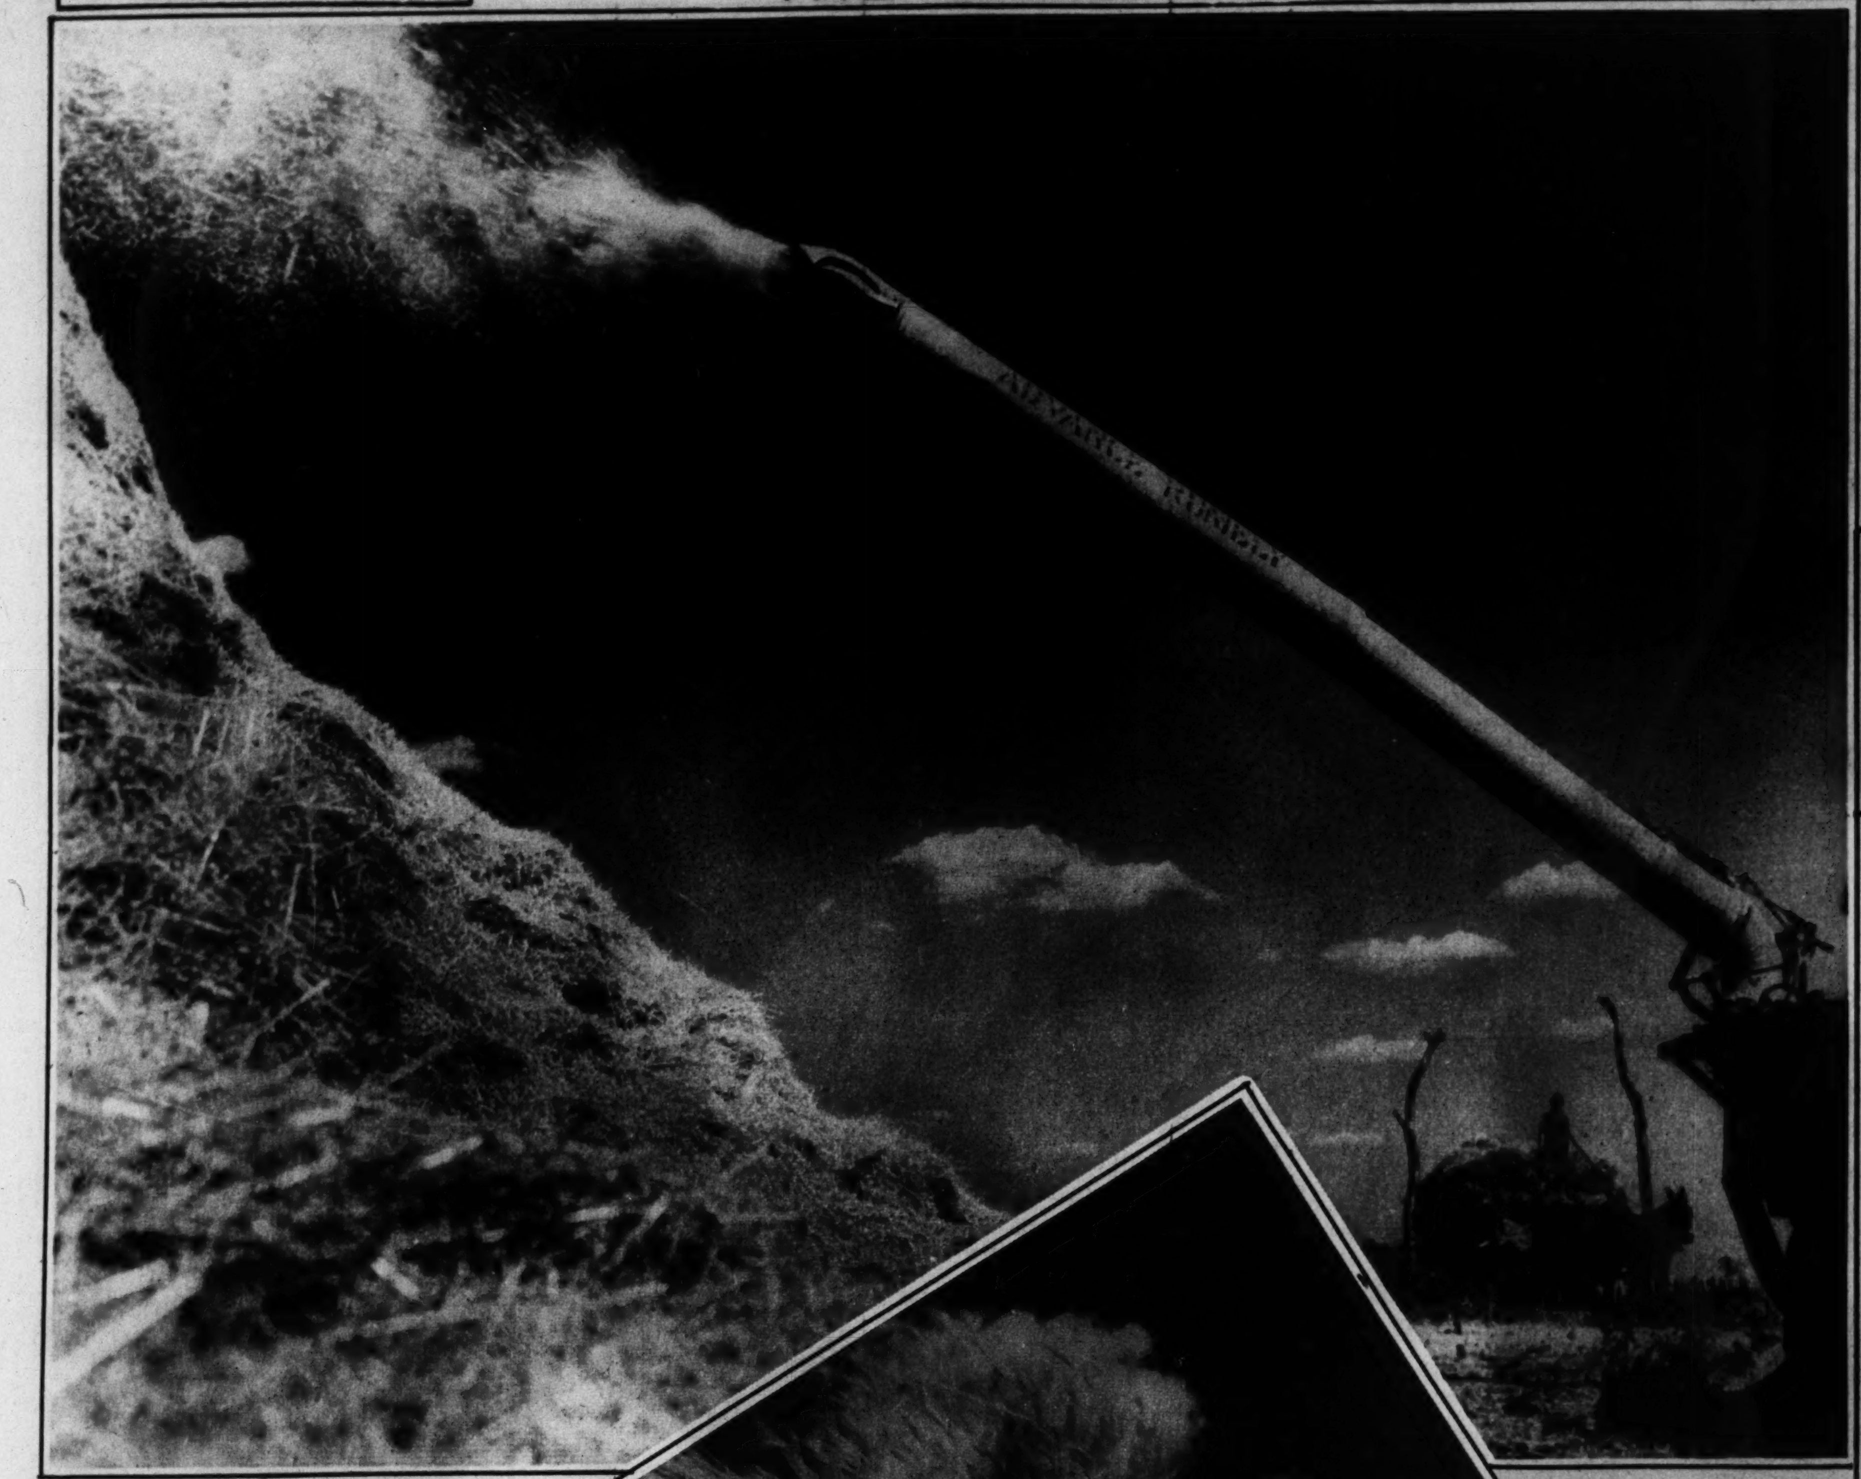
The Staff of Life Whose Supply for the World Is Produced Almost Entirely by Five Countries



Scenes on a farm near Topeka, Kan., which escaped the more severe ravages of the drouth. The above photograph shows the chaff being shot out through the blower.

The golden grain is piled upon the wagon. It is then taken to the thresher. Drouth conditions throughout the world have reduced the world's total crop. Another such year and the shortage will make itself felt especially in such non-producing countries as England and Germany.

SWIFTLY PLYING the waters off the Virginia coast, the Princess Anne symbolizes a new era in shipping. Its modern design and its modern performance forecast the ships of the future. . . . So, too, the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR, gliding across the nation's highways, symbolizes a new era in motoring. Cars of many years from now will follow this striking pattern!

So far ahead of contemporary design is the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR that it will look new season after season. You do not buy a new "model"; you buy a new kind of car which keeps its youthful appearance and its youthful ways.

The LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is the only medium-price car with a V-12 cylinder engine. This engine—designed by Lincoln, built by Lincoln—develops 110 horsepower. Owners report 14 to 18 miles per gallon—in traffic, across country, on back roads. This extraordinary record is due solely to the engine's efficiency and to the car's unique design.

In the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR, body and frame are one. Steel girders are united in a strong, rigid framework. Over this "bridge structure"—on top, sides, bottom—steel paneling is welded. Front and rear-seat passengers ride toward the center—experiencing a new comfort, a new safety.

A motor car is first of all an investment—in safe, comfortable transportation. Why not enjoy now the ownership of the car that will set the standards for many years! The Lincoln Motor Company, builders of Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

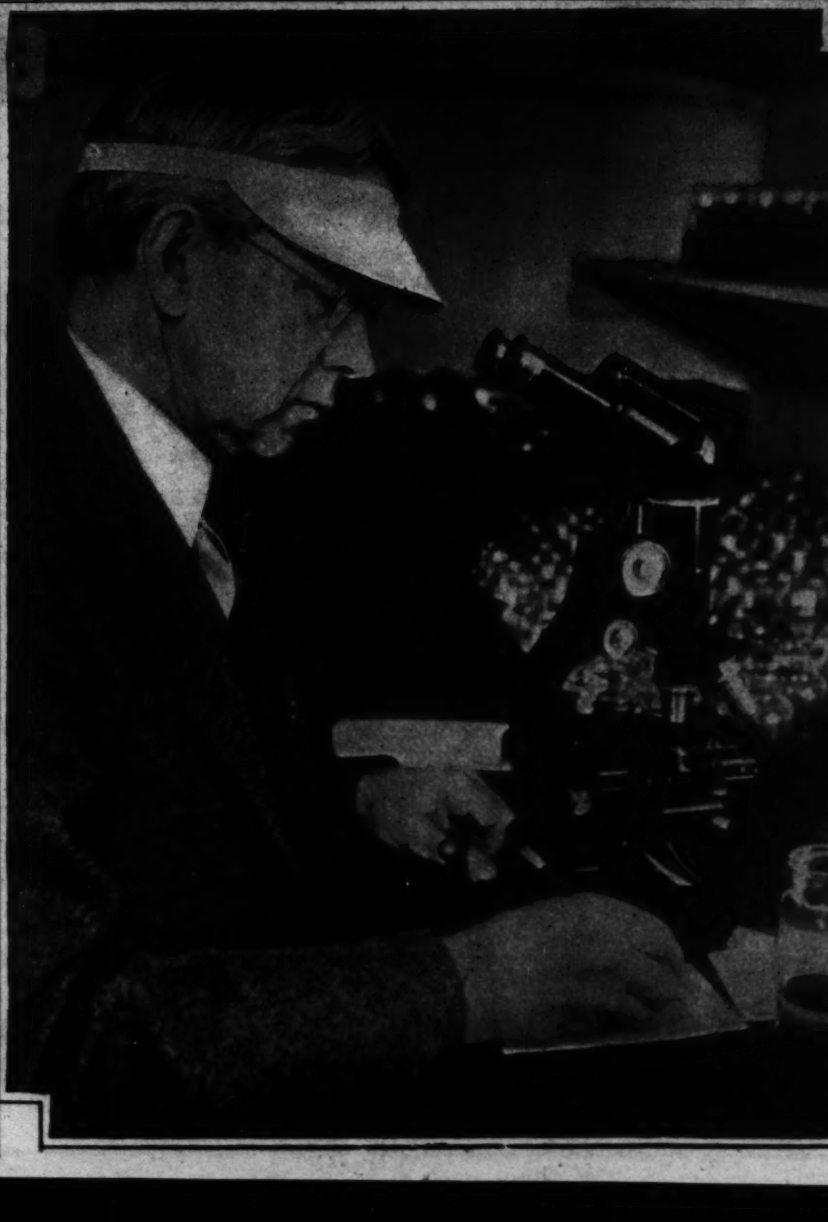
Summoned by the mother's screams the policeman promptly blew into the baby's mouth and the air getting into his lungs brought him back to consciousness.



"EAT LESS—LIVE LONGER"—This is the conclusion that would seem to be in order after the experiments of Professor Arthur M. Banta of Brown University. ARMY in MUFTI

Random Scenes From the Spanish Revolution, as Armed Citizens Struggled to Stave Off Military Dictatorship.

On With the Dance: Despite the fierce heat of civil warfare, Spanish feet still tingle and castinets can be heard above the rumble of heavy artillery. This scene was photographed in Seville, at the time a rebel stronghold.

Even Women and Children: Here a young girl leads a band of boisterous striplings through Madrid streets.

Ballots or Bullets?—When Army Fascists declared war on the Government, the Government passed out arms to private citizens in hopes an armed majority could ratify its vote. In Barcelona the result was an overwhelming victory for the popular front.

Snipers: Much of the action in the cities consisted in sharpshooting from roofs and balconies and answering fire from machine guns mounted on motor cars. Here women and girls have lined up with men on the roof of a Madrid tenement. No life was safe in the streets.

Basques Take a Hand: A small party of peasants enlisted under the rebels at Burgos, carrying the banner of the Virgin of Navarre.

TALK ABOUT QUEER FISH, ALF, LET ME TELL YOU OF SOME I'VE ACTUALLY SEEN IN VARIOUS PARTS OF THE WORLD!
HM-M- THERE HE GOES!
THE FALSE-FACE FISH OF LAKE SAKOO WHEN CAUGHT, LIBERATES ITSELF BY SLIPPING OUT OF ITS HOOKED FALSE-FACE
THE BASKET-BALL FISH OF TAPOLA SEA ARE CAUGHT WITH BASKET-BALL CAGE NETS, WHEN THEY BOUNCE UP OUT OF THE WATER
THE MOUSE-FISH OF THE CHINA SEA ARE CAUGHT BY BAITED TRAPS WHEN THEY EMERGE THRU THE HOLE IN A WOOD FLOAT
THE LASSO-FISH OF LAKE HAGOMATOK CATCHES MARINE PREY WITH ITS LARIAT TAIL
THE NET-FISH OF BORNEO TRAPS SMALLER FISH IN A NET THAT IS PART OF ITS ANATOMY
ONE OF THE ODDEST FISH, IS THE MIRROR-FISH OF TASONIA WHICH ATTRACTS OTHER FISH BY A MIRROR-LIKE REFLECTING DISK ATTACHED TO ITS SPINE
YOU EXPECT ME TO BELIEVE THOSE WHOPPERS, JUDGE?
WHY, ALF,— YOU PAIN ME, DOUBTING MY VERACITY!— I WAS BRINGING THEM ALL BACK TO DONATE TO AN AQUARIUM, BUT THE BOAT SANK!— I WAS RESCUED AFTER THREE DAYS OF CLINGING TO A BOX OF FLOATING SOAP!

WELL, WHEN THE PHANTOM SWORDSMAN STUCK HIS SWORD INTO THE GROUND AND STARTED HIS LECTURE ON "WAR STRATEGY," I FELT SURE WE HAD HIM —
HE SAT IN THE CENTER OF US AND WE KEPT EDGING TOWARD HIM-THEN HE DROPPED HIS EYES FOR A SECOND AND WE JUMPED ON HIM!
AND THAT'S WHERE COACH BRANT, SHOTGUN SHELDON AND THE OTHERS CAME TO THE RESCUE IN THE NICK OF TIME EH?
LADIES AND GENTLEMEN— YOU HAVE JUST HEARD DIRECT FROM COACH NED BRANT'S SUMMER CAMP, WHERE 30 YOUNG BOYS CAPTURED A MANIAC CARRYING A HUGE SWORD
HOW DO YOU SUPPOSE THAT PHANTOM KEPT HIMSELF ALIVE DURING THOSE WEEKS IN THE WOODS?
EASY! I COULD DO IT MYSELF!
SO COULD I— A CINCH!
SAY-IF EITHER OF YOU BIRDS EVER GOT MORE THAN 40 FEET FROM THE NEAREST EIGHT-COURSE DINNER, YOU'D YELL FOR HELP!
WHY, I'LL BET YOU TWO BIRDS CAN'T LIVE A WEEK IN THE WOODS WITHOUT SUPPLIES AND WEAPONS-
IT'S A BET! WHEN DO WE START?
RIGHT NOW! AND ONE PAIR OF SHORTS IS ALL THE CLOTHING EACH CAN TAKE SHOTGUN AND I WILL TAKE YOU TO A REMOTE PART OF THE WOODS!
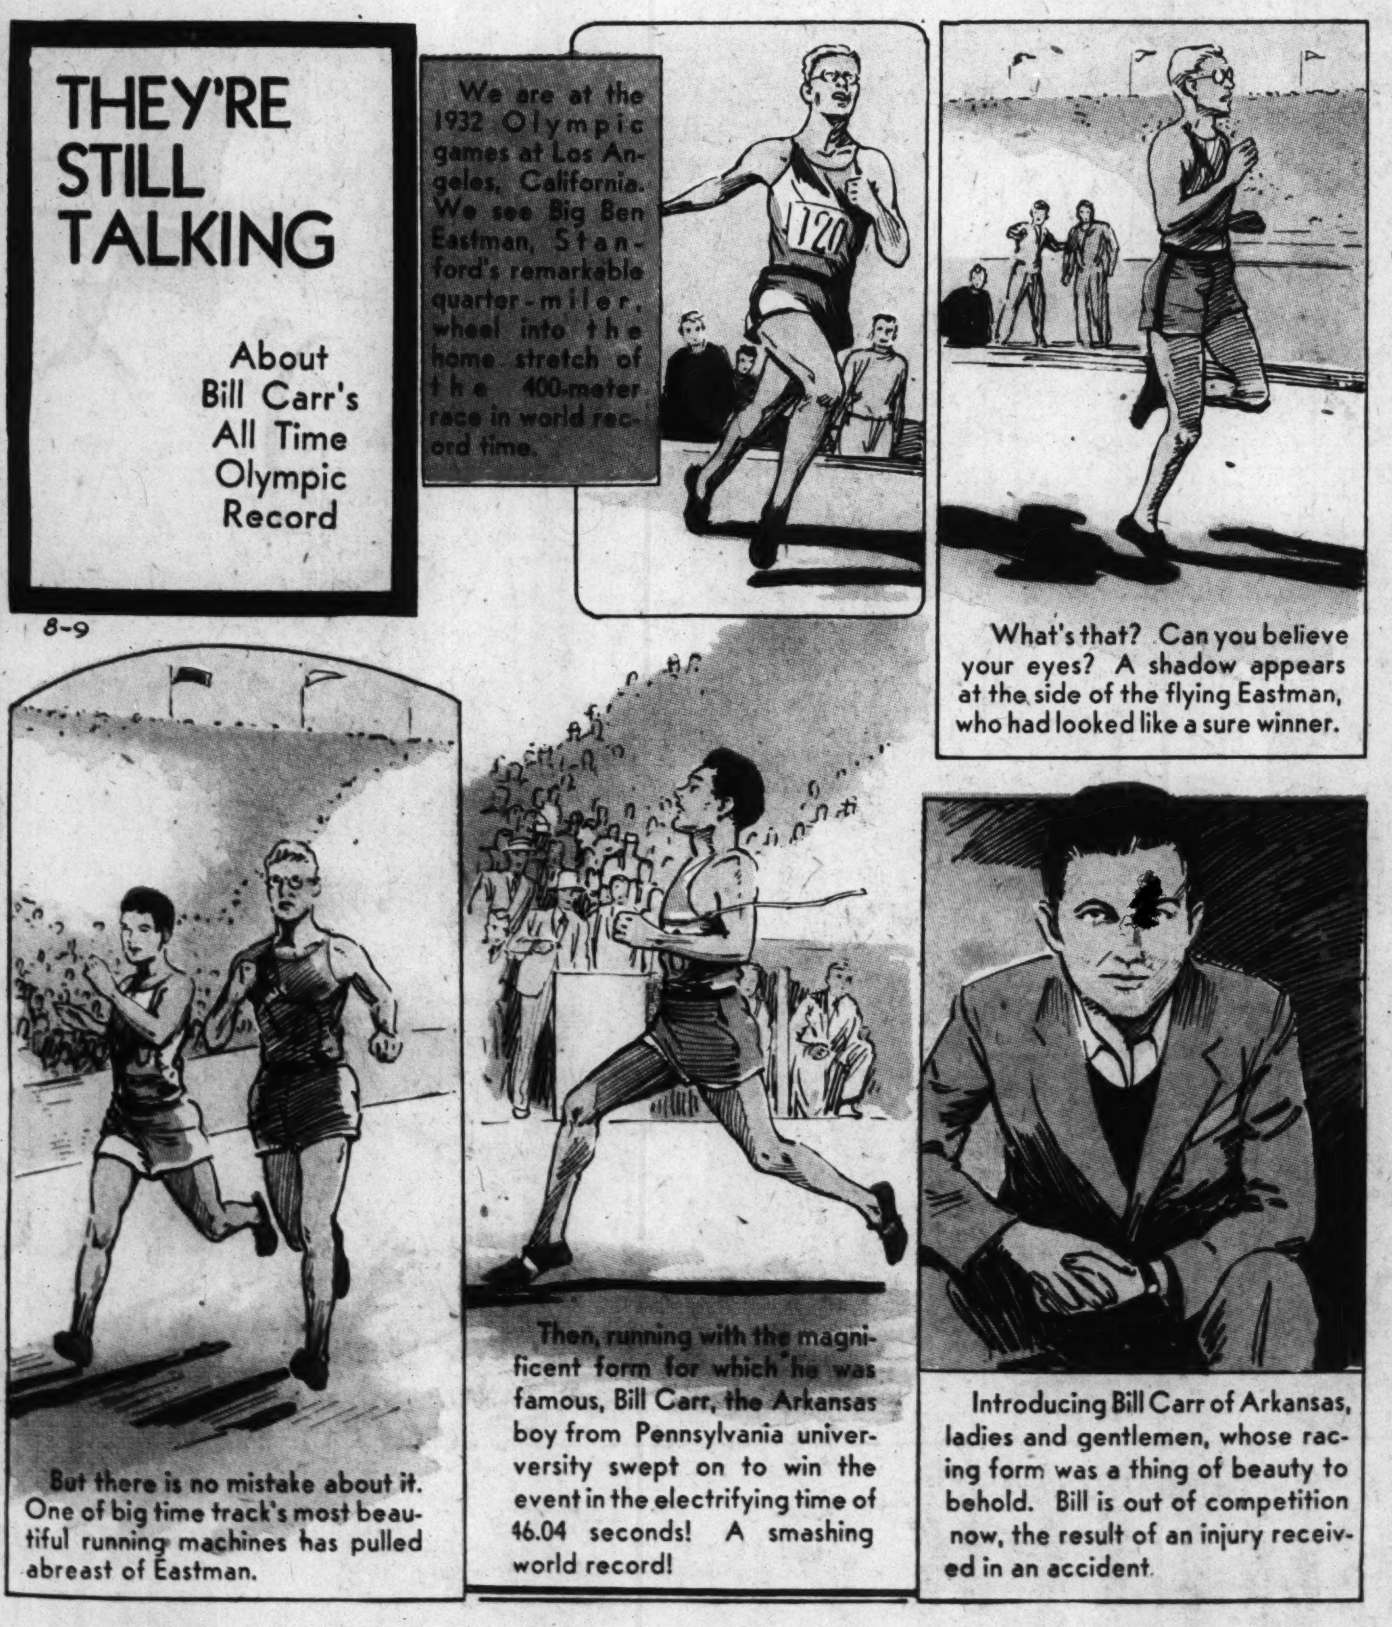
NO HOOKING RIDES INTO TOWN EITHER!
FINE CHANCE THEY'D HAVE GETTING A RIDE-DRESSED LIKE THAT!
B. W. DEPEW
WELL- HERE WE ARE!
YOU GO SINCE 1904 WITHOUT AN IDEA OF ANY KIND, AND THEN YOU GET ONE LIKE THIS!
Oh, boy! Are we going to enjoy this? —And will the mosquitoes have a gay time!!



THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About Bill Carr's All Time Olympic Record

We are at the 1932 Olympic games at Los Angeles, California. We see Big Ben Eastman, Stanford's remarkable quarter-miler, wheel into the home stretch of the 400-meter race in world record time.

What's that? Can you believe your eyes? A shadow appears at the side of the flying Eastman, who had looked like a sure winner.

But there is no mistake about it. One of big time track's most beautiful running machines has pulled abreast of Eastman.

Then, running with the magnificent form for which he was famous, Bill Carr, the Arkansas boy from Pennsylvania university swept on to win the event in the electrifying time of 46.04 seconds! A smashing world record!

Introducing Bill Carr of Arkansas, ladies and gentlemen, whose racing form was a thing of beauty to behold. Bill is out of competition now, the result of an injury received in an accident.

Ralph H. Moore, flight supe

fore taking off for Chicago, that intended to fly on top of the o

if this was impossible, would notify the company by radio.

Clark Questions Witnesses.

United States Senator Bennett

Moore said he walked arou
the plane, examined its exter

the loads of mail, baggage, p

actual load being 1360 poun

the weight of the empty plane w
5 pounds.

Moore said he watched the pla
